HEAD DRAWING 3 PER CENT SALES TAX BILL

5-Point 'Recovery' Tax Plan Offered by Morgenthau

NEW DEAL WILLING TO REPEAL PROFIT LEVY, HE DECLARES

Administration Has Finally Agreed To G. O. P. Cure for Business Ills, Claim of Republicans.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—A broad outline for tax revision legislation to remove "business irritants" and promote a "lasting recovery" was laid before congress today by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

Without making specific recommendations for new tax schedules, the treasury chief suggested to the house ways and means committee that it consider a five-point program and indicated the administration was willing to:

1—Reduce some of the higher individual income surtax rates if pending legislation is passed to prohibit future issuance of tax-exempt securities.

Repeal Profits Tax.

2—Repeal the remaining 2 1-2 per cent undistributed profits tax.

3—Liberalize the present capital stock tax and the related excess profits levy.

4—Provide for the carry-over of net annual business losses to be deducted from business profits of future years.

Continue Studies.

5—Continue co-operative studies with a view to legislation at the next session, to change the present law limiting to $2,000 the excess of corporate capital losses over capital gains that may be deducted from ordinary income.

Republicans on the committee promptly asserted Morgenthau had "admitted" the Republican position on the tax question was correct. In a statement which he said spoke for the 10 minority members of the committee, Representative Treadway, Republican, Massachusetts, said, "By continually pointing out to the country the dangers of the administration's tax policies we have finally forced this admission and an agreement to remedy the situation partially. . ."

Want Complete Revision.

He continued that the Republicans on the committee wanted to "overhaul the entire tax structure" and added:

"Whether or not relief for business from these oppressions and dangers has been too long delayed for a quick recuperation remains to be seen. It is encouraging, however, that the administration even thus tardily has seen, in part at least, the error of its ways and is moving to follow the advice of the Republicans."

F. D. R. Approves Plan.

Morgenthau told the committee that President Roosevelt approved of his entire statement. In addition to outlining a basis for changes in the federal tax structure, the treasury secretary also proposed creation of a small temporary national commission to study "over-lapping and competing taxes" of federal, state and municipal governments and propose a solution without delay.

He also suggested that congress set up a joint committee on fiscal policy comprised of the senate and house committees on appropriations and taxation to consider simultaneously each year "what the nation needs" and "what the nation can afford."

Morgenthau was the only wit-

Next Imperial Wizard?

JOEL L. BASKIN.

BASKIN IS SLATED NEXT KLAN WIZARD

Joel L. Baskin, of Richmond, Va., is slated to be the new imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan if the effort to overthrow the present wizard, Dr. Hiram W. Evans, is successful at next month's biennial klan conference, it was learned yesterday.

Baskin at present is grand dragon of the Klan realm including Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia. He has long been recognized as a leader of the anti-Evans forces within the Klan of which he has been a member for more than 20 years.

Georgians for Baskin.

Georgia's delegates to the conference, it is understood, have been instructed to vote for Baskin. The decision to cast the state's vote against Dr. Evans was reached at a secret caucus of the state Klan leaders here last week. Dr. Sam Green, Georgia grand dragon, will head the state's delegation to the conference.

The biennial conference which is scheduled for Atlanta June 9, 10 and 11, is the first major gathering of the Klan in nearly 10 years.

It could not be learned yesterday whether Dr. Evans would seek re-election as imperial wizard or support another candidate against Baskin. The present wizard still insists that a harmonious session is expected and has said that if there are to be any difficulties he has not been informed of them. In some quarters it was reported that should Evans decline to enter a contest with Baskin for Klan control he might support another candidate, probably James E. Colescott, of Atlanta.

Baskin Favored To Win.

Should Baskin enter the conference with the combined delegates of the District of Columbia and the three states of his realm, plus those from Georgia and one or two more states, it is believed that his election would be assured.

Baskin was in charge of the Washington offices of the Klan when the hooded organization was at its peak. He first broke with Wizard Evans when the present

PLAN TO REVISE NEUTRALITY ACT OFFERED BY HULL

Proposal 'To Help Keep Country Out of War' Calls for Repeal of Arms Embargo Section.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—Secretary Hull, asking first of all for repeal of the present law's provision for an embargo on shipment of arms to belligerents, submitted to congress tonight an administration program for revision of the neutrality act.

In letters to the chairmen of the senate and house foreign relations committees, Mr. Hull outlined a six-point proposal for legislation which he said would "help to keep this country out of war."

He suggested enactment or re-enactment of these provisions:

1. "To prohibit American ships irrespective of what they may be carrying from entering combat areas.

Would Restrict Travel.

2. "To restrict travel by American citizens in combat areas.

3. "To provide that the export of goods destined for belligerents shall be preceded by transfer of title to the foreign purchaser.

4. "To continue the existing legislation respecting loans and credits to nations at war.

5. "To regulate the solicitation and collection in this country of funds for belligerents.

6. "To continue the National Munitions Control Board and the system of arms export and import licenses."

Viewed as Peace Aid.

Provisions along these lines, the secretary of state wrote Chairman Pittman, Democrat, Nevada, of the senate committee, and acting Chairman Bloom, Democrat, New York, of the house group, "would make easier our twofold task of keeping this country at peace and avoiding imposition of unnecessary and abnormal burdens upon our citizens."

Stamped with administration indorsement, the proposals were submitted after a series of recent conferences with Hull by the Democratic members of both committees. They were understood to have Mr. Roosevelt's approval.

Bill Is Drafted.

Coincident with Hull's statement, Bloom disclosed that his committee has a draft of a bill embodying the secretary's ideas on the subject and would give it early consideration.

"We will start hearings next Wednesday or Thursday," he said.

Under the present neutrality law, the President must declare an embargo against shipments of arms to belligerents as soon as he recognizes that a state of war exists.

Congressional advocates of repealing this section have argued that it would be "unneutral" for the United States, in event of war in Europe, to deny Great Britain and France freedom to buy arms here to defend themselves against heavily armed Germany and Italy.

Hull suggested that there was no sound basis for differentiating between arms and raw materials necessary to a country engaged in war.

"A nation at war," he said, "is no less anxious to keep cotton or

Officers Raid Beverly Gardens, Find Dice Tables, Roulette Wheel

Sheriff J. P. Mason, of Gwinnett county, and 24 deputies last night raided the Beverly Gardens, on the premises formerly occupied by the Embassy Club, on the new Buford highway.

"I'll know more about it in the morning," Sheriff Mason told a Constitution reporter. A short time later, the reporter was escorted from the place, a rambling frame structure.

A few minutes previously, Sheriff Mason stood by calmly as Howard Fike, Atlanta Journal reporter, was forcibly ejected from the building by a man, who was apparently a "bouncer."

More than 450 persons were in the place when the raid occurred. There was an unverified report that the lights in the establishment went out about an hour before the raid. Sheriff Mason refused to divulge if any arrests had been made.

Two state troopers accompanied the sheriff and his deputies. The sheriff said he found six dice tables, a roulette wheel, 15 slot machines, a long bar, with three opened cases of liquor on it, in the place.

The establishment is a well-known night spot, patronized mainly by Atlantans. The patrons were allowed to leave, it was reported.

Oglethorpe Officials Greet 9 Men University Will Honor With Degrees

BRITAIN MAY CALL PARLEY OF WORLD

Chamberlain Looks Beyond Completion of Peace Front Against Axis

LONDON, May 27.—(AP)—Neville Chamberlain, at the end of two critical and policy-changing years as prime minister, was reported tonight to be looking beyond completion of what he terms "a peace front against aggression" to a possible world conference in a further attempt to reach a settlement with the Rome-Berlin axis without war.

He left Thursday to spend the Whitsun (a religious) holiday, in the country confident of an early agreement with Soviet Russia on a mutual aid pact to supply the most vital missing link in the British-French front system which replaced his "appeasement" policy.

Cares Follow Him.

But the cares of office followed him, in the forefront of which was believed the question of how to make a new, peaceful approach to Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini once he has massed equal or superior strength on his side.

Some observers believed he was leaning toward the idea of summoning a conference of the nations of the world where each would be invited to submit any grievances for discussion.

Weakness in Plan Cited.

Advocates of such a plan argued that refusal by Hitler and Mussolini to be represented or to define their demands for "living space" would weaken the belief of their own people in the charges of "encirclement" against the British-French front and therefore might bring their participation.

Chamberlain himself in recent speeches has indicated his aims go far beyond the immediate policy of pacts and pledges.

Reich Woos Friends.

Meanwhile Nazi Germany has embarked on a policy of wooing old and new friends with lavish entertainment while the issue with Poland over the Free City of Danzig stays just on the edge of the shelf.

Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and his entourage were shown hospitality this week on their visit in Berlin for signing the German-Italian military alliance that still is the talk of the town.

Now finishing touches are being

Oglethorpe Commencement Opens as Dignitaries Arrive

Dr. Jacobs and Judge Watkins Welcome Nine Outstanding Leaders in Various Fields Who Will Receive Honorary Degrees Tonight.

By CARY WILMER.

Oglethorpe's "silver anniversary" commencement program opened yesterday with a luncheon for three outstanding Georgians and six other national and international leaders in the fields of education, religion and business who will receive honorary degrees at baccalaureate services at the Erlanger theater tonight.

Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, university president, and Judge Edgar Watkins, head of the board of directors, extended official welcome to the distinguished group at a meeting at the Biltmore hotel and both described the occasion as the highlight of the institution's 25-year history.

The honor guests, who are to receive their honorary doctorates tonight, were:

Rufus W. Oakey, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of Milledgeville, Ga., doctor of divinity.

Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machines Corporation and of the International Chamber of Commerce, doctor of commercial science.

Charles R. Hook, president of the American Rolling Mills Company, doctor of commercial science.

JAMES L. KEY LIES DANGEROUSLY ILL

Former Mayor James L. Key, nearing 74, lay at the point of death late yesterday at St. Joseph's infirmary, his personal physician, Dr. Frank Eskridge, said.

Mr. Key developed static pneumonia Friday and was placed under an oxygen tent, but the doctor said there was little hope he would live.

Long time center of stormy politics in Atlanta, Mr. Key became a national figure in 1931 by openly advocating the repeal of prohibition. He served the city as mayor for 10 years—longer than any other man. He has lived in retirement since William B. Hartsfield took office January 1, 1937.

WILL HONOR FARLEY.

CONWAY, Ark., May 27.—(AP)—Postmaster General James A. Farley will be awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree by Hendrix College when he comes here June 4 to deliver the commencement address to the 1939 graduating class.

DIES COMMITTEE TO HEAR MOSELEY NEXT WEDNESDAY

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—Representative Dies' house committee investigating un-American activities announced today Major General George Van Horn Moseley, retired, would testify Wednesday regarding statements of earlier committee witnesses linking him to a campaign against "Jewish Communism."

Several witnesses heard by the committee earlier this week indicated they wanted Moseley to lead the campaign to unite numerous groups into a national organization to fight what was described as a "Jewish-Communist" plot to overthrow the government.

Moseley has notified the committee he would accept its subpoena.

In Atlanta, his home, Moseley said yesterday he had completed a statement for the committee. "It is extremely interesting," he said, "I am quite sure the Dies committee do not want it." About the committee inquiry he declared "the whole thing smells too much like Russia."

COCA-COLA PLANT TO COST $250,000

By PRESS HUDDLESTON.

The Atlanta Coca-Cola Bottling Company has purchased an entire city block and will soon begin the erection of one of the largest and most modern bottling plants in the south, if not the largest in the entire country.

The block is bounded by Spring, Sixth, Williams and Eighth streets. With a modern two-story and basement reinforced concrete and structural steel building, fronting 225 feet on Spring street and extending back 200 feet on Sixth street, the cost of ground and building, it is estimated, will approximate more than a quarter of a million dollars. This will be one of the largest developments noted in the city for some time.

Move All Operations.

The bottling plant and offices of the company are now at 560 Edgewood avenue, from which all operations will be removed to the new Spring street plant when it is completed, perhaps in the course of the next six to eight months.

The property was purchased from the Peters Land Company through Draper-Owens Company, realtors, negotiations being handled by Harry Paschall Jr.

Landscaped Grounds.

L. F. Montgomery, secretary-treasurer of the bottling company, announced the block will be beautifully landscaped and ornamented.

"After a careful survey of the city," Montgomery said, "we decided upon this location as one on which our office building and plant will receive proper recognition and, we believe, the plaudits of the citizens of Atlanta. Our business has grown to such an extent, through the splendid co-operation of our dealers and many friends, an enlargement of our plant was absolutely necessary.

"The buildings will be set back from all property lines at least 25 feet, which space will be beautifully and suitably landscaped. The beautiful trees now on the northern end of this block will be retained as a part of the landscaping scheme. The building will be two stories and basement and all trucks will be serviced in the basement.

"Executive and administrative

SIGNATURES OF 103 HOUSE MEMBERS WILL BE SOUGHT

State Legislators Meet This Week at Brunswick; Economy Probers To Make Their Report.

By L. A. FARRELL.

A three per cent general sales tax bill to provide funds for common schools, public welfare program and county governments will be presented to members of the house of representatives meeting at Brunswick this week and, if enough signers are obtained, an almost immediate special session of the legislature will be called to enact it.

An effort will be made to obtain 103 signers to the house bill. This would insure its passage by the house.

The measure is being drawn in the office of Revenue Commissioner T. Grady Head and will be submitted to house members at Brunswick by Representatives Frank Gross, of Stephens county, house floor leader; Henderson Lanham, of Floyd county, chairman of the ways and means committee, and L. A. Whipple, of Bleckley county, spokesman for the school bloc in the lower house.

12-15 Million Yield Seen.

It is estimated that a 3 per cent sales tax would yield between 12 and 13 millions of dollars annually. No other taxes are specifically planned to be abandoned if the sales levy is made, inasmuch as part of the proceeds of the new tax would be used to reimburse counties for losses under the homestead exemption statute.

Members of the house and senate will gather at Brunswick next week end as the guests of the city of Brunswick, the Board of Trade and the Glynn county commission. It is to be an informal meeting but virtually 100 per cent attendance of both houses is expected.

Economy Report.

Chairman Wilmer D. Lanier, of the house economy committee, has announced that his group's report will be made public Wednesday or Thursday and full texts will be mailed to all members of both houses immediately. These should be available to members before the week end.

Governor Rivers had made known his desire for an early extra session but at the same time

JOHN L. TYE JR. NAMED PRESIDENT OF GEORGIA BAR

Association Closes Convention, Hears Woman Student Plead for Educational Requirements.

John L. Tye Jr., of Atlanta, 46-year-old railway attorney, was elected president of the Georgia Bar Association at the close of the annual convention yesterday. He succeeds Joseph B. Cumming, of Augusta.

Omar W. Franklin, of Valdosta, was elected vice president to succeed E. Kontz Bennett, of Waycross, and John B. Harris, of Macon, was re-elected secretary.

The convention named Charles J. Bloch, of Macon, treasurer, and Arthur G. Powell, of Atlanta, to the house of delegates of the American Bar Association.

Next year's meeting place will be chosen later by the board of governors.

Woman Student Speaks.

A young woman law student suggested at yesterday's meeting modern conditions demand that Georgia lay down some educational requirements for its lawyers.

She was Miss Mary Emma Benton, student of the Mercer University Law school. She pointed out that Georgia now shares with Arkansas alone the position of not requiring any educational qualifications for admission to the bar.

"Strangely enough," she said, "Georgia has set up training qualifications for architects, chiropractors, dentists, pharmacists, horse-doctors and even embalmers—but none for the lawyer."

If such a situation was ever tolerable, Miss Benton held it is not now, asserting:

Task of Profession.

"What used to be a mere legal matter has now become social and economic as well. A case must be decided upon the court's conception of a legal proposition as affected by social and economic facts present in such case. Hence, a premium is put upon the liberally educated lawyers.

"The task of the legal profession and of this association as its leader is to show to the powers that be the need for a liberal education before admission to practice."

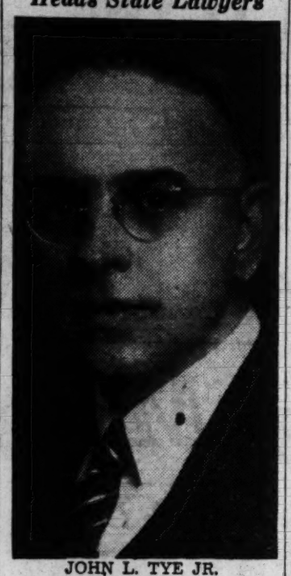

Another speaker on the last day's program of the three-day convention, attended by approximately 750 of the state's 2,800 lawyers, was Miles W. Lewis, veteran Greensboro attorney.

Cites Public Opinion.

In his address Lewis said a potent factor in the verdict of the court, especially in rural counties, was public opinion. He said that while public opinion essentially was honest it may account for verdicts contrary to the "great preponderance of the evidence on the controlling issues."

His conclusion was that the attorney who is always respectful of the court, fosters this attitude in the community and attains for himself a reputation for honesty and fairness "need have no serious fear of public opinion."

H. C. ETHERIDGE, 66, DIES; RITES TODAY

Cousin of Judge and Brother-in-Law of Attorney Hugh Howell.

H. C. Etheridge, 66, cousin of Judge Paul S. Etheridge Sr. and brother-in-law of Hugh Howell, attorney, died yesterday morning at his residence, 175 Goodwin street, S. W., after a long illness.

Mr. Etheridge was a native of Putnam county but had lived here for 37 years. He was formerly assistant manager of the Ford Motor Company, and later was employed as an auditor with the Western Union Telegraph Company. He resigned about 10 years ago because of ill health.

Besides his cousin and brother-in-law he is survived by his wife; another cousin, Harry Etheridge, of Atlanta, and a sister-in-law, Mrs. John A. Etheridge, of Mason.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Spring Hill. Burial will be in Hollywood cemetery under the direction of H. M. Patterson & Son.

POLICE REPULSE DETROIT STRIKERS

DETROIT, May 27.—(AP)—The CIO United Automobile Workers, whose strike at the Briggs Manufacturing Company plants has made approximately 70,000 workers idle, were repulsed in an attempt to march in picket formation at Briggs baseball stadium today, a detail of mounted police dispersing them and arresting 16 persons.

There were several skirmishes between three score policemen and the pickets, whose numbers they estmiated at 3,000, but no one was injured as the mounted patrolmen drove the demonstrators out of Trumbull avenue, clearing the entrances to the stadium. Four women and 12 men were arrested.

Some of the pickets discarded their union insignia after the mass retreat, returned in the guise of bona fide baseball patrons and caused some confusion at the box offices by loud wrangling over ticket prices.

The disturbance had subsided well before game time, and 15,000 or more fans were in the park when the first game of a double-header between the Tigers and the St. Louis Browns began.

OUTDOOR LAUNDRY JAILS GEORGIAN

National Capitol Lawn is Wrong Place.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—After coming here two weeks ago "to see the place," Elijah Head, who said he was a textile worker of Augusta, Ga., felt the need of personal launderings so took advantage of one of the capitol's elaborate lawn sprinkling systems to wash his clothes.

He made a mistake, however, when he improvised a clothesline between two stately trees hard by the imposing Grant memorial. Sergeant Vernon Deuse, watchful park policeman, espied Head when he was about to hang out his undershirt. The copper assisted the Georgian in removing shirts, pants and underwear from the line and then escorted him to the first precinct police station, where Elijah was held for violation of park regulations.

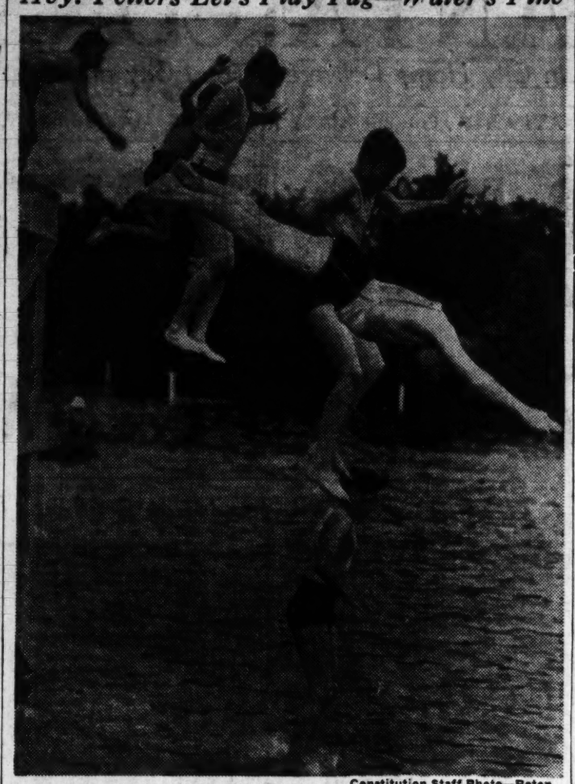

The Augusta textile worker said he had been the "guest" of a local mission, but that while mission authorities would let him take all the baths he wanted, they refused to let him do his own laundry.

NEUTRALITY PLAN OFFERED BY HULL

petroleum, or, indeed, any useful product, from reaching an enemy nation that it is to keep guns nad airplanes from reaching the enemy's armed forces.

"I doubt whether we can help ourselves to keep out of war by an attempt on our part to distinguish between categories of exports. Yet a complete embargo upon all exports would obviously be ruinous to our economic life.

"It therefore seems clear that we should have no general and automatic embargo inflexibly and rigidly imposed on any class or group of exports."

President Roosevelt, Hull noted, observed when signing the 1935 neutrality act, that the arms embargo provisions required "further and more complete consideration."

Criticized Act.

The President said then that "the flexible provisions might drag us into war instead of keeping us out."

Mr. Roosevelt likewise criticized the neutrality act in his annual message to congress last January. He has refrained from a formal finding that China and Japan are at war, thus avoiding imposition of a ban on arms shipments to either nation.

Bloom's disclosure that his committee already has a draft of a bill to carry out the secretary's proposals gave added credence to reports that the administration would seek first consideration of neutrality legislation in the house.

Greater opposition to changes along the line Hull suggested has been manifested in the senate. Several measures are pending there, however, which embody some of the secretary's recommendations.

Hull proposed no ban on shipment of goods to belligerents in American vessels, but suggested that the ships be prohibited from entering danger zones.

Six in One Family Graduate This Year

MANCHESTER, Ga., May 27. Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Pitchford, of Pleasant Hill community, will have six children to complete courses of study this year.

They are as follows: Mary Frances and Zoldean, from grammar school; Ralph and Fletcher, from Woodland High school; Willie, a course in the navy, at Fort Bliss, Texas, and Clyde, from Abraham Baldwin College, in Tifton.

Anti-Evans leaders are reported in revolt against the present officials of the Klan because of Evans' refusal to lead an anti-Semitic, anti-Catholic campaign, which, it is said, will get under way if Evans is ousted at next month's meeting.

There's No Frills, Experimenting In Building New Home Projects

Officials Are Determined To Use Tried and Tested Methods, Provide Neat, Modern Housing at the Lowest Cost Possible.

Atlanta is slum clearing and housing minded. Experience of past projects has taught the civic supporters of this program much which they will use to advantage in their new plans. In two articles, of which this is the second, Luke Greene explains what is taking place in the program of the Atlanta Housing Authority and gives a clear picture of the new Atlanta—one which may eventually be without slums.

By LUKE GREENE.

Frills and fancy trimmings will be sacrificed for economy in construction of Atlanta's new housing projects for low-income groups.

Officials of the housing authority are free to tell you they are not planning to build any palaces or dream castles. The dwellings will be plain, but, neat, modern and well-adapted to the families they are designed to house.

No Experimenting.

There will be no experimentation in construction. No untried methods or materials will be used. The cost will be trimmed by economical use of materials and methods that have been tried and proved.

Individual dwelling units — of which there will be approximately 600 in every project—will vary in size. They will range from two to five and one-half rooms. The dwellings will accommodate as many as four, five, six and—with a tight squeeze—seven persons.

The units will rent for an average of about $2.75 per room. Heat, electricity, refrigeration and gas, of course, will come extra.

Limited by Incomes.

There will be a limit on the income of the tenants. For example, a man with a wife and three children must not make more than $92 a month if he is to live in one of the dwellings. The income should not be more than five times the rent, the housing officials explain. However, a couple might get by in one of the projects on an income as low as $40 per month.

How Laid Out.

The average five and one-half room family dwelling unit in all of the projects—Clark Howell, Henry Grady, Capitol and John Hope homes—will consist of a combination living and dining room, three bedrooms and a kitchen.

One economy feature in the new structures will be colored concrete floors. You might think they would be too cold in the winter for residential use, but housing officials shake their heads and say the floors are both healthful and sanitary and have proved entirely satisfactory elsewhere.

Every tenant will have his own front and back yard which will be maintained by him and his family. This is in direct contrast with Techwood where the grounds are kept by the project. Here again the housing authority will economize by allowing the tenant to assume more responsibility.

But there is also a social advantage to such a plan. It is reasonable to expect that a family charged with the care and beautification of a yard will take more pride in it. There is a tendency for a tenant to feel more independent when he gazes out upon his green lawn dotted with shrubbery and blooming flowers—knowing his responsibility to keep it beautiful.

It is a place where he can relax in the late afternoon without experiencing the fear he is encroaching on somebody else's territory. It is a place where the children can romp and play and grow healthy. It is a place that gives added meaning to any home.

There also will be adequate recreation facilities for each of the projects. The housing authority has made arrangements with the parks department whereby the city will take over seven and one-half acres of land in the first project—this land to be converted into parks. A similiar plan will be worked out for the other projects.

Can Use Ice.

Refrigeration will be optional with the tenants. If they have an old ice box which they think will be more economical for their use, they can move it in with their other furnishings. No electric refrigeration will be forced upon them.

Different types of fuel will be used in the projects. Some will have steam heat while others will employ gas. The fuel will be adapted to the project.

The dwellings will present many other advantages when they are completed. For example, there will be utility rooms where the bicycle, baby carriage and kiddie car may be shoved out of sight.

Everything possible will be done to encourage the low income groups to move out of their present unsightly homes and begin life anew in the smart, up-to-date housing projects.

BANK CLEARINGS GAIN $10,300,000 OVER 1938

Bank clearings for the week ending yesterday were $54,400,000, a gain of $10,300,000 over the same week last year, the Atlanta Clearing House Association has reported.

Yesterday's clearings were $8,000,000. The same total was reported for the corresponding day of 1938.

Traveler Gets Wrong Bag With $35,000 in Jewelry

CHICAGO, Ill., May 27.—(AP)—Joseph L. Gill, municipal court clerk, discovered a strange suitcase in his luggage when he returned home from San Francisco. One of Gill's bags was missing. Just then the telephone rang:

"This is William B. Joyce, New York. I have your bag and I hope you have my suitcase. It has $35,000 worth of jewelry in it."

Gill looked in the bag and returned to the phone:

"Yep, it's here. I'll send it to you."

HEAD IS DRAWING SALES TAX BILL

has indicated that the session will not be called until he has received reasonable assurance that legislation to finance the state program will be enacted. The Governor is known to feel that the call should not be issued until enough members have informed him they are ready to act on finance matters to prevent an impasse such as was reached during the regular session.

To Seek Back Salaries.

Meanwhile, Assistant Superintendent of Schools M. E. Thompson revealed receipt of a letter from Representative Lamar Wiggins, of Dodge county, in which the Dodge member revealed that he plans to introduce a bill at the special session to provide for payment of the past due salaries of the common school teachers.

It has been estimated that it will take an appropriation of $5,400,000 to pay the salaries of the teachers in full. Of course, if such a measure is passed a companion bill, providing the necessary revenue, will have to be adopted before the teachers can get their money. The funds for the teachers already have been appropriated but they are not available. Hence a new special appropriation bill will be necessary and it is this bill that Representative Wiggins plans to sponsor. Attorney General Ellis Arnall has ruled that a special appropriation to pay the teachers will be necessary if the funds are not available before July 1, which now appears impossible.

Question of Division.

It could not be learned yesterday how the yield from the bill now being drawn in the revenue commissioner's office will be divided but there is expected to be considerable debate in the house over this provision, regardless of how it is presented. Some sales tax advocates favor an equal three-way split among the agencies needing funds the most but there are some who plan to ask for an unequal division in order to assure more for the schools.

Senator V. C. Daves, of Vienna, on a visit to Atlanta Friday said he favored a 3 per cent sales tax and an equal division of the revenue and added that he believed the senate was ready to pass such a bill.

It is known that Governor Rivers, who has the regular session vote on the general sales tax available for his study, is adding to this list the names of house members who have since informed him of a change in their attitude and that while he is not ready to issue the call on 103 commitments, he is expected to do so as soon as a few more than that number are received.

Sales Tax on Top.

The Governor has given no indication of the commitments which have been volunteered to him on a tax bill but it is understood that between 12 and 15 of the estimated 30 votes which the bill failed to get during the regular session have come forward.

Although the chief executive has never given an indication that he favors a general sales tax as against other forms of revenue, assembly leaders apparently have abandoned all other methods and are concentrating on the sales tax, which, although it failed of passage, received more votes than did other revenue measures during the regular session.

Meanwhile, Director Braswell Deen, of the State Department of Public Welfare, announced that only about 33,000 pensioners received checks for their May pensions during the last week. This represents a decrease of about 17,000 on the pension rolls and welfare department heads have made it known that unless more revenue is obtained within the next few weeks, there will have to be a further slash in the rolls as well as a slash in the pension checks, too.

Old People Removed.

Deen said that the reductions from the pension rolls included 15,500 old people, 2,200 children and 281 blind persons.

"It is very distressing to us to have to drop these folks from our pension rolls temporarily," Director Deen said. "However, inasmuch as we are getting only 56 per cent of our appropriation, like other state departments we have no alternative. I hope that those we have dropped will not be off the rolls very long as they are in dire need. We plan to reinstate them all as soon as more pension money becomes available."

The house economy committee has completed its investigation, and its five members are busy making up their report.

To Include Exhibits.

"We plan not only to make available to all members of the house and senate our report but also the large number of exhibits upon which we will base our findings," Representative James V. Carmichael, of Cobb county, vice chairman of the Lanier committee, said yesterday. "We are going to send it to the members at their homes in order that they may have a chance to study it before the special session. We want them all to be familiar with what we have learned before the special session opens."

Whether or not the house committee will report a complete accord on all findings of the group could not be learned. It may be that in some special matters, majority and minority reports will be filed.

The committee has made known that it intends to inform the house just how much money it thinks each state department or agency needs, how much it is getting and how much additional should be provided. It has made no announcement that it plans to suggest how the additional revenue can be obtained, indicating that this matter will be left to the legislature.

A Cram-Proof Exam---Try It!

University of Chicago Draws Up One It Says Requires Clear Thinking and Discrimination.

By the North American Newspaper Alliance.

CHICAGO, May 27.—Ten university professors put their heads together, and, after three months' study, came up with what has been called the most elaborate thinking test ever thought up. Want to try it?

The test, which is designed to be cram-proof and coach-proof, so that the student will get his questions as a complete surprise, and which is made up in such a way that the only possible way out of it is to think, was given by the University of Chicago to 1,407 high school graduates all over the nation. These students, among the smartest in the land, were trying for 34 scholarships offered by the University of Chicago.

Graded Electrically.

The test was so long and there were so many answers required that the papers were graded by an electrical device which could tell whether the answers had been checked in the proper columns.

Professor Ralph Winfred Tyler, chief examiner of the University of Chicago and head of its department of education, who does most of his thinking through a haze of smoke from his ever-present cigar, told the story behind the examination.

"About 30 per cent of the students who come here on scholarships," said Dr. Tyler, a youngish-looking, medium-sized man in his thirties, "come as a result of competitive examinations. These exams are given in 20 centers throughout the country.

Fair to Everybody.

"We noticed that an increasingly large number of successful students—those with the highest scores—were coming from the Chicago area. We figured there must be some method of coaching these students in advance. We wanted to stop this, to make it fair to everybody.

"The exams were so much alike every year that coaching was a fairly simple trick, especially for those who lived right here in Chicago and could get easy access to past exam papers.

"So the scholarship committee wanted an examination that would discourage coaching and one that could be taken in stride, without cramming, by any good high school student. Abilities important in high school and college work were to be the basis of the questions in the paper.

"We think there are two reasons why students don't answer questions correctly. One is that the question is of such an unusual type that the student has never run into it before.

"The other is that the whole idea back of the question is of such a type that clear thinking and fine discrimination are required to solve it."

Dr. Tyler said he thought the fairest test would be one in which, if the student failed, it would be for the second reason, that he couldn't think his way out of it.

Dr. Tyler said "We checked and found that the smartest students in their schools ranked highest in these tests. Some thinking tests have seen the smart students fall low and the low students come out high.

"Our problem of coaching was also solved. The distribution of high schores was almost identical in various parts of the country, so that Chicagoans did not have the edge."

The examination has 290 questions and lasts three hours.

HERE ARE 'SUPER QUESTIONS' DESIGNED TO BE 'COACH-PROOF'

For each of the fellowing words, select the word or phrase, from the five given after it, which corresponds most nearly in meaning:

1. Anhydrous — Without water; without hydrogen; moist, acid-forming oxide; in water solution.
2. Decadent — Ancient, decaying; deceased; ten-year; obscene.
3. Elegiac—Joyfus; loyal; united; laudatory; mournful.
4. Gregarious—Pious; secluded; sociable; talkative; giantness.

Select the best sentence in the following group:

1. You should not give the egg to the baby if hard-boiled.
2. If hard-boiled, you should not give the egg to the baby.
3. You should not give the egg if hard-boiled to the baby.
4. If the egg is hard-boiled, you should not give it to the baby.
5. You should not give the egg to the baby hard-boiled.

Select the alternative to complete this sentence:

The one of the following which contains the greatest amount of heat energy is

1. One gram of steam at 1,000 degrees centigrade.
2. One kilogram of boiling water.
3. Four liters of ice-water at 0 centigrade.
4. An iceberg weighing one ton.

In the following sentences, indicate if the statement is in agreement with present scientific knowledge or principles; or if it neither agrees nor disagrees with present scientific knowledge or if it is outside the realm of science; or if it contradicts scientific knowledge or prnciples:

1. Eating seafood and milk together causes ptomaine poisoning.
2. First cousins should not be allowed to marry each other.
3. Germs may be spread by kissing.
4. If a dominant man marries a meek woman, well over half of their children will be boys.
5. The children of famous men have a better-than-average chance of being famous.
6. The weight of the forehead is a useful indication of mental ability.

The following quotation is followed by the names of five writers. Consider each writer as a possible author of the quotation and indicate if the quotation agrees with ideas which have been expressed by the writer; if the quotation contains an idea not likely to have been treated by the writer; or if the quotation directly contradicts ideas expressed by the writer:

"The reason why so few marriages are happy is because young ladies spend their time in making nets, not in making cages."

1. Louis Pasteur. 2. Oscar Wilde. 3. George Bernard Shaw. 4. Swift. 5. Izaak Walton.

In these statements concerning the development of the United States, indicate if the statement is as true as any statement about the past can be; if it is generally accepted by historians as true, but might be debated; if it is generally accepted by historians as false, but might be debated; if it is certainly false:

1. The Revolutionary War expenses of the colonies were cared for in the main through foreign loans.
2. The Monroe Doctrine was a treaty passed by the senate while Monroe was president.
3. The most rapid industrial development during the period 1820-1860 occurred in the south.
4. When Theodore Roosevelt left the presidency, the position of president was at the highest point of authority it had ever known.
5. The election of Hughes rather than Wilson as president in 1916 would have kept the United States out of the World War.

ATLANTA GIRL WINS LATIN TOURNAMENT

Eleanor Harllee, of Girls' High, Awarded Scholarship and Medal.

Miss Eleanor Harllee, of Girls' High school, has been named winner in the highest division of the Georgia Latin tournament sponsored by the Georgia Classical Association. She will receive a scholarship for one year at one of five colleges in addition to a medal and $10.

Approximately 100 high school students were entered in the tournament. Separate contests were held in the various Georgia congressional districts. Examination papers were sent for grading to two experienced teachers of Latin in New York and announcement of awards was made in accordance with their report.

Schools are listed as Group A and B, according to size. Group A comprises all public schools in which the total enrollment (not enrollment in Latin) is 200 or more, and all private schools on the accredited list of the Southern Association of Colleges, irrespective of enrollment.

Group B comprises all public schools in which the total enrollment is less than 200 and all private schools not on the accredited list of the Southern Association of Colleges.

Winners in the various groups and divisions follow:

FAINT TAPPINGS TELL RESCUERS MAN ALIVE

SHENANDOAH, Pa., May 27.—(AP)—Faint subterranean tappings and later the sound of a voice told rescuers today that Robert Galligan, 38-year-old miner, still lived in the deep mountainside coal hole where a rock slide imprisoned him yesterday morning.

The signals spurred them to new efforts as they tunneled into the side of rugged Locust mountain with a steam shovel, power drills and implements they wielded with feverish haste.

The first tappings were heard 22 hours after the coal hole collapsed with a rumble while Galligan was 75 feet below the surface.

DAVISON'S MY FAIR LADY

THREE IDEAL WARDROBES FOR

"I'm Going—What Clothes Shall I Take?" A dozen times a day we get this query—over the phone, in the mail, in person. Not for all the 900,000 tulips at the fair would we let you go without the right things. Not for the Perisphere on a silver platter would we wave you good-bye without comfortable, low-heeled shoes, a brimmed hat, a cool dress for the Grounds, something dressy for Big City nights. So our Iris Lee (who's been already and KNOWS) has planned three ideal Fair wardrobes. They're practical, packable and priced so reasonably you'll have plenty left over for seeing the sights. What's even more important, they're so brimful of Southern charm that New York can't help but know Mr. James Montgomery Flagg is right—the prettiest girls in the world DO come from Peachtree Street in Atlanta!

'MASTER FARMERS' WILL BE SELECTED

1939 Winners To Be Named Week of August 7-12.

ATHENS, Ga., May 27.—(AP)—The title of "Master Farmer," will be conferred on four more Georgia farmers this year.

The 1939 winners will be announced during farm and home week, scheduled for the University of Georgia College of Agriculture, August 7-12.

The "Master Farmer" movement is sponsored jointly by the Progressive Farmer, Southern Agricultural Extension Service and the College of Agriculture.

Twelve Master Farmers were chosen when the custom was started in 1927, but since 1936 only four are selected annually. 1937 winners were John P. Duncan, Brooks county; J. C. Loughridge, Murray county; J. R. Miller, Worth county, and Martin M. Norman, Hart county.

Heads Exchange Clubs

LUTHER BLOODWORTH.

EXCHANGE CLUBS CONVENE JUNE 4

Luther Bloodworth To Preside Over Conference.

Exchange Clubs throughout Georgia will hold their annual convention at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel June 4, 5 and 6, it was announced by Chess Lagomarsino, convention chairman.

Luther Bloodworth, of Macon, president, will preside over the convention, for which the Atlanta Club will be host. Among feaures of the program will be addresses by J. M. Carmichael, of Marietta, of the Georgia house economy investigating committee, who will discuss "What Becomes of Your Tax Dollar," and J. J. Doran, Atlanta business executive, whose subject will be "The South's Economic Problem No. 1—Freight Rates."

Other program features include a model luncheon Monday at the Biltmore hotel, a barbecue and dance Monday evening at Lakemoore and a "Gay 90" luncheon at the Atlantic Brewery Tuesday.

Many women will accompany their husbands here for the convention, and a program has been arranged for the wives.

TRIAL OF CHRISTMAS SCHEDULED MONDAY

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

VIENNA, Ga., May 27.—Albert Christmas will be tried Monday in Dooly superior court here for the murder of his son, Albert Christmas Jr., on February 11.

Roy B. Friedin and L. F. Beddingfield have been appointed by the court to defend Christmas, while Watts Powell and Allan C. Garden will act for the state.

2 GEORGIANS NAMED PARITY CONFEREES

Russell and Tarver on Six-Member Committee To Consider Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—A powerful six-member conference committee of the senate and house on controversial farm appropriations will include two Georgia champions of federal parity payments.

They are Senator Richard B. Russell, chairman of the senate subcommittee on agricultural appropriations, and Representative Malcolm C. Tarver.

Southern legislators claimed a victory in the appointment of the conferees. At the week-end, they were predicting freely that $225,000,000 would be set up in the bill's final draft for farm parity

A $250,000,000 item for this purpose was voted by the house committee. The house eliminated it. Then the senate committee restored all but $25,000,000, and in that form the bill was passed by the senate.

Representative Tarver declined to discuss his attitude, now that his duty will be to uphold the house's rejection of the parity item. Smiling, he pointed out that the senate group "might be obdurate."

The conferees will begin deliberations next week.

Fred Snite Jr. Leaves 'Iron Lung' To Bathe in Icy Waters at Lourdes

Paralysis Victim Remains in Basin Almost Half an Hour While Pilgrims Outside Chant Special Prayers to the Virgin Mary.

LOURDES, France, May 27.—Fred B. Snite Jr. bathed today at the Grotto of Lourdes which he made a 5,000-mile pilgrimage in his "iron lung" to visit.

Behind the curtains of the three-gabled bathhouse to which the waters of the grotto are piped, the 29-year-old Chicago infantile paralysis victim was lifted from the respiratory cylinder and placed in a seven-by-three-foot basin.

He remained in the cold water almost half an hour, less than half the time he can breathe without artificial aid.

Snite decided suddenly just after noon to bathe in the waters from the grotto where the Roman Catholic world believes the Virgin Mary revealed herself in 1858 to Bernadette Soubirous, a peasant girl.

While pilgrims outside chanted special prayers to the Virgin and St. Bernadette of the Grotto in French, the same service was repeated in English inside the baths.

Dried from his dip in the icy waters, Snite was placed back in his trailer with the "iron lung" and, after a few moments of prayer before the Grotto, was returned to his room.

Early in the morning mass was celebrated in the Grotto for Snite by P. J. McArdle, of the diocese of Rochester, N. Y. Special permission was required from the rector of the domain of the Grotto. Usually only high ecclesiastical dignitaries of episcopal rank and leading large pilgrimages are given the honor.

PRIESTS WILL MEET FOR DIOCESAN SYNOD

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 27.—(AP) A Savannah-Atlanta diocesan synod—meeting of all Catholic priests of a diocese for the purpose of making uniform church law and legislations—will be held here Tuesday, with the Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, bishop, presiding.

The synod will mark the first such conference held in the history of the diocese.

PAST O. E. S. HEAD DIES IN CORDELE

Miss Tallulah Atkins To Be Buried Today.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

CORDELE, Ga., May 27.—Miss Tallulah Atkins, 72, past grand matron of the Order of Eastern Star in Georgia and one of Cordele's most beloved residents, died at her home here early today.

Miss Atkins also was a past president of the Cordele U. D. C. chapter, and a member of the Baptist church. She was retired several years ago after 30 years' service in a local telegraph office.

Survivors include three nieces, Mrs. W. O. Wilkerson, of Houston, Texas, and Mrs. W. E. Parrish and Mrs. Margaret Malone, both of Cordele; three nephews, James Morris Atkins and Alva C. Atkins, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Garnet Atkins, of Clarksville, Tenn., and a sister-in-law, Mrs. A. C. Atkins, of Jacksonville.

Rites will be held at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the Baptist church here.

VISIT TO ROYALTY PUTS BIRTHDAY OF QUINTS IN SHADE

CALLANDER, Ont., May 27.—(Canadian Press)—The Dionne quintuplets were still so enthralled today by their meeting with the King and Queen last Monday that they didn't bother much about tomorrow being their fifth birthday.

Preparations were under way, however, for a big white cake with five candles—one each for the sisters to blow out.

The five little girls will be hostesses in their nursery home to a small family party including their father, mother and seven brothers and sisters as well as the nursery staff and their physician, Allan Roy Dafoe.

Marie is under the delusion that a bridge their train crossed (on their visit to royalty) before entering Toronto was the "London bridge" she's heard so much about at playtime.

Again!
ELECTRIC RATES GO DOWN

New Lower Electric Rates Multiply Opportunities for Better Living In Georgia Homes

POPULAR "FREE ELECTRICITY" PLAN BOOSTS SAVINGS

"How Does the New Rate Help Me?"

"I never could understand about kilowatt hours and, frankly, when you talk about a half-million-dollar saving, that's too big for me to grasp. What I want to know is—How does the new rate help ME?"

Say, for example, your family has been paying (under the old rate) from $2.50 to $2.75 a month—for lights, iron, toaster, percolator, fan and maybe other small appliances. Now—under the new rate—you can add the electric refrigerator you've wanted, and the additional electricity to run it will cost only about 2½ cents a day.

Maybe you already have an electric refrigerator but the hot weather has made you yearn for the coolness of electric cookery. Your monthly bill, under the old rate, has been about $4.15 a month, for example. Now—under the new rate—you can add the electric range you want for a cost of electricity of about five cents a day—and that's economical cooking in anybody's language. In other cases, the current cost for electric cookery goes as low as three cents a day for a good-sized family's three square meals.

Those are just samples. Obviously, they are based on averages. In your own individual case, the cost might vary a little, up or down. But in all cases, electricity is now so cheap, its cost can only be measured in pennies-a-day.

"Free Electricity" Means Just What It Says

Under the new rate, you can make some increase in your use of electricity, without increasing your electric bill at all. In many instances, you can add small appliances, and your allotment of "free electricity" will supply all of the current you need to run them. But you don't have to buy new appliances in order to get this benefit. You can have more lighting, or put into use appliances that have been laid on the shelf, or merely enjoy the peace of mind of not quarreling with the children about "Turn off the light!"

Here is an example of how your "free electricity" can help you RIGHT NOW. The smallest "package" of it we are offering is two kilowatt hours, and that is enough electricity to run a good-sized electric fan for forty hours. So turn on the fan—the cool breezes are on us this time!

IMMEDIATELY effective, beginning with meter readings of June 1, your residential electric rates take another drop—to the lowest point in all this Company's history.

Already Georgia is known from coast to coast for its cheap electricity. The Georgia homes we serve now buy their electricity at an average price of 2.9 cents a kilowatt hour, 30 per cent lower than the national average. As a result, they are able to use 60 per cent more than the average American home. They are already enjoying many electrical comforts and conveniences which the average American household cannot afford. Cheap electricity is one of Georgia's best assets.

Now, even CHEAPER electricity has arrived!

It will pay you to find out how 1939's extra-low rate makes possible the electrical modernization of YOUR home. There is nothing new about how the new rate works. It is the same type of rate you have had for five years—only BETTER because it is LOWER. It performs its money-saving duties in the same manner it has performed them since this kind of rate was first introduced in 1934. But the new rate is so very much lower than the old one—it offers potential savings of $520,000 a year to our customers.

Double-Action Benefits

In a nutshell, the new rate does these two things: (1) it offers you actual "FREE ELECTRICITY," a certain number of kilowatt hours which you may use in addition to your established normal use without increasing your bill one penny; and then, (2) when your "free electricity" is used up, any additional electricity you may want for a new electric refrigerator, range, washing machine or other home improvement comes to you at the LOWEST rate in our history.

These double-action benefits of the new rate make it a real "opportunity rate" for everyone who wishes to begin enjoying the time-saving and effort-saving help electricity can give in making home life happier.

The "free electricity" plan was unheard-of in Georgia before 1934. At first, we admit, people were inclined to be skeptical, but when they satisfied themselves about it, this more-for-your-money plan started the biggest rush toward home improvement and modernization our state has ever known. Literally thousands of homes, where back-breaking drudgery was the rule five years ago, now have electric refrigerators, electric ranges, water heaters, water pumps, washing machines, better lighting for young eyes and old. Other thousands now have electric service who couldn't afford it at all five years ago.

Proofs—Real and Visible

This is one Five-Year Plan that really worked. In these five years, the number of homes we serve has increased from 114,000 to 170,000. The number of rural homes we serve has more than doubled. In these five years, the average price per kilowatt hour in the homes on our lines has dropped from 5.16 cents to 2.9 cents—a decrease of 43 per cent. In this same period, these Georgia homes have been able to increase their use of electricity, on the average, from 803 kilowatt hours a year to more than 1,400. The average home we serve now employs over 70 per cent MORE electricity than it did five years ago—and pays LESS today for the larger amount than it did five years ago for the smaller!

Brighter, pleasanter homes by the thousands, all over Georgia, are the tangible proofs of what the old rate accomplished. But now—EVEN CHEAPER electricity has arrived! "Free Electricity" is again available to our customers for the using. Now no family need deny itself the electrical improvements it so long has wished for.

Visit our nearest store and find out how the new rate applies to your own individual case. Find out how much FREE ELECTRICITY you have coming to you—then begin using it. Put your electricity really to work—it's ready and willing and its cost is lower than ever before!

Amendments To Be Voted on Outlined

Those Affecting Atlanta Area Listed; Balloting in Special Election Is Scheduled for June 6.

The following is a digest of constitutional amendments affecting the Atlanta area to be voted upon in the special election June 6, 1939:

Authorizing State Highway Bond Issues: Permits the Governor to issue, for the benefit of the State Highway Department, highway refunding bonds to the amount of $2,650,000 in each of the years 1939, 1940 and 1941—a total of $7,950,000. The bonds are to be 7-year term bonds bearing 2 per cent interest and direct obligations of the state. They are to refund the state highway certificates issued by the state some years ago when it took over the counties' highway bonds, and are to be paid from gasoline and license tag taxes now allocated to the State Highway Department. This amendment also requires that these taxes continue to be levied and allocated to the State Highway Department and that they be collected in amounts sufficient to pay the bonds.

Permitting Atlanta to Issue Revenue Certificates: Allows Atlanta to issue revenue certificates to finance (a) improvements in its water system, or (b) construction or improvement of refuse incinerators, to be paid solely from special funds consisting of not more than 10 per cent of the annual receipts from water sales and from the sanitary tax, respectively. In 1938 water sales were $2,474,755.38 and sanitary taxes assessed were about $485,000. The certificates must mature within 20 years and cannot bear more than 5 per cent interest. The certificates are not to be construed as a debt, nor are they to constitute a liability of the city or a charge, lien or encumberance on any of its property. On the other hand, they are of course to be financed from revenues which would otherwise accrue to the city's general fund and be available for current appropriations.

Paying of School Bonds.

Requiring East Point and College Park School Bonds to Be Paid from Taxes on County Outside Atlanta: Requires Fulton county school board to assume and pay, from taxes to be levied throughout Fulton county outside Atlanta, the principal and interest on the outstanding school bonds of East Point ($77,500) and College Park ($65,000)—a total of $142,500. All these bonds bear interest at 5 per cent.

Legalizing County Employes' Pensions: Legalizes two legislative pension acts:

(1) An act now in effect setting up a county teachers' retirement commission (one resident of Fulton county outside Atlanta and one member of the county board of education, both appointed by that board, and one member elected by the teachers and employes eligible for pensions), and providing pensions for all teachers, principals, supervisors and administrative staff (and other county school employes on application approved by the county board of education). Each member of the fund contributes 1 per cent of his salary (maximum $2 monthly), which in 1947 may be increased in accordance with actuarial studies to not more than 3 per cent (maximun $6 monthly), and county board of education contributes an equal amount and may contribute additional amounts. A member of the fund may be retired, at either his own option or that of the county board of education, at or after 60, and must be retired by age 70. Upon retirement, if he has at least 10 years' service, he receives a pension equal to 50 per cent of his average salary for his final 10 years' service (maximum $60 monthly), less 2 per cent for each year under 20 years' service. A member of the fund may also be retired at the option of the county board of education prior to reaching age 60. If he has 25 years' service (or 10 years' service i. he is totally and permanently disabled), he receives a pension equal to 25 per cent plus 3 per cent for each year of service above 25 (or above 10 if he is disabled), of the maximum he could receive if he had reached age 60, but not more than this maximum. An employe's total contributions, without interest, are refunded upon his death, dismissal or resignation before retirement.

(2) An act which becomes effective on July 1 if this amendment is adopted, establishing a pension fund for all other county employes excluding the welfare department and those deputies and employes of elective officers who fail to enter the fund within 60 days after its establishment. Employes contribute 2 per cent of their salaries; the remainder necessary to pay benefits must be appropriated and paid from the county general fund. Members of the fund with at least 25 years' service may be retired if permanently and totally disabled in line of duty or at or after age 60 (without their consent at age 65), if in the opinion of the county commissioners they are entitled to retire, on half salary (maximum $50 monthly). For death in line of duty, dependents receive not exceeding the amount to which the deceased would have been entitled. Employes are to receive a refund of 75 per cent of their contributions, without interest, upon death, dismissal or resignation before retirement.

Civil Service Act.

Authorizing a Fulton County Civil Service Act: Permits the general assembly to pass laws creating a Fulton county civil service commission and establishing a civil service or merit system for Fulton county employes, including employes of independently elected county officers.

Permitting Legislature to Require Independently Elected Fulton County Officers to Choose Deputies: Makes effective a law requiring the Fulton county ordinary, sheriff, superior court clerk, tax receiver, tax collector and treasurer to choose a chief assistant, who shall succeed to the office in case of vacancy. This is an attempt to avoid special elections for such officers and to mitigate the evil effects of the "ticket system" by giving employes in these offices some security of tenure.

School Board Loans.

Permitting Fulton and DeKalb County Boards of Education to Make Temporary Loans: Authorizes Fulton and DeKalb county boards of education to borrow money on short-term notes, but limits the amount of any such loan to the amount which, together with other loans still outstanding, will equal the balance of the income from the state and from taxation anticipated for the remainder of the fiscal year.

Increasing Salary of Stone Mountain Circuit Judge: Requires DeKalb county to pay the Stone Mountain circuit judge an additional salary of $2,500 annually.

None of the other amendments affect this community.

Emory Students Not Only Wear Hats But They're Two-Hat Men

Survey Explodes Popular Picture of Bareheaded Collegian, Shows That Even Majority of Freshmen Boast of Headgear.

If you hastily assume the next hatless young man you see is a college student, you'd better guess again.

That is the finding of students in market analysis in the school of business administration at Emory. In a recent survey, they found that only 9 per cent of Emory's male students never wear hats.

On the other hand, 69 per cent of the student body wear hats "some times," and the remaining 22 per cent are habitual chapeau wearers.

Harold G. Murphy, instructor in marketing, directed the seven students who made the survey.

"The era of the hatless college student is gone," he declared. "We found that for the most part Emory students not only wear hats but that most of them own more than one."

The survey revealed that freshmen are the most likely to be seen bareheaded. Thirty per cent of the first-year men do not own hats.

Murphy pointed out that students in the middle-class income group are more inclined to buy and wear hats than those in the wealthy class.

CHILE TO SET UP MONOPOLY ON OIL

Foreign Companies Advised To Liquidate Within Three Months' Time.

SANTIAGO, Chile, May 27.—(AP)—United States and British oil companies in Chile were authoritatively reported tonight to have been notified officially that the government would establish shortly a state monopoly for the sale and distribution of petroleum products.

The foreign companies were said to have been advised to liquidate their organizations within three months.

The firms chiefly affected are the West India Oil Company, subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, and Shellmex of Chile, subsidiary of the Royal Dutch Shell, which have plants valued at a total of about $9,000,000 in this country.

SENATE APPROVES RAILROAD COURT

5-Judge Body Would Expedite Handling Bankruptcy, Receivership Cases.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—The senate cleared its decks today of another piece of major railroad relief legislation, approving and sending to the house a bill to set up a special five-judge federal court to expedite the handling of bankruptcy and receivership cases.

The measure was passed on a voice vote that left the opposition unrecorded, but a group led by Senator Clark, Democrat, Missouri, fought against passage until the last.

The senate's action left only one of a series of administration-sponsored railroad bills still on its calendar. It is a house-approved measure which would permit carriers in temporary financial difficulties to obtain voluntary agreements from stockholders for postponement of maturity dates on obligations.

The senate previously had passed a bill consolidating control of all transportation except aerial, under the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Before approving the court bill the senate voted down an amendment proposed by Clark which would have stripped the new tribunal of its judicial status and a proposal by Senator McCarran, Democrat, Nevada, to send the measure to the judiciary committee for study.

Clark argued that a five-man court, sitting in Washington, could not possibly be as familiar with local conditions as federal judges operating in their own districts.

Proponents of the bill for the most part remained silent, contenting themselves with letting the opposition have its say.

VOTE FOR "SLOW" TIME.

BUENA VISTA, Ga., May 27.—Buena Vista went to the polls this week to vote on "fast" or "slow" time. "Slow" time won out by a majority of 20 votes.

Vast Empire of 'Queen of Malibu' Crumbles in Ruins of Bankruptcy

Mrs. Mary K. Rindge, Veritable Ruler of Estate, Spent Fortune To Build Up Resort in California as Husband Wished.

LOS ANGELES, May 27.—(AP)—The empire of the "Queen of the Malibu," indomitable, almost fabulous ruler of approximately 24,000 California acres, has crumbled in ruins at her feet.

The woman—tall, erect, gray-haired Mrs. Mary K. Rindge—who unsuccessfully defended her vast estate with firearms, law books and a fortune only to be plunged into bankruptcy, suffered the final blow a few days ago.

"If we have any further trouble from you, you can expect to be sent to the county jail or fined for contempt of court," warned Superior Judge Ruben Schmidt after sheriff's deputies reported three years were required to serve the elusive Msr. Rindge with a bench warrant for a court appearance to explain her refusal to pay a $4,680 judgment.

The 74-year-old woman had known what it was to be a virtual law unto herself—had headed her own private "army" of Mexican fence riders, keeping out all trespassers and blocking attempts to build highways.

The recent order of Federal Judge Leon Yankwich, which called for dissolution in a bankruptcy reorganization of the "forbidden Empire of the Malibu," meant defeat of Mrs. Rindge's vow to make the dream of her long dead husband, Fred H. Rindge Sr., come true.

Rindge, a native of Marblehead, Mass., bought the extensive ranch—originally it was a Spanish land grant—in 1890. It extends 30 miles along the coast from the Los Angeles - Ventura county line southward and eastward.

Rindge saw in vast acres the site for a watering place which would make the French Riviera and the famous resorts of Europe seem poor by comparison.

He died in 1905.

Today, wide highways cross the once "forbidden empire." Parts of it have been subdivided. But the estate's own private railroad—two now rusty streaks interrupted by broken and decayed trestles—serve to remind one of the empire that was.

PARLIAMENT TO GET BILL ON MARTIAL LAW

WARSAW, May 27.—(AP)—A bill giving the President authority to declare martial law on the war minister's motion, subject to cabinet approval, is to be submitted to the Polish parliament, it was disclosed today.

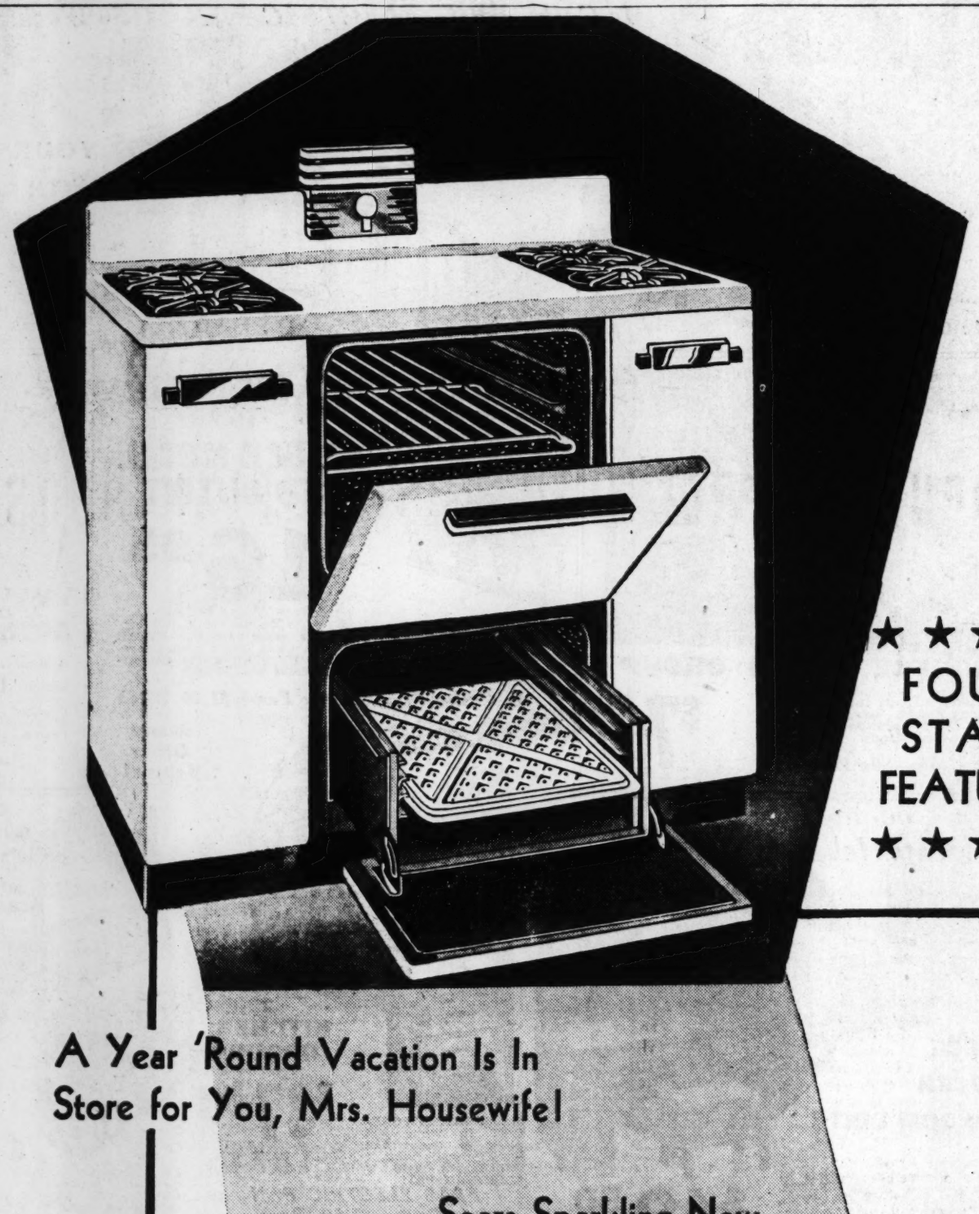

The bill was among several approved by the cabinet yesterday.

SEC MEMBER CONFIRMED.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—The senate confirmed today the nomination of Leon Henderson, of New Jersey, as a member of the Securities Exchange Commission for a term expiring June 5, 1944. Henderson recently was confirmed for the unexpired term of William O. Douglas, now a justice of the supreme court.

Health Officials To Meet Here

Georgia Association Will Convene Thursday for 3-Day Session and to Hear Noted Authorities.

Outstanding public health officials, physicians and United States Public Health Service and Children's Bureau officials are scheduled to address the annual meeting of the Georgia Public Health Association to be held Thursday through Saturday, June 8, 9 and 10, at the Atlanta Biltmore Hotel. Dr. S. C. Rutland, commissioner of health of Troup county and president of the Georgia Public Health Association, will preside.

Mayor Hartsfield will bring greetings to the convention at the opening session Thursday morning, registration to take place at 8:30 in the morning.

Prominent speakers on Thursday's program include Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of the State Department of Public Health, who will talk on "Georgia Public Health Program;" Dr. William H. Myers, of Savannah, president of the Medical Association of Georgia, "A Co-operative Public Health Program;" Governor Rivers, "The State's Responsibility in the Public Health Program," and Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Constitution, "The Public Health Program Viewed by a Layman."

Some of Topics.

Addresses featuring Thursday afternoon's program will include "Vital Statistics in a Health Program," by Dr. Halbert L. Dunn, of the United States Census Bureau; "Some Recent Advances in the Knowledge of Malaria," by Dr. Mark F. Boyd, malariologist of the Rockefeller Foundation, Tallahassee, Fla.; "Acquired Immunity to Malaria," by Dr. Justin Andrews, director of the division of malaria investigations, Georgia Department of Public Health; "Epidemiological Studies of Typhoid Fever in Georgia During 1938," by Dr. A. Wilson Brown, assistant epidemiologist, Georgia Department of Public Health, and discussions of these various subjects led by Dr. T. C. Vinson, Spalding county commissioner of health; Dr. W. F. Castellow, Sumter county commissioner of health, and Dr. J. E. Lester, Cobb county health commissioner.

"Typhus Fever and Public Health" is the subject of the opening address at the Friday morning session, by Dr. E. R. Dyer, chief of the division of infectious diseases, United States Public Health Service, the discussion to be led by Dr. George D. Brigham, director of typhus research laboratory, Albany.

Health Bookkeeping.

"Public Health Bookkeeping" will be discussed in the address by Dr. Guy G. Lunsford, director of the division of county health, state health department, his address to be followed by a general discussion, introduction of disinterested visitors, and an election of officers.

Dr. F. C. Cady, dental consultant, United States Public Health Service, will address the convention at the Friday afternoon session, his subject being "The Responsibilities of the Health Department in the Development of a Dental Health Program," the discussion of the subject to be led by Dr. Pope Holliday, president of the Georgia Dental Association, Athens.

"Maternal and Child Health in the National Health Program" is the subject of the address scheduled by Dr. Martha Eliot, assistant chief, United States Children's Bureau, the discussion to be led by Dr. Hugh J. Bickerstaff, assistant director, division of maternal and child hygiene, Georgia Department of Public Health.

Miss Pearl McIver, senior public health nursing consultant, United States Public Health Service, will talk on "Present-Day Problems in Public Health Nursing," and a discussion will follow by Miss Helen Bond, director of the Savannah Health Center. "Case Finding and Case Follow-Up in Tuberculosis Control," will be the subject of the address by Dr. H. C. Schenck, director of the division of tuberculosis control, State Health Department, the discussion to be led by Dr. C. M. Sharp, superintendent of the Georgia Tuberculosis sanatorium.

Will Present Skit.

An interesting feature of the Friday afternoon session will be the presentation of a skit, "Obstetrical Care in the Home," by the Tift county demonstration personnel.

Beginning at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon the engineering section will meet in room 10 at the Biltmore with L. M. Clarkson, director of the division of sanitary engineering, State Health Department, presiding.

A featured address will be "Extermination of Rats for an Atlanta Housing Project," by W. H. Edwards Jr., sanitary engineer of the Atlanta city health department, with discussion led by Roy J. Boston, associate engineer, typhus control, State Health Department.

C. Heard Field, sanitary engineer of the Chatham County Health Department, and W. A. Legwen, sanitary engineer of the Richmond County Health Department, will talk on "Ditch Lining," the discussion to be led by J. M. Henderson, associate engineer, malaria control, Georgia Health Department.

Several section meetings will be held Saturday morning, the engineering section to convene at 9 o'clock for a round-table discussion with L. M. Clarkson presiding, and the medical officers' section to meet in the ballroom with the president presiding for a round-table discussion.

The nurses' section will meet at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, in Room 6, with Miss Alma Galbreath presiding. The topic will be "Better Health Protection for Mothers and Babies in Georgia."

Role of Midwife.

Miss Pearl McIver will discuss "Essentials of a Maternal and Child Health Program," and Mrs. Olive L. Barbin, director of nurses of the Richmond county health department, will give a talk on "The Role of the County Nurse in Infant Care." Miss Caroline Tillinghast, consultant nurse of the Georgia Department of Public Health, will discuss "The Role of the Midwife in Maternal Care."

Social events scheduled for the three-day session include the convention banquet to be held at 7:30 o'clock Friday night in the ballroom of the Biltmore, with Robert F. Maddox, chairman of the Georgia Board of Health, presiding.

Dr. John W. Oden, superintendent of the Milledgeville state hospital, and Dr. Felix J. Underwood, Mississippi state health officer, of Jackson, Miss., will be the principal banquet speakers. Dr. Oden will discuss "Mental Hygiene" and Dr. Underwood will talk on "Public Health—A Job for All."

Because it has high acid content, the tomato is one of the easiest foods to can, says the Florida home demonstration office.

Tax Officer of City Protests Own Levy

John Armistead, Atlanta tax investigator who has made many Atlantans protest by turning up taxable intangible property owned by them, was protesting himself about taxes yesterday to the board of tax appeals in Washington, the Associated Press revealed from the capital.

He sought to prevent the internal revenue bureau from collecting taxes on his income derived from assisting in "ferreting out, discovering and collecting" taxes on intangible property." Armistead contended that he was employed by the city of Atlanta for this purpose and that his income was not subject to federal taxes.

But the bureau claimed his income 1934 through 1936 totaled $45,664 and taxes him $3,090, plus $772 penalties. His appeal was filed yesterday.

offices will be on the Sixth street side of the main building, and eight modern bottling machines will be in display windows along the Spring street frontage. We are so proud of the method which is used in handling our product that we want the public to share with us the opportunity of seeing the operation.

"All exposed parts of the lot will be screened from view by an attractive brick wall, against which will be indigenous planting, and all ingresss and egress to the courtyard will be had from large double iron gates on Sixth street. The entire construction will be reinforced concrete and structural steel. The exterior will be red brick and limestone, a great portion of the front being given over to plate glass windows for demonstration purposes."

Await City's Okay.

"Construction on the new plant will be commenced by the Griffin Construction Company as soon as plans have been approved by the city.

"We wish to congratulate George H. Bond, the architect, on the plans which he has submitted, and sincerely believe that our new plant and office building will be second to none in this country."

TAX REVISION PLAN IS GIVEN CONGRESS

ness at today's session of the committee which adjourned until Monday after a two and a half hour meeting.

Questioned after reading his 2,000-word prepared statement, the treasury head explained he was merely laying the broad basis for tax revision minus specific proposals for changes because it was the committee's responsibility. He said he came "to be told, not to tell."

Must Retain Revenues.

He emphasized, however, that what revision of corporate taxes was undertaken at this time should not curtail existing revenues.

"If tax revision were confined to tax reductions," he said, "the resulting uncertainty as to our future fiscal position would injure and not help business."

Warns Against Deficits.

Morgenthau made clear a belief that when this country could balance its budget was bound up with the international situation, although he warned against continued deficits and declared that a fundamental objective of sound finance "clearly is a balanced budget."

Painting a gloomy world financial picture as a result of the international armaments race which he asserted was becoming more intense with no end in sight, he said:

"For us these developments present the danger that they (armament expenditures) may involve us in increased cost for national defense here and that they may result in monetary instability abroad and disruption of our commerce, the consequences of which we can not fully predict."

Revision Not Feasible Now.

At another point he said the "unmistakable implication of the international situation is that we should give serious attention to our future fiscal position and redouble our efforts to attain full recovery."

He also said that while a comprehensive revision of the tax structure probably was not feasible at this session, this should not restrain the committee from giving serious attention to "removing from the tax laws any manifest inequities or other defects."

CONTRACTS AWARDED FOR AERIAL MAPPING

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—The Agriculture Department has awarded contracts for the aerial mapping of 3,385 square miles in Georgia, the photographs to be used in checking on farmer cooperation with crop control programs.

The department awarded one contract for the mapping of 1,414 square miles to the Aero Service Corporation, Philadelphia, and another award was made the Fairchild Aerial Surveys, Inc., Los Angeles, for 1,971 square miles.

A total of 68,524 square miles in nine states will be mapped under contracts awarded yesterday.

FOUR ARE KILLED AS SPEEDING AUTO CRASHES INTO BUS

Three Slightly Injured When Car Pursued by Police Is Dragged 100 Feet by Larger Vehicle.

Four negroes were killed and three persons slightly injured early yesterday morning when a speeding fugitive automobile crashed into a bus at the intersection of Stewart avenue and University drive.

Three of the dead from the car had been identified late yesterday as Joseph Brown, 226 Pine street, N. W., believed to have been driving the car; James Anderson, 491 Hunter street, and Ulysses Brown, 1059 Pio None avenue, Macon. The identify of a woman passenger in the car has not yet been established.

Treated for slight abrasions at Grady hospital were Mrs. Alma Virden and her 16-year-old son of Greensboro, N. C., and an unidentified negro man from Detroit, who sustained minor head injuries. The three patients were dismissed after treatment.

Police Captain Neil Ellis said the driver of the bus was G. O. Hendrix of Chattanooga. He quoted him as saying he was driving between 25 and 30 miles an hour when the negroes' machine cut into Stewart avenue from University drive, and piled into the bus, breaking an airline and putting his brakes out of commission.

Brakes Damaged.

The impact threw the bus over on the passenger car. Because of the damaged brakes, the bus dragged the car along the street for more than 100 feet before it came to a stop against the side of a bank.

The bus, en route from Jacksonville to Chicago, was carrying 21 passengers.

Radio Patrolmen Durrell Fuller and William Lasseter reported they were chasing the negroes' machine at the time of the accident, and, shortly before the crash occurred, had clocked its speed at 70 miles an hour.

One of Worst.

When ordinary wreckers failed to untangle the smashed automobile and the slightly damaged bus, fire department and Georgia Power Company crews were called in to pull the wreckage apart and get at the bodies.

The wreck, one of the worst in Atlanta's recent history, brought the total of those killed in traffic accidents in the city limits since January 1 to 19. By May 27 last year 26 had lost their lives in traffic accidents.

NEW 23D DIVISION TO INCLUDE UNITS OF GEORGIA GUARD

Cavalry Will Join With Other Southern and Northern Troops To Form the Blue and Gray.

Cavalry units of the Georgia National Guard will become parts of the newly organized 23d cavalry division, Adjutant General John E. Stoddard announced yesterday in Chicago where the division was organized at a meeting Friday night.

Brigadier General James E. Edmonds, of New Orleans, will command the new division with rank of major general. Georgia units which will join the division include the headquarters of the 108th cavalry, situated at Hinesville and commanded by Colonel Joseph B. Fraser; the first squadron of the 108th, situated in Atlanta and commanded by Major Theodore Goolsby, and the machine gun troop commanded by Captain Wesley U. Moran.

The new division will be known as the "Blue and the Gray" and it is believed to be the first national guard division since the Civil War to be composed of both northern and southern units. The units comprising the division, in addition to Georgia, come from Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Alabama, Louisiana and Tennessee.

Although the post of commanding general was awarded to the south, other high ranking officers, including the chief of staff, adjutant general and inspector general, are to come from the north.

Atlanta national guard officers said yesterday they expected the cavalry expansion program to add several new staff officers to the Georgia units of the division.

put on Bellevue Palace, once the official residence of Hohenzollern Prince Eitel Friedrich, in preparation for the visit next week of Yugoslavia's regent, Prince Paul, and Princess Olga, who are due in Berlin June 1.

A group of Spaniards, headed by General Juan Yague, will arrive with returning German legionnaires who fought for the Nationalists in Spain's civil war. The importance attached to the Spanish visitors is attested by the fact that Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering himself will welcome them at Hamburg Wednesday.

The outlay for parades, decorations, flowers, elaborate lighting and entertainment for the Yugoslavs and Spaniards is considered an excellent investment—one to impress visitors with Germany's greatness and to awaken patriotic pride in Germans for Nazi accomplishments.

LEAGUE COUNCIL CONCLUDES SESSION

GENEVA, May 27.—(AP)—The League of Nations council concluded its 105th session today without taking a stand on Finnish-Swedish plans to re-fortify the Aaland Islands to which Soviet Russia objected.

The four days of deadlocked debate on the Aalands issue was closed when Ivan Maisky, Soviet ambassador to London and president of this council session, ruled that reports and declarations on the question simply be recorded in the minutes.

Skin Turning to Leather, Boy, 7, Marked for Death

SOUTH BEND, Ind., May 27.—(AP)—Seven-year-old Lester Dircks, a brown-eyed boy with a shy smile, is beginning what may be his last summer.

He is the unwitting victim of scleroderma, rare disease that is turning his skin to leather.

In every other respect he is healthy. Doctors, powerless to help him say the disease is a diffuse hardening of the subcutaneous connecting tissue between the muscles and the skin. They believe the malady results from a maladjustment of metabolism in the child's body.

There is no known cure.

The boy's skin is leathery already, and cool. It feels much like semi-hard rubber. The condition has spread over his entire body, giving it a puffed appearance, caused by nodules under the skin. The hardening tissue shuts off the pores and halts circulation of blood to the skin.

Lester has been making high marks in the second grade of his school. He is puzzled by the fuss being made over him.

Thyroid substances are being injected in the hope of stopping the hardening process, but doctors have scarcely any hope of saving his life.

"As I look back over past occasions of this kind," Dr. Jacobs said in welcoming the group, "I cannot help but feel that this is by far the best of the lot. In planning for it, we thought it would be a good idea to select nine outstanding men so that we might honor ourselves by honoring them. As I look over this group I am sure that we have been eminently successful."

There followed introductions of the honor guests and Judge Watkins, each of whom made brief, informal talks.

In presenting Dr. Buchman, Dr. Jacobs described him as "the head of the most significant religious movement in the world today."

To Broadcast Speech.

"It is a distinct pleasure to be included in this group," Dr. Buchman said in acknowledging the introduction, "and it also is a pleasure to meet Dr. Jacobs again. I know you will agree with me when I say that he is one man who knows how to talk.

"I have never forgotten the speech I heard him deliver before the committee of 100 at Miami several years ago and I am tremendously grateful to him for his invitation to be present at this occasion. This marks my second visit to Atlanta this month and it is my sincere hope that I will be able to return again soon."

Dr. Buchman will speak at services at Oglethorpe at 11 o'clock this morning. The address will be carried over radio station WAGA from 11 o'clock to noon.

Recipe for Progress.

A plea for progress by combining the best features of "the New Deal and the old deal" was made by Mr. Watson, who asserted that the more he traveled around the world the more he appreciated the advantages offered by the United States.

"What we need today is balanced thinking," he declared. "No system is either all wrong or all right and no plan should be condemned in its entirety.

"There always have been and there always will be opportunities here for progress. All that is necessary is to take all the sound, constructive policies we know and back them to the limit.

Optimistic Over Future.

"It's true that the world of today is filled with strife and dissension but I'm still optimistic about the future. I do not feel that we are on the verge of a massed arm conflict. We in the International Chamber of Commerce are working for world peace through world trade and we believe it can be accomplished. History tells us that progress is always accompanied by strife."

Mr. Gannett, one of the country's outstanding newspaper publishers who recently took part in a radio debate with Secretary Ickes, was the object of some good-natured "kidding" by Judge Watkins for his "anti-New Deal leanings."

"I thought Mr. Ickes had me on the spot," Gannett said, "and now it looks like I'm on another one. But seriously speaking, I keenly appreciate the great honor Dr. Jacobs has done me in inviting me to be present on this occasion. He has done an amazing job in the development of Oglethorpe. It takes a lot of different qualities to be a successful president of a university and he combines them all to a marked degree."

Gannett Speaks

An address by Mr. Gannett at Oglethorpe last night was the principal feature of the final event on the day's program.

In this he asserted that this country should spend more time looking after its own affairs and less worrying about "Europe and its 'isms.'

"Because business activity in this country has been at a low ebb since the depression hit us, because artificial methods of providing employment for the idle have failed, because artificial methods of regulating our farms have been unsuccessful, because of the distress that prevails with a large percentage of our population, there have developed here profound forces that would substitute for our form of government Fascism, Naziism, Communism or some other 'ism' in the hope that it might better conditions.

"That must not happen here!"

Saying he was convinced "that the vast majority (of Americans) are absolutely opposed to our becoming involved in any European quarrel, Gannett listed as arguments of "those who differ with my views:"

1. That the best way to prevent war in Europe is to make the dictators believe the United States will be against them if they persist in their aggressions.

Answers Arguments.

2. That if the dictators do start a war and win it, we next shall be the object of their attack and actually be subjugated by them.

"As against the first view," Gannett said, "I maintain that it is utterly wrong for our government to give anyone in Europe a false impression of our attitude. If we do not intend to send men, money, munitions to Europe, to help the democracies in case war comes, then surely we should not raise in the minds of European statesmen any such hopes. Unless we are ready to back up our threats with deeds, we should be most careful about the impression created by our words.

"Only the other day I had a letter from a member of parliament. I was amazed to find this well informed man fully expecting that, if the democracies get into war, the United States will rush to their aid with all its resources and our boys will fight again alongside the British and the French.

3,000 Miles of Ocean.

"Where this man, high in official circles, got the idea, I do not know. I only hope our government has not in any way given official Europe reason for such expectation. On this question we should know the facts.

"As to the second argument, that if we don't help the democracies now we shall be the victim of dictators later, this reasoning, too, is unsound. If a war comes in Europe, the nations engaged in it will be exhausted before the end. Whoever wins will not then be able to attack us.

"Furthermore, there are 3,000 miles of ocean between Europe and America. No airplane yet developed can fly the Atlantic, bomb our cities and return safely home. Our navy, of course, should be kept strong enough to defend our coast, but it need not be greater than all the other navies combined. To defend our shores will not be difficult, for no navy can carry on a successful attack so far from home."

"In 1917 we sought nothing for ourselves," he declared. "The purposes of the American people were solely idealistic. Only now do we realize how tragic the outcome. Our efforts did not save the world for democracy. It was not a war to end war."

New Opportunities.

Continuing, Mr. Gannett emphasized the fact that the threat of war in Europe had checked progress in almost everything not related to war, but declared that in America constructive work was continuing, offering to new generations opportunities undreamed of before.

"The world is waiting for men and women who are ready to attack these great problems that confront us, with trained intelligence, ambition, persistence, determination and imagination," Mr. Gannett declared in part.

"There is, however, in this glorious outlook, this wonderful future of which we have only a glimpse, one factor that is most important. I mean the necessity of preserving our form of government and our system of free enterprise.

"Precious Liberties."

"Under our form of government, with the privileges and liberties set up under the bill of rights, men for the first time were able, without restriction to think freely, to speak freely, to write freely. These freedoms of the press, of speech, of religious worship, or right of assembly, of trial by jury, of protection of the privacy of our homes—all these freedoms were interwoven in our form of government and secured to us by our constitution.

"These precious liberties made we have made in America. These liberties made possible all that we enjoy today and hope for in the world of tomorrow."

Appealing to his audience to take cognizance of the responsibilities which faced them, the speaker urged the graduates to "do your part in preserving and maintaining our form of government and our system of free enterprise.

Develop Happiness.

"The greatest contribution America can make to mankind, the greatest contribution we can make to world peace, is to manage our own affairs," he said. "So develop the happiness and prosperity of our people that we will create an ideal which the nations of the world will be eager to follow.

"You young men and women of the graduating class face a world of almost fantastic promise in the fields of invention, discovery and research. The possibilities of what man may do for himself, for his comfort, health and well-being, seem limitless today as never before.

"Science can show the way. But the social conscience, the sense of justice, the spiritual ideals and moral purposes of our fathers must lead, direct and inspire us.

"If you young men and women, and the thousands of others of your generation will devote yourselves to these ideals, we will go forward."

Last night's program also included a dinner, the introduction of the nine honor guests on a radio program, the showing of a moving picture produced by Oglethorpe students and faculty, and music by students. During the afternoon visitors were taken to the cyclorama.

Large Graduating Class.

Today's program includes the address by Dr. Buchman and the commencement exercises at 8 o'clock tonight at the Erlanger theater, when degrees will be awarded to one of the largest graduating classes in Oglethorpe's history.

60 DIVERS HASTEN TO RAISE SQUALUS

Plan To Lift Sub Thrown Into High Gear; Job To Take More Than Week.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., May 27. (AP)—An intricate plan for raising the $4,000,000, submarine Squalus and its crew of 26 dead—a plan so complicated it may take a week or more to execute—was thrown into high gear today with 60 of the navy's best divers working in relays at the task.

"Keep at it day and night until the job is done. There will be no Sundays or holidays until the Squalus is raised."

These, in effect, were the orders flashed to the men assigned to one of the most delicate submarine jobs in history.

The return from Washington by fast navy plane of two submarine experts—Commanders A. I. McKee and A. R. McCann—with the approved plan of operation was the signal for speeding up the work. Shortly before noon, almost simultaneous with the landing of McKee and McCann, the first relay of divers went down.

A high naval official said there remained no doubt that the raising of the Squalus would be a long and tedious process. Indications that at least seven days would be required for the work were seen when the officer said it might be possible to give a week's notice before the Squalus broke the surface. From another naval source came the off-the-record opinion that it might be two weeks, at least.

Years of experiments by navy divers with a helium-oxygen mixture meanwhile bore fruit today when the men going down 240 feet to the Squalus breathed it for the first time under life-and-death salvage conditions.

The new helium combination permitted the divers to remain under the sea longer because, officials said, it was not so readily absorbed into the bloom stream as is air under such heavy pressure.

Under the plan drafted here and approved in Washington, the Squalus will be raised in stages, first one end and then the other, through a delicate balance between the lifting power of air pumped into the sunken craft and the buoyancy of huge pontoons which first would be sunk 130 feet below the surface.

2 CASES OF POLIO.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 27.—(AP) Two cases of infantile paralysis not previously reported brought incidence of the disease in South Carolina since November to 128 cases today, but state health officials were cheered by the absence of additional cases from Charleston, heaviest infected county.

PENDERGAST AIDE GETS PRISON TERM

O'Malley and 'Boss' Will Begin Leavenworth Sentences Monday.

KANSAS CITY, May 27.—(AP)—R. Emmet O'Malley, ousted Missouri insurance superintendent, and his political boss, Tom Pendergast, will enter Leavenworth penitentiary Monday to serve sentences for income tax evasion on the $377,500 "bribe money" they received for settling Missouri's $9,500,000 fire insurance rate case in favor of the risk companies.

Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis called it "bribe money" today as he sentenced O'Malley to a year and a day for failure to pay taxes on his $62,500 end of the deal.

"O'Malley was guilty of loyalty to a friend; at no time did O'Malley ever ask for any of the money for himself," said the defense attorney, William G. Boatright, after his client pleaded guilty.

Pendergast pleaded guilty Monday to tax evasions on $443,500, including $315,000 which the government said he got in a payoff to bring about the distribution of funds, impounded after a fire insurance rate increase was disallowed.

He was sentenced to a year and three months in prison. Some critics termed the sentence "too light," causing Judge Otis to defend it in court today as one minus "passion and hatred and revenge."

Both men must pay taxes, plus penalties.

Theory Hitler Can't Pause on Path To War Is Disputed by Duranty

Foreign Expert Writes That If Aggressive Thrusts Become Too Dangerous There Will Ensue a Truce Which Well May Lengthen Into Peace.

By WALTER DURANTY.
By the North American Newspaper Alliance.

BERLIN, May 27.—One of the things most frequently said in Europe—even by people who should have more sense—is that Adolf Hitler, being a dictator who in addition has contrived to surround himself with an aura of infallibility, cannot afford to pause and must ever leap upward and onward until, of course, at last he breaks his overswelled head.

Or, alternatively, that Hitler and Mussolini, having mobilized their respective countries for war and geared them to the utmost pitch of tension for the purpose of military aggression, must fight—or else—because you cannot possibly have a huge military machine like that without using it sooner or later.

Wishful Thinking.

Such wishful thinking is based upon complete ignorance, or at least misunderstanding, of the totalitarian system as applied in Germany and Italy.

Hitler's aim, which he has in no small degree achieved already, is precisely the mobilization of all of Germany's resources and manpower. In other words, to create a machine, geared indeed to high tension, into whose composition every man, woman and even child in Germany shall enter and feel themselves a part, and for whose service no efforts are too great and no burdens too heavy.

Whether you like Hitler or hate the man and his doings, it is foolish to ignore the fact that the German people have thus been mobilized behind him to a degree which few rulers in history can ever boast that they have attained.

Hitler holds Germany not merely by the magic, spell or witchcraft, of his phenomenal personality, but by a record of solid achievement such as no leader ever accomplished in so short a space from so humble a beginning, without a war's perils and pains. To argue that his very success and infallibility will prove a fatal spur to his ambition, or that the effects of disappointment will turn his people against him at the first setback, is to misjudge equally the character of Hitler and that of the German people.

Because he makes few mistakes and because his people regard him with unusual reverence, it is wishful-thinking madness to suppose that he must inevitably plunge on toward some overwhelming mistake or else incur the loss of popular support.

A belief Hitler himself wants war and that the hypnotized German people want it, too, is a belief neither Berlin itself nor foreign observers in Berlin nor Hitler's own past give much support.

True, by a flagrant abuse of force and overt threats of war, Germany has pushed the advantage of the initiative which it gained by occupation of the Rhineland in 1935 through one act of aggression after another to its present peak of power. In military terms, it has "exploited the offensive" to the utmost, just as, during the World War, those great German drives in the spring and summer of 1918 thrust forward until they met a definite barrier—at Chateau Thierry, for instance.

Such a barrier has now arisen.

People Want Peace.

Do not forget, too, that the war and the immediate post-war years hit the German people harder than the peoples of France and England. Germany does not want war, and not the least of Hitler's merit in German eyes—and tenfold in Hitler's own eyes—is that he has done what he has done without war.

It is not my business to discuss the rights or wrongs of Germany's case, but only to interpret, to the best of my ability, Germany's present position. It seems to me that, if Germany or the axis is unchecked, it will go on thrusting forward, but that, if it sees that united opposition makes such a course too dangerous, it will halt and accept, albeit unwillingly, a truce which may even become by gradual process a peace.

Bull Moose Loses Fight With Snowplow

CHEYENNE, Wyo., May 27.—(AP) Somewhere in the Iwogwotee pass country roams a stout-hearted bull moose who has learned he can't frighten away man-made machinery from his lofty domain.

A snowplow crew encountered the animal while opening the pass between Dubois and Moran.

The moose held his ground in the middle of the road as the plow drew near. Then, to the astonishment of the crew, the animal charged the on-coming plow—not once but five or six times.

Each time the encounter knocked the moose off its feet. Finally the huge animal stalked off into the forest, uninjured.

Public Blames New Dealers And Businessmen for Lag

Poll Shows Majority Believes Both Are Delaying Recovery.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Copyright, 1939, by American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, May 27.—In spite of the attack on the Roosevelt administration made this month by the United States Chamber of Commerce, a majority of the American people are blaming businessmen as well as the New Deal for the delay in national recovery today.

While a majority of voters believe that the New Deal has been "not friendly enough" toward business, an equally large majority say that the general attitude of business has also been too harsh toward the administration.

Both business and the administration are delaying recovery by their attitudes, a majority of the voters say.

The New Deal has complained that "big business" has been staging a "sitdown" until after 1940. The reply of the United States Chamber of Commerce is that the New Deal has fettered investment and destroyed "confidence."

Such charges and countercharges will be vital issues in 1940. To discover how the general public is judging them at the present time the Institute put a series of questions to a representative cross-section of American men and women in all 48 states. Interviewing in the survey was completed early this week, just before President Roosevelt's speech before the country's leading retailers in which he defended government spending. The first question was:

"Do you think that the general attitude of the Roosevelt administration toward business is too friendly or not friendly enough?"

The largest single group, a majority of those with opinions, said the New Deal had not been friendly enough:

New Deal's Attitude.
Not Friendly Enough	54%
Too Friendly	11
About Right	35

The Institute has asked this question thrice before, and a comparison of the results shows that an increasing number of voters think the New Deal has been too harsh with business. The trend of the "not friendly enough" vote has been as follows:

Not Friendly Enough.
November, 1937	38%
March, 1938	45
March, 1939	52
Today	54

There is political dynamite in this attitude as 1940 approaches. In a second question the Institute asked: "Do you think the general attitude of business toward the Roosevelt Administration is too friendly or not friendly enough?" The answers in today's survey are:

Business' Attitude.
Not friendly enough	65%
Too friendly	11
About right	24

Although the questions divide Americans along party lines to some extent, it is significant that 54 per cent of the Republicans with opinions say business has not been friendly enough and a large percentage of Democrats (43%) say the New Deal has been too harsh. The actual party vote is:

	New Deal Not Friendly Enough	Business Not Friendly Enough
Republicans	79%	54%
Democrats	43	72
Third party voters	40	68

The greatest criticism of the New Deal on this point occurs in New England and in the business and financial east, while the greatest criticism of business for being "not friendly enough" also comes from the east and from west of the Mississippi.

In its final questions the Institute asked "Do you think the attitude of business toward the Roosevelt administration is delaying business recovery?" and "Do you think the attitude of the Roosevelt administration toward business is delaying business recovery?" The national vote is:

Business attitude delaying recovery	69%
Business not delaying recovery	31
New Deal attitude delaying recovery	63
New Deal not delaying recovery	37

WALL STREET SEES CONSUMER UPTURN

Some Expect It by Late Summer, Others After Congress Adjourns.

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP)—Some financial and industrial leaders said today international and domestic politics and general business conditions have made them increasingly confident a moderate business upturn is on the way.

This spreading belief marks a change in sentiment prevailing since February.

However, they expected the upturn would affect consumer lines chiefly. There was little hope expressed of a major upturn in the heavy goods field.

Most of those interviewed thought the upturn might be expected by late summer; some predicted it would begin shortly after congress adjourned.

Wall Street leaders were encouraged chiefly by the reported agreement this week between Senator Pat Harrison and President Roosevelt to try to obtain passage before adjournment of the Morgenthau-Hanes tax revision program.

Wall Streeters do not regard the Morgenthau-Hanes tax revision program as a tax panacea by any means. They do not expect it to reduce taxes or expenses. They do, however, hope that it will tempt into the common stock financing market large sums of potential equity money now lying idle in bank accounts.

Chiefly by allowing losses to be balanced in with profits, it would make "risk" investment for wealthy men more attractive than it is today.

Estimates as to how much money might thus be brought in vary greatly, generally running between $2,000,000,000 and $5,000,000,000 in the next couple of years.

ESCAPED CONVICTS REARRESTED HERE

One of Two Under Life Sentence for Murder.

Arrest of five negroes on suspicion of burglary netted two escaped convicts, one of them with a life sentence for murder, officials of the identification bureau of Fulton county police announced yesterday.

Escapes caught were Ralph Benton, negro, found guilty in Fulton county, December 16, 1937, of murdering Horace Jack Upshaw, negro, and Harry Moore, who escaped from the Coffee county public works camp while serving 12 to 24 years from Fulton county for burglary. Benton escape dfrom the Jones county camp in November of 1938.

County Policemen W. L. Duncan and Fred Bradford rounded up the five on suspicion of burglarizing offices and stealing typewriters, adding machines and like equipment. Twenty machines were recovered.

Georgia's 1939 Peach Season Launched by Governor Rivers' Proclamation

JAYCEES OF STATE SPONSOR PROGRAM TO PUSH INDUSTRY

Ellis Arnall To Speak on Radio This Afternoon; Special Cash Awards Are Offered Boosters.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

MACON, Ga., May 27.—Tomorrow marks the official beginning of the 1939 Georgia peach season by proclamation of Governor Rivers.

The Georgia Junior Chamber of Commerce has launched a state-wide program of activity in which newspapers and radio stations will participate, and at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon Attorney General Ellis Arnall will deliver an address over a state-wide radio hookup originating with station WMAZ, Macon.

In his proclamation, Governor Rivers called attention to the fact that Georgia "leads the entire nation in the production of peaches and is appropriately known as 'The Peach State.'"

He urged that "all the people of this state buy and use Georgia peaches in preference to all others," and requested hotels and restaurants to serve them throughout the season. He also stressed home canning.

State Observances.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsoring peach promotion as an annual project, is planning a series of "Peach Week" observances in the state and several prizes have been announced for participation in the promotion program. This announcement came from Warren H. Oliver, Macon, chairman of the Georgia Jaycees' peach promotion committee.

Peach Week observances will be held as follows: In south Georgia, including Macon, week of June 19; in middle Georgia, including Atlanta, week of June 26, and in north Georgia, also including Atlanta, week of July 17.

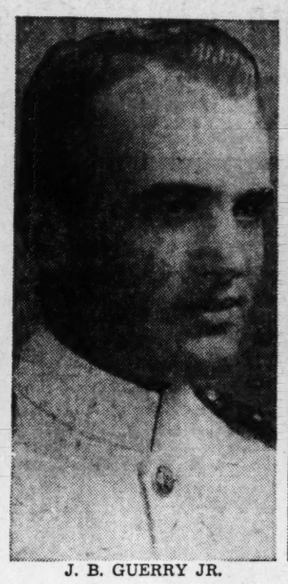

Prizes Offered.

Prizes are being offered by the Junior Chamber group as follows: For the best report by a Jaycee chapter on the season's activities, $5, $3 and $2; to the individual who reports the largest quantity of home-canned peaches during the season, $5, $3 and $2; to the county home demonstration agent who writes the best letter relating experiences with peaches during the season (not exceeding 200 words), $3, $2; to the hotel, restaurant or drug store proprietor writing the best letter of the same length on his experience during the season, $3, $2; to the employe of these firms writing the best letter on his or her experience, $3, $2; to the individual submitting the best peach recipe, $3, $2, and to the hotel, restaurant, drug store, grocery store or any other business house having the most attractive peach display during any of the various "Peach Week" observances, or during the season (judging by photograph only), $5, $3, $2.

With announcement of the prizes, Mr. Oliver also announced appointment of several Jaycee chapter chairmen who will direct the promotion program in their respective communities. Those announced include Sterling McCall, Mount Vernon; Caruso Baker, Manchester; Wingate Dykes, Americus; Bill Starr, Atlanta; Charles E. Adams, Vidalia; L. B. Millians, Newnan; Coley Pike, LaGrange; Bart Miller, Griffin; James Conner, Carrollton, and D. W. Wells, Fort Valley.

Atlantan To Be Ordained Tonight As New Pastor of Roswell Church

Presbyterians Also Mark Centennial This Year in Original Edifice.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

ROSWELL, Ga., May 27.—Richard R. Potter, of Atlanta, will be ordained and installed as pastor of historic Roswell Presbyterian church on Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Mr. Potter is a native of Atlanta, a son of Mrs. Annie Randall Potter and the late Gardner A. Potter. He is a graduate of Boys' High school, Presbyterian College and Columbia Theological Seminary.

Historic Church.

Roswell Presbyterian, one of the oldest churches in this section, has become a center of religious and historic interest as it celebrates the centennial year of its organization and erection. The church edifice, a perfect example of Georgian architecture, is magnificently preserved and bears silent testimony to the careful and efficient architecture of a century ago. Four fluted columns, hauled from the coast on ox carts, top the six steps which extend the width of the church and rise to the porch. The interior is strikingly attractive with high boxed-in pews, slave gallery and lofty anglican pulpit. The tower bell, cast in 1826, still tolls its notes of invitation each Sabbath morning, and the elaborate silver communion service and linen, presented as a gift in 1839, and which miraculously survived the raids of the '60's, is still in periodic use.

Church's First Pastor.

The Rev. Nathaniel A. Pratt, of Harvard University, became the first pastor and officially constituted the church on October 20, 1839. More than 40 years later he was succeeded by Dr. William E. Baker, of Princeton University. From the church have gone a number of loyal missionaries, among whom was John Hall, a slave, who was given special training and freedom, and was sent back to Africa to carry the Gospel to his own people. Another was Henry Barrington Pratt, who was the first missionary and translator of the Bible to Colombia, South America.

RICHARD R. POTTER.

Mittie Bulloch Roosevelt, mother of Theodore Roosevelt, was among the church's communicants, and the former President, himself, worshipped in the church on a number of occasions.

After 100 years of unbroken service, the church begins a second century with the ordination and installation of a new pastor. Plans also are being made for a centennial service which will take place in the fall.

Graduates of Tifton High School Will Pay Tribute to Constitution

Five Honor Students, Speaking at Commencement Monday Night, To Present Speeches Honoring Newspaper's Past and Present Leaders.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

TIFTON, Ga., May 27.—Commencement day—Monday—at Tifton High school will be Atlanta Constitution Day, pursuant to the school's annual custom of dedicating its graduation exercises to some outstanding Georgian or Georgia institution.

Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Constitution, has been selected as the recipient of the senior class' honors this year, and the graduation program will be based upon the life and history of The Constitution and its past and present leaders.

Five Honor Graduates.

Graduation exercises will be held in the school auditorium at 8:30 o'clock Monday night, with five honor graduates taking part in the program. They are Lennon Bowen Jr., Norma Willis, Billy Lankford, Willie Pritchard and Curtis McAllister. Of the four boys, three live outside of Tifton.

The Rev. J. H. Wilson, pastor of Tifton Methodist church, will pronounce the invocation following the seniors' processional. The salutatory, by Norma Willis, second honor graduate, will be on "The Life of Ralph McGill," and an essay on "The Atlanta Constitution" will be presented by Curtis McAllister.

John Mathews will present a saxophone solo rendition of "Just a-Wearyin' for You," the words for which were written by the late and beloved Frank L. Stanton, former Constitution columnist.

"One Word More."

"Let Us Have Peace," an excerpt from Ralph McGill's column "One Word More," will be presented by Willie Pritchard, and the valedictory, "The Ideal Georgia," will be delivered by Lennon Bowen Jr., first honor graduate. Billy Lankford will speak on "One Word More," to which Mr. McGill will respond in the featured address.

RONALD YOUNG RITES ARE SLATED TOMORROW

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

NEWNAN, Ga., May 27.—Rites for Ronald Young Jr., 7, who died in a Baltimore hospital yesterday after a long illness, will be held at 10 o'clock Monday morning at the graveside in Oak Hill cemetery here. Deacons in Newnan's Central Baptist church, of which the boy's father, the Rev. Ronald C. S. Young, is pastor, will serve as pallbearers.

The Rev. Mr. Young, before coming here several years ago, served as pastor of Jackson Hill Baptist church in Atlanta.

The child is survived by his parents; one sister, Nan Young, and his grandmother, Mrs. Kerb Williams, of Thomaston.

JOHN M. ANGLIN SR., EDITOR, SUCCUMBS

Death Occurs as Members of Family Go to Funeral of Brother.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

LUMPKIN, Ga., May 27.—John M. Anglin Sr., 68, editor of the Stewart-Webster Journal at nearby Richland, died of a heart attack at his home here today, three days after the death of his brother, a Maryland newspaperman.

William Henry Anglin, lifelong newspaperman and editor and publisher of the Laurel (Md.) Democrat, died Wednesday at his home near Washington.

Editor John M. Anglin, detained here by business, was unable to attend his brother's funeral, set for 3 o'clock this afternoon, but other members of the family went to Laurel for the rites. They were notified of his death, and were en route home this afternion.

The Anglin brothers were natives of Marion county and later lived in Sumter county. The Richland editor moved here from Americus about 30 years ago.

Editor John M. Anglin is survived by his wife and four sons, Adrian and John M. Anglin Jr., of Lumpkin, and Byron C. and Leonard Anglin, of Nashville, Tennessee.

Funeral plans have not been completed, pending the return of members of the family.

Frank S. Leavitt, better known as "Man Mountain Dean," professional wrestler, is the new commander, elected last night.

RITES WILL HONOR DEAD OF U.S. WARS

Ceremonies Slated Tuesday in Marietta and Fitzgerald.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

MARIETTA, Ga., May 27.—Living veterans of all American wars will assemble here Tuesday to pay tribute to their dead comrades in annual Memorial Day exercises in Marietta national cemetery.

Adjutant Charles William Bernhardt, of Lee Roosevelt Camp No. 6, United Spanish War Veterans, today announced the camp, its auxiliaries and the Sons of Spanish War Veterans will meet in the Red Men's Wigwam here at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon to perfect plans for the event.

William G. McRae, representing the Veterans of Foreign Wars, will deliver the memorial address at exercises in the cemetery, following a parade around the square.

In Line of March.

Captain W. J. Black, of the 122d Infantry, Georgia National Guard, will serve as marshal for the parade, which will be led by the 22d Infantry band from Fort McPherson. Other units to be included in the line of march will be a detachment from the 22d Infantry; Company "M" of the 122d Infantry; the United Spanish War Veterans, of which W. T. Stradley is commander; the Sons of Spanish War Veterans, with Bruce Dean commanding; Veterans of Foreign Wars, of which Charles A. Plunkert is commander; American Legion, with R. L. McClesky as commander; Sons of American Legion; Disabled American Veterans; a bus-load of disabled veterans from Hospital 48, Atlanta; the Colonial Rangers with their drum and bugle corps, with Major T. M. Davenport commanding, and Troop 1 of the Boy Scouts.

Ceremonial Program.

The program at the cemetery will be as follows:

Invocation, the Rev. Charles Wood; salute to the colors; "Battle Hymn of the Republic," by the 22d Infantry band; "Lincoln's Gettyburg's Address," by Major Glenn Giles; recitation, "The Blue and the Gray," by Miss E. Stewart, of the Ladies' Auxiliary, G. A. R.; "My Country 'Tis of Thee," by the 22d Infantry band; vocal solo, Mrs. Virginia Rambo Benson; "The Bivouac of the Dead," by W. T. Stradley.

Address, William G. McRae.

Benediction, the Rev. George Brown; "The Star Spangled Banner," by 22d Infantry band; salute, by detachment of the 22d Infantry; "Taps," by a trumpeter from the 22d Infantry, and decoration of the graves.

EDITORS DEDICATE HUGE PAPER MILL AT LUFKIN, TEXAS

6-Million-Dollar Concern Nearing Completion Will Be One of Several to Make Newsprint of Pulp

LUFKIN, Texas, May 27.—(AP)—In the shadows of the pine trees from which a new industry will spring in the fall, southern newspaper publishers and editors today dedicated a $6,000,000 paper mill, the first of its kind in the south.

The big mill, which may eventually become one of several to convert pine pulp into newsprint, is nearing completion. Paper rolls will be shipped from the mill in the early fall, E. L. Kurth, president, assured newspapermen who gave the plant its financial backing.

C. B. Dealey, publisher of the Dallas News, called it the dawn of a new day in Texas and the south.

High tribute to the late Dr. Charles Holmes Herty, and Francis P. Garvan, whose work resulted in the paper mill, was paid by Mr. Dealey.

A plaque was dedicated to the memory of the two men—Dr. Herty, who worked out the formula for the manufacture of paper from pine pulp, and Dr. Garvan, the chemical foundation leader.

Rev. Theodore Will To Observe Silver Anniversary in Priesthood

Rector, Recalling Events Leading to Atlanta Charge, Believes in Fate.

By YOLANDE GWIN.

The Rev. Theodore St. Clair Will, rector of All Saints' Episcopal church, who celebrates his silver anniversary in the priesthood tomorrow, believes in fate.

When he was living in Hampton, Va., as rector of historic St. John's, he tuned in on a radio program of the Tuskegee College choir which was singing "I Know De Lawd Laid His Hand on Me."

Just then the door bell rang. It was three vestrymen from All Saints' Episcopal church here, to offer him the charge of their church. He said yesterday:

"The coincidence of circumstances was so unusual that I couldn't help but feel that the Lord had really laid his hand on me to accept the call to the church here. My year and a half here has been one of the happiest in my life, and it is with deep feeling that I prepare to observe my silver jubilee here with my newly found friends."

In recognition of his jubilee celebration, the church wardens and vestrymen of All Saints' church will entertain at an elaborate reception at Egleston Hall tomorrow night in honor of the rector and Mrs. Will. There will be an 11 o'clock communion sermon by Bishop Mikell, honoring Mr. Will tomorrow.

Since his residence here, Mr. Will has endeared himself to a wide circle of friends, both in and out of the Episcopal faith and this year has been in constant demand for graduation exercises.

NATIONAL INCOME PUT AT 21 BILLION

Increase of Two Per Cent Noted for First Quarter.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—The Commerce Department estimated today that national income in the first four months of 1939 totaled $21,561,000,000, a gain of 2 per cent over the corresponding period of last year.

A continuation of the same increase over 1938 would result in a national income this year of $65,600,000,000, compared with $65,200,000,000 for 1938.

Included in national income are all payments to individuals—wages, salaries, dividends, interest, income from enterprise and relief payments.

The seasonally adjusted index of income payments dropped from 84.1 in March to 82.6 in April, but is now 3 per cent above the 1938 low of 80.4, recorded last May.

'UNION SHOP' HEARINGS DELAYED IN HARLAN

PINEVILLE, Ky., May 27.—(AP) Circuit Judge James M. Gilbert today postponed until June 7 a hearing on a petition to enjoin Harlan coal field operators from signing "union shop" contracts with the United Mine Workers' Union (CIO.)

The defense attorney, Joe Snyder, counsel for six Harlan and Bell county mining companies not affiliated with the Harlan County Coal Operators' Association, said he had not had time to prepare his case.

CLEARED OF MURDER.

DE LAND, Fla., May 27.—(AP)—A circuit court jury late today acquitted Earl and Everett Blackwelder of first-degree murder charges growing out of the slaying of Lee Snell, negro driver of a taxicab that struck and killed their 12-year-old brother, Benny Blackwelder.

LAW SCHOOL HERE HONORS 4 NEWSMEN

McGill and Paschall Will Receive Degree of Doctor of Laws.

Two Atlantans will be among four newspaper executives who will receive honorary degrees from the Atlanta Law school at the 49th annual commencement at 8:15 o'clock Wednesday night in the Woman's Club auditorium.

The degree of doctor of laws will be conferred on: Ralph E. McGill, executive editor of The Constitution; John Paschall, managing editor of the Atlanta Journal; James G. Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville Banner, and Kenneth C. Hogate, president of the Wall Street Journal, New York.

McGill From Vanderbilt.

McGill attended McCallie Preparatory school on Chattanooga's famous Missionary Ridge and then entered Vanderbilt University in the fall of 1917 where he played football under the late Coach Dan McGugin. His education there was interrupted by the World War, but he returned following the war. Later he was a reporter and sports editor on the Nashville Banner. Joining The Constitution in 1929, he became sports editor in 1931 and executive editor in 1938.

Paschall was graduated from Vanderbilt University with an A. B. degree in 1901. Beginning as a reporter on the Atlanta Journal, he has been city editor, managing editor, a director and associate editor.

Was Head of A. N. P. A.

Graduating with an A. B. degree from Vanderbilt University in 1916, Stahlman did graduate work at the University of Chicago. He began as a reporter on the Nashville Banner in 1913 and became successively city editor, executive director and president and publisher. He served for several years as president of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. He also is a member of the board of trustees of Vanderiblt University.

Hogate was graduated with an A. B. degree from DePauw University in 1918 and was a reporter on Cleveland and Detroit newspapers. After becoming manager of the Detroit office of the Wall Street Journal, he was moved to New York as managing editor, vice president, general manager and company president in 1933. He is president of the Financial Press Companies of America, Dow-Jones & Company, Barron's Publishing Company and the Philadelphia News Bureau. He is a trustee of DePauw University.

Schell Will Give Oration.

McGill will deliver the principal address at the commencement exercises. Sidney T. Schell Jr., will give the class oration. List of graduates and winners of prizes and medals will not be announced until after the final faculty meeting tomorrow, Hamilton Douglas, dean, said.

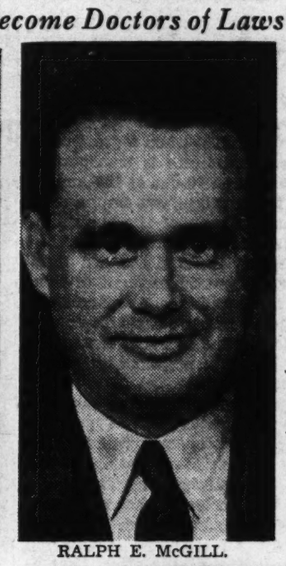

The following graduate students will receive the degree of master of laws:

Roscoe Jackson Ailor, Hugh William Dobbs, Lawrence Daniel Duke, Louis Nathan Gordon, Robert Everette Kreeger, Preston Brooks Mayson, Edwin Robert McGowan, Rupert Leo Murphy, Felix Harrison Nicholson, Roger Austin Prestwood, Horace Sandiford, Edwin Willard Steele, Jackson Daniel Thomas, George Spencer Turner, William Thomas Vardaman, all of Atlanta.

Roosevelt Digs Out Old Clothes For Quiet Week End at Hyde Park

President Looks Over Family Estate Which Will Be Opened Two Weeks Hence to Visiting British Royalty; No Changes Are Planned.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., May 27.—(AP)—President Roosevelt dug out some old clothes and began an extended but quiet week end today by looking over his family home and estate, which will be opened two weeks hence to visiting British royalty.

Mr. Roosevelt came from Washington early this morning on his special train.

Mr. Roosevelt expected to occupy his regular pew at the church tomorrow morning. It is the same tiny ivy-covered church where King George and Queen Elizabeth of England will worship within a fortnight. Since it will hold scarcely more than 200 persons, parishioners were in something of a dither because members of the royal and presidential parties appeared likely to claim half the seats.

No material changes have been made in the sturdy stone and stucco home of the Roosevelts in anticipation of entertaining the British sovereigns.

Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, the President's 84-year-old mother, greeted her son when he arrived this morning. She will be co-hostess, with the President's wife, to the King and Queen.

DRIVER, 20, FINED $95 ON SPEEDING CHARGES

George Sparks, 20, of 549 Seal place, N. E., was assessed $95 in fines yesterday in recorder's court when found guilty of charges of speeding at 85 miles an hour, running through three red lights and over two stop signs.

A $12 fine for reckless driving was suspended.

ROCHESTER TO PAY MAYO FINAL HONOR

Public Funeral for World-Famous Surgeon Will Be Held Monday.

ROCHESTER, Minn., May 27.—(AP)—Public funeral services for Dr. Charles H. Mayo, world-famous surgeon who died Friday in Chicago, will be conducted in Calvary Episcopal church here at 4:30 p. m. Monday with Dr. Guy C. Menefee, pastor of the church, officiating.

Business will be suspended in the city from 3 to 5 p. m. under proclamation by Mayor Paul A. Grassle.

The body will lie in state from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m. Sunday in the Mayo Clinic lobby, which is on the approximate site of the house where Dr. Mayo was born.

Active pallbearers will be members of the clinic board of governors.

The approximately 200 men who are members of the consulting staff of Mayo Clinic and Mayo Foundation, will be honorary pallbearers.

MASONIC REUNION TO HEAR CLAUDY

Washington Man To Speak at Gathering Tuesday.

Carl H. Claudy, executive secretary of the National Masonic Service Association in Washington, D. C., will speak at a reunion of the Masons of Georgia at the Masonic temple at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. Paul Weir, president of the Masonic Service Association of Fulton and DeKalb Counties, is sponsoring the event in cooperation of Clem R. Jolly, president of the DeKalb Masonic Association and President J. J. Bugg of the Temple Officers' Association.

Claudy is described as a Masonic orator, author, scholar and lecturer. An officer of the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia, he is an honorary member of the grand lodges of six other states, and author of many Masonic plays several of which have been presented in Atlanta. He also has published many books and treatises on Masonic subjects.

'ENEMY' DRIVEN BACK INTO SEA FROM HAWAII

HONOLULU, May 27.—(AP)—Twenty thousand American soldiers ended two weeks of mimic warfare today victorious in their fight against an imaginary invader.

Unofficially, army officers said four enemy divisions apparently were unable to capture heavily fortified Oahu island (on which Honolulu stands) under perfect landing conditions and in the absence of the United States fleet. The enemy landed on the north and southwest shores but was driven back into the sea.

MISSISSIPPIANS TURN TO HOME GARDENING

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., May 27.—(AP)—The Mississippi Delta, land of "typical" southern plantation, is turning to live-at-home farming.

Mississippi State College's extension division announced today that the 100,000 tenant families in the area were co-operating "nearly 100 per cent" in a home garden program launched by county agents and planters this year.

EAST POINT MASONS TO CONFER DEGREES

ATLANTA, GA., MAY 28, 1939.

According to Jefferson . . .

Speakers, commentators, politicians, all have a pretty trick of quoting carefully selected extracts from the writings or sayings of the great men of the yesteryears. Scanning the annotated speeches of some enshrined father of the country, they find a few words, a sentence or a paragraph which, at least on the surface, lends support to some argument they sponsor today. Then, with the convincing phrase, "As Jefferson said—" or "As Washington said—" or "As Franklin said—" they confidently produce the alleged clinching quotation and rest content their point has been proven for eternity.

In some cases those who use the honored dead as a sort of appellate court for their own pleadings, go so far as to put their own words in the mouths of the ancient ones. Something like this, "Were Jefferson alive today he would say . . . " And so on.

They forget, however, that almost any man who, during his lifetime, figured prominently in public life, said or wrote so many things it is almost always possible to find a paragraph, somewhere in the record, which will support almost any contention. Too, these former greats, like all men, of today and of the centuries gone by, changed their opinions in the course of a lifetime. No man with courage, who thinks and studies, can possibly hold every idea and opinion of his past inflexibly. Conditions change and viewpoints change, too. Each man in his thinking progresses and, if he is honest, he oftimes admits that previous, perhaps thoughtless and uninformed, statements of his, were not quite correct.

Of late there has been a particular tendency to quote from Thomas Jefferson, in support of those theories of government and public finance which find fullest flower today in the policies of the New Deal and in the fiscal programs of the White House. Jefferson has been quoted as an ardent supporter of fiscal dreams similar to the "spending for prosperity" theory. He has been cited as a man who would have approved an unbalanced national budget and a federal debt mounting, year after year, ever higher and higher in the ethereal realms of the billions.

Yet, with a little research, it is easy to quote Jefferson in utter refutation of all these ideas. The words of Jefferson may, with perfect logic, be used to contradict the words of Jefferson cited on the other side of the argument.

For instance, he wrote to Madison:

". . . with respect to debts . . . there are two laws of finance which I think should be rigidly adhered to. One, never to borrow without laying a tax sufficient to pay principal and interest within a fixed period, and I would fix the period at 10 years . . . two, never to borrow or tax without appropriating the money to its specific object."

That does not sound like indorsement of unbalanced budgets or untrammeled spending of federal funds.

Recently there has been much discussion on the question of whether the United States shall admit, to this country, 20,000 refugee children from central Europe. These are children of many races, of different religions, united only in the common bonds of homelessness, suffering and despair. What would Jefferson say to this? Well, on the question of immigration, he said:

"And shall we refuse the unhappy fugitives from the distress that hospitality which the savages of the wilderness extended to our fathers arriving in this land? Shall oppressed humanity find no asylum on this globe?"

And it might be the voice of President Roosevelt speaking today, instead of that of Jefferson more than a century ago, when we read these words:

". . . the moral principles and conventional usages which have heretofore been the bond of civilized nations . . . have now given way to force, the law of barbarians, and the nineteenth century dawns with the vandalism of the fifth."

If Jefferson, Washington, Franklin and all the revered dead are to be quoted today on one side of political argument, it is only just that they be quoted, just as logically and just as convincingly, on the other.

Paying Twice

The difficulty of attempting to build a merchant marine, with subsidies, when a great percentage of American commerce is transported in foreign ships, and when 70 out of 100 Americans travel under foreign flags, was emphasized in a recent Savannah speech of the chairman of the United States Maritime Commission.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land stressed that American vessels carry but 30 per cent of this nation's foreign trade, and a correspondingly smaller share of goods imported to this country. This is true despite the fact that rates and services are being made comparable or better than those of other countries.

Admiral Land does not speak from the selfish standpoint when he asks that greater patronage be given vessels operating under the flag of the United States. Many national factors are involved in a strong American merchant marine and it is necessary that the commerce fleet be adequately supported, either by traffic or by subsidy. Or both.

Of primary importance is the effect that a withdrawal of foreign vessels, say in the event of war, would have on the national economy. While foreign trade is but a small item in the total national production, it does constitute the balance between prosperous days and lean years. For this reason it is necessary that the nation have available sufficient ships to carry all the necessary goods to countries not at war, but barred from their normal markets.

Also of grave import to the United States is the maintenance of a merchant fleet as an auxiliary arm of the navy. It is a prime requisite of an efficient navy that there be adequate cargo and fuel vessels for service of supply. These vessels must be staunch, speedy and capably manned. Battered tramps and hastily built wooden ships are worse than useless.

There is little or no reason why a greater volume of American goods cannot be shipped in American vessels, or why more Americans cannot travel on American ships. It seems rather silly to pay in taxes money for the support of a merchant marine and at the same time pay vast sums to foreign companies for the transportation of American goods. It is not a matter of nationalism, but of common sense.

Interstate Tariff

The constantly increasing demands of state governments for the right to levy tariffs on interstate commerce has never been better exemplified than in the bill introduced by Congressman Malcolm Tarver, which seeks to require postal authorities to report shipments of cigarets into states taxing this commodity.

The fact that the bill apparently was introduced with the Georgia situation in mind makes the proposal all the more regrettable. While it might be claimed the proposed act is solely designed to prevent tax avoidance, it actually strikes at the foundation of the free trade system among the states, under which the United States has been able to create the highest standard of living the world has ever known.

More than that, the bill opens the way for an increasing federal interference with the mails, which today are inviolate except under certain well-defined statutes.

The whole question of cigaret taxes levied by the states is highlighted by the proposal of Congressman Tarver, emphasizing the great need for a national tax convention at which the whole question of the taxation fields of the federal and state governments could be solved, and to some extent, state taxes could be equalized.

The attempts of states, such as Georgia, to collect high imposts on cigarets and like articles, and to enforce collection of this tax in violation of free trade rights, is slowly adding to the bars being erected between the states, to the harm of all states. And it is with ill grace that Georgia and other southern states should seek to build these bars, at the same time bitterly condemning the action of other states in seeking to exclude oleomargarine and other southern products. Both are, in effect, tariffs between the states and, although different in substance, are alike in principle.

However much it may be desirable to add to the revenue of the state of Georgia, the Tarver bill is not a desirable way.

Reasonable Request

A reasonable request has been made of all owners of dogs and cats in the county by Dr. Roy W. McGee, county health officer, and Police Lieutenant T. W. Cawthorn, who ask that the animals be inoculated at once against rabies. Increase in the number of rabies-infected dogs and cats prompted the request. While the increase has not yet reached serious propotions, the officials indicated they will take whatever steps are necessary to prevent a serious spread of the disease.

The law states clearly that dogs and cats are required to be immunized at least once every 12 months. But compliance with the law is not the only factor involved in this request. It is a health precaution that all good citizens cannot help but appreciate. A rabies-infected dog or cat running loose is just as dangerous as a ferocious lion or tiger. The menace to life is just as great.

While it is true that anti-rabies serum helps to combat the disease, at the same time no human being would want to have on his conscience the bitter realization that his neglect caused some innocent person to suffer torture and possibly death.

Britain might as well make up to the Russian comrade. When the lights go out in Europe, there will be no time for introductions.

Those who might have used the now-abandoned Florida canal will have to take the long way around. But what is time to an alligator?

Here and there a patch of light appears in the stygian darkness of Europe. The Danes have agreed not to attack Germany.

We laugh at the Nazi who is ordered to give up cream on his strawberries—we, the inventors of the ersatz or stucco shortcake.

Texas admirers have given Mr. Farley a white horse. With a few plumes, a spotless shield and a motto, Genial Jim would seem to be set for '40.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

GEORGIA'S GREATEST CROP Georgia's greatest crop is going on the market this month and next. That is the crop of graduates, high school and college, who are being given their diplomas by schools of the state.

Many years ago the state realized that an educated citizen was a superior citizen. Today there is very grave concern on the part of educators, not only in Georgia but in the entire nation, concerning the problem of school reform. There is a growing number who think our public school system might be revised.

It is estimated that of the several thousand students who will graduate this year from Georgia high schools less than 20 per cent will go on to college. This in itself is not alarming.

Time was when more than 90 per cent of Georgia's high school graduates attended college. That time was not so long ago. In 1905 there were in Georgia eight accredited high schools. More than 90 per cent of the graduates went to college. Only a few hundred attended high schools then.

If one considers that the decade from 1900 to 1910 was one in which there was little education available in Georgia, one better can understand some of the things that happened in Georgia and why Georgia is a fertile field for demagogic political effort.

The children of that decade now are the adults of Georgia and not many of them went to school.

There has been, of course, a steady increase in the number and the efficiency of the high schools of the state. It still is possible, however, to find many rural sections where specific reform is needed in the supervision of schools.

THE SEVENTEEN PER CENT Today we have many, many accredited high schools and a large number of graduates. Last year only 17 per cent of those graduating from high school went on to college.

Another important bit of school statistics reveals that of the 17 per cent which did enter college about 43 failed to continue through college.

In other words, our college factories are finding about half of their raw material inadequate or are failing properly to utilize it.

The question then becomes whether or not we have not paid too much attention to the 17 per cent and too little to the 83 per cent. The fact that 83 per cent do not go to college is in itself not alarming. Perhaps they ought not to go to college. Almost without exception any sincere college president will say that 25 per cent to 35 per cent of his undergraduates get so little from college and apparently want so little they have no real business in college.

It is an inescapable fact that a great many students go to college because their parents want them to go or because it is the social thing to do or because there isn't anything else to do.

It is also an inescapable fact that while these drones are going to college there are a great many sincere boys and girls with a burning ambition to attend college who cannot go because of lack of funds or opportunity. This ought to be corrected.

Until a comparatively recent date there was not much vocational education in the high schools. Today there is not nearly enough. The surface only has been scratched. The 83 per cent that were not going on to college received practically nothing except a preparation to attend a college they were never going to attend.

It seems to be a fair question to ask whether or not this 83 per cent is not just as valuable to the state as the 17 per cent which enters college?

Industrialization is rather sure to continue and there seems to be no good reason why those students who do not want to go to college but who wish instead to be prepared to go on to the farm or into the skilled trades ought to have high school training which will supply it.

There certainly is no good reason to train all high school students only for college when only a few of them are going there.

THE CROWDED CITIES Fulton county has about eight thousand "paupers." There are a few counties in Georgia where almost 50 per cent of the population receive either surplus commodities or some form of relief.

The cities are crowded. The rural communities have always sent a proportion of their high school graduates to the cities but since the depression and the continuing collapse of the farm as a way of life, more and more of them have come to the cities. The result is that today in Atlanta, and in many other counties in Georgia, there are five or six hungry boys and girls waiting to fill any job which is open.

Not many months ago the city schools of Atlanta had a survey which showed that about a thousand of their graduates of the year before were unemployed. They must have some experience or training to get jobs and they can't get experience or training without a job.

The eroded farms and those small towns which are drying up are sending in untrained boys and girls who are eager and worthwhile but who haven't the training. They are added to those the city already has.

It seems fairly obvious that we need diversification in this crop which is Georgia's most valuable one. The schools, like almost every other agency of government and civil life, find themselves confronted with new conditions brought about by economic changes since the World War. For that reason we will hear more and more about revision of the school system.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

God gave us many blessings
To use, with common sense,
But blessings turn to evil
When enjoyment's too intense.

Sunshine may bring sunburn,
Exercise can kill,
Food can cause repletion,
Beauty drug the will.

So let us use good judgment,
Ere honey turn to gall,
God save us from intemp'rance,
And from fanatics all.

Life Needs Balance.

Fanaticism, it becomes plainer and plainer every day, is the root of most of the evil in the lives of mankind. There is no greater danger, either to the individual or the state, than over-indulgence. In 'most anything.

The trouble is that fanaticism breeds fanaticism. Someone, or some faction, allows the pendulum to swing too far in one direction and someone else gets all excited and pushes it just as far, or further, in the other way. And both are evil.

Pride of nationality is a good thing, so long as it is confined to proper, clean and decent ambition to contribute something worth while to your nation's achievements.

As soon, however, as your national pride runs away with you and you try to add lustre to your nation at the expense of another it becomes an evil. Whether the "you" in the case happens to be a powerful dictator or a humble citizen. Because the evil is in the mind, and in the intent, and the power or position that measure the results are merely the conditions that spread that result either far or near.

It is all right, for instance, to be proud of the United States and to exult in the fine citizenship of most of the people in this country. But when the reverse of the shield comes into play, making you brand men and women of other nations with derogatory labels, "Wops," "Hunkies," "Huns," "Limeys," you are poisoning your own mind and laying the first of a dangerous powder trail that may lead to disaster.

Remember that there are good people in all countries of the world and that they are, in the final analysis, just "good folks," like you and your neighbors.

When Hatred Spawns.

It may be a virtue to dislike avowed enemies within the country. But when that dislike grows to bitter hatred and when you would resort to illegal means to destroy them, you become no better than they. The way to uphold American ideals is to live them, to practice them. And there can be no excuse for stooping to un-American methods just because the other fellow did. Two wrongs never made a right and it doesn't help the cause of understanding and peace to knock a chip off the other guy's shoulder because he made a pass at your chip first.

Just because you heard an absurd individual with a somewhat Semitic cast of features pouring out communistic ravings from a soapbox in Greenwich Village is no excuse for filling your heart with hatred for the entire Jewish race. As intelligent to hate all Americans because some have been guilty of revolting crime.

Because some folks allowed themselves to become dangerously sunburned is no reason for you to hide from all sunshine. Because somebody overate until acute indigestion brought him to the grave, is not a reason why you should starve yourself. Death would be the result, just the same.

Because men have made themselves seriously ill by drinking too much water is no reason why you should never drink it. Nor because some weaklings become dipsomaniacs is it any reason why you shouldn't enjoy any decent beverage, in reason.

Nor, because a few religious fanatics overdo the emotional side of their religion and make more or less neighborhood nuisances of themselves, is it any reason why others should resort to kidnaping and flogging.

The world will never become the place it should be until all men learn temperance in all ways of life and are able to restrain emotions which would lead them into outlawed activities.

Life demands balance. The men or women who would gain the greatest joy in life, the finest peace and make of themselves the best individuals, must eschew all fanaticism and must so order their lives that every blessing, every activity, every emotion, is limited to its proper proportion of the whole.

There is practically no evil that does not spring from over-emphasis on, or over-indulgence in, something that, in correct usage, would have been good.

May the fates give us all, some day soon, that sweet reasonableness that will make us good folks for all the other folks to live with.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Thursday, May 28, 1914:

"Kansas City, May 27.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States (southern) went on record late today as opposed to the use of tobacco among clergymen, candidates for the ministry and church officials."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Tuesday, May 28, 1889:

"It is stated that Texas has never had a native-born governor. This is as it should be. The great majority of Texans are Georgians, and that is the secret of the prosperity of Texas."

THE PROMISED LAND?

Once again the Chamberlain government lowers the prestige of the British Empire and shakes the confidence of the world in its integrity, by its betrayal of a dependent people who trusted in its promises. Who can forget the wave of enthusiasm which swept over the allied nations in 1917 when Arthur Balfour, speaking for the British government, proclaimed the opening of Palestine as a "national home" for the Jewish people. It satisfied the sense of justice and harmonized with the highest sentiments of millions of the peoples of the world, seemed to be the fulfillment of the dreams and prayers of a homeless people, who had made their priceless contributions to the homes of well-nigh every other nation.

The Balfour declaration was characteristic of the British political genius at its best. It would be an interesting question to raise, what part it played in winning the World War for the allies. I am thinking of something more than that, it focused and intensified the powerful influence of the Jews around the world back of the allied armies. That proclamation, like the eloquent utterances of our own President Wilson, helped to lift the objectives of the war out of the muck and mud of the selfish national interests, and give that bloody conflict a spiritual goal.

After that the purpose of the war was not merely to regain a French or an Italian irredenta. Zion now became the irredenta to be reclaimed for humanity. No really great cause can ever be the exclusive possession of any one nation or one race. The most sacred rights are human rights, and call to the consciences of all men to defend them. The loftiest ideals are those which challenge the depths of human aspirations, and appeal to the latent powers of all men. It is for this reason that we in America claim the right to make our protest, when a British government of today seeks to annul a solemn promise made by a former British government to return the home of the Hebrew fathers to their children.

The Chamberlain government in their latest "white paper," seeking again to "appease" the terrorists that threaten propose to turn over Palestine to the Arabs. Deliver to that backward civilization the control of the Jews, who trusting a solemn promise, have invested their money, their genius for building, their hopes and their lives to transform a barren land into a modern miracle of prosperity.

By What Title?

Just here we face the crux of this whole question. By what right does any people hold possession of any land? There is no inhabited civilization today whose soil has not been stained by the blood of conquest. It is too late in history to go back and reverse the arbitrament of the sword. While we can not question ourselves or others as to how we acquired the land which we proudly call "Fatherland," has not the hour of civilization come when we must ask another more significant question. What have you done with the land which you possess?

By that test what a clear and unanswerable title the Hebrew people would have to Palestine. Think of the Land of Canaan, a tiny bit of a land, which they took and made immortal in the reverent memories of men as "The Holy Land." With a genius for religion unmatched in the story of nations, they hallowed their hills into high altars, sanctified their villages and towns into sacred shrines, a rendezvous for the pilgrim feet of the world, and made holy the waters of their streams and lakes for the baptism of the faithful of every nation. Can we debate the right of a people to live in a land, who have produced a living literature, which has welded every mountain and valley, every village and city, to the thought of God?

Terrorism.

The Balfour declaration said: "His Majesty's government views with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people." Now all that these people ask is that this promise be kept. They have never asked that any of the people living there should be dispossessed. They entered with no weapons in their hands and no martial banners proclaiming a conquest. They bought every foot of land which they hold from those who were eager to sell. This is no beggar people standing at the door of civilization asking for alms. They bought a barren land, which for centuries had been neglected and denuded, and by intelligent thrift they have restored the soil, discovered unknown resources, raised the standard of living among the Arabs, and made Palestine not only a blessing to themselves but to others.

Let it be clearly understood, Palestine has become a problem, not because of the revolt of the Arabs living there, but by reason of the outside. Stimulated by German and Italian influences, they have terrorized Palestine, in order to awaken British fears for the safety of the Suez canal, and other of her vital interests in the eastern Mediterranean. The question is: Must the Jews in Palestine be sacrificed like the Czecho-Slovakians to the vacillating timidity of the present British government?

GENTLE ART OF CONSPIRACY

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY.

Conspiracy is a fine art. It is best practiced by those who start in their early youth. Like playing scales on the piano, it takes long and heart-breaking practice and only those succeed who not only learn the technique but are divinely gifted with genius.

Trotzky, for instance, is the Paderewski of conspiracy. He tops them all. In his long and amazing career, he has helped to upset a powerful government; he brought a world war to the verge of disaster; he created a new government, a new army, a new foreign policy. He has lived in exile for more than a decade, without a passport or any other legal right to be on this earth. Yet, governments have to meet in solemn assembly to decide what to do about him. Stalin admits by his murders and purges that Trotzky's power today is as great as his own. According to Stalin, Trotzky sits in Mexico wrecking plants in the heart of Soviet Russia, formulating deals with Hitler and the Emperor of Japan, controlling millions of men all over the world.

If one-tenth of 1 per cent of Stalin's accusations are true, Trotzky is today the most powerful man on earth. Now that is first-rate conspiracy. It has art, genius, technique, color, design and thrill.

GRADE B CONSPIRATORS

The passport ring, who were recently convicted in New York, were pretty good conspirators—Grade B, I would say. For instance, that idea of getting the names of dead children and working up to maturity, so that passports might be available, is good technique, although it seems to me that too much energy was expended on that job. The conservation of energy is important in conspiracies. Also, they took too many people into the job. That is always an error, for as any conspirator knows, every man has a sweetheart with whom, by the laws of nature, he will sooner or later quarrel. She, also by the laws of nature, will sooner or later blab to her next sweetheart, who may be an FBI G-Man or a Dies committee investigator, or a capitalistic newspaperman. Conspirators must beware of sweethearts.

General Krivitzky, who is now alias Ginsburg to the Communists who have become anti-Semitic for the occasion, must have been a fairly good conspirator because he got away before Stalin could kill him. But Earl Browder is not so good because he laid himself wide open when he permitted his stooges to attack Krivitzky. That made it possible for that gentleman to say, "What, I'm a bluff? Why, your own sister worked for me in Europe under the pseudonym of Gene Montgomery."

That is very bad, because that can be a provable fact and it must be true because neither Mr. Browder nor the sister have denied it. All that the Communists have done to date is to call Krivitsky Ginsburg. Well, Stalin goes under a phoney name; so did Lenin; so do all the heroes of the Russian conspiracy. That is no answer to anything among conspirators. Even Dutch Schultz had a phoney name.

SILLY CONSPIRATOR

Now General Moseley is a silly conspirator. He has neither science nor art. Like most Americans, it goes against his grain, so he does it badly. The crazy maze of tricks which the Dies committee discloses is almost as silly as Tommy Corcoran's political maneuverings. Simply stated, it is the bunk.

In the first place, no conspirators send identical reports to 40 or more persons. Even marked "Strictly Confidential," such reports will be seen by an infinite number of persons. Everyone has had the experience of being told the most amazing stories in the strictest confidence. And everyone has repeated these stories in the strictest confidence.

Secondly, General Moseley should have known that even Republicans will stand by President Roosevelt if anyone attempts to unseat him by force, because even a retired army officer might be expected to understand that we are Americans first and that we have no desire for Central American elections. We still prefer the ballot.

Now, the Communists are much smarter. They do not try to unseat the President by force. Instead, they seek to steal the government. That is sound conspiratorial practice. Stalin did that to Lenin and Trotsky by taking a key but superficially unimportant position. Hitler did that to Hindenburg and von Papen. Chiang Kai-shek did that to the Kuomintang in China. Get in and grab power.

RANK AMATEURS

While the Moseley conspirators are writing each other letters, the Communists take over the WPA and the left wingers take over the National Labor Relations Board and the left wing New Dealers beguile the President. There is first-class conspiracy. Moseley and his gang are rank amateurs.

There is this about a conspiracy that few men understand: The conspirators must be selfless fanatics in a cause. For instance, 15 Communists can go into the American Youth Congress and walk away with it. They do it so skillfully that many sincere anti-Communists are not aware that they have become stooges. A handful of Communists can control any large organization if they set their minds to it because they work hard, they are fanatical, they do not quarrel among themselves. In a word, they know where they are going.

Their opponents have no technique. Take a group of business men, like the coal operators. They can stand together for a couple of months but they soon fall apart. Each man has his own ideas and his own motive. A conspiracy among business men is impossible beacuse each one will report the details to board of directors, his lawyer, his public relations counsel and his wife. Soon enough Paul Mallon or Messrs. Allen and Pearson will report it in their columns. Or Raymond Clapper will philosophize upon it from the lofty unrealities of Washington. You can't conspire about anything that way. That is why business men cannot even fix their prices: There is always a chiseler among them. They have no taste for the thing.

WHY IT DIDN'T WORK

And the New Deal tries all sorts of conspiracies. For instance, that business appeasement policy of Harry Hopkins was a vast conspiracy on a grandiose scale. It might have made the secretary of commerce President of the United States. All sorts of people were in on it. But it did not work because no one was fanatical about it. Who really cared whether Harry Hopkins became President or not? Everybody knew that the President would take no steps to achieve recovery because that would give the Republicans the 1940 election. To achieve recovery, he would have to admit six years of errors and he could no more do that than he could accept Hugh Johnson and Mark Sullivan as advisers.

As a matter of fact, the President, when left to his own devices, is a better man than most of the conspirators who serve him. His technique is simple: He asks a naive, childlike question and the populace stands in awe at his majestic wisdom and the polls show that his popularity is up a point. For instance, that question addressed to Senator O'Mahoney about why the flow of capital has stopped. The President knows the answer. It is not necessary to drag Mr. Alfred Sloan down to Washington or to pile economist upon economist to discover the reason. The President's pants presser could tell him what it is all about. The answer is that if a man puts one dollar into an enterprise, he expects it to give him one dollar and six cents after taxes are paid. If he cannot get that extra six cents in one year, he does not put that dollar into anything. He holds on to the dollar. If, after taxes are paid, he can only get 99 cents for that dollar, he hides it.

The President knows that answer. But he smiles and asks the question anyhow. And a solemn congressional committee sits majestically and listens to profound platitudes which provide nothing new to the sum of human knowledge. And learned scribes record the platitudes and comment upon them. And the people gape in awe. There is first-class conspiratorial technique.

HE TALKS TOO MUCH

Father Coughlin never understood conspiracy. He talks too much. He gives himself away. He will some day be taught the value of silence. And he talks badly. For instance, all his ballyhoo about other people's conspiratorial tactics only attracts attention to his own. His followers believe him, but he makes no new converts to his cause because his raucous voice and grating words foul his purpose. Richelieu was smarter than Coughlin. But Richelieu had no radio to tempt him.

I have spent more than 20 years studying conspiracies in the raw and I can testify that they never really succeed. Sooner or later, somebody comes along and hits the conspirators on the head, alive or dead. For instance, Stalin got Trotzky; Chamberlain is getting Hitler; the Dies committee will get those that J. Edgar Hoover has to miss because of the law. Somebody always talks. But worse than that, some practical fellow comes along and steals the conspirators' show. That happened in Spain, when the Republicans and Socialists were robbed of their revolution by Stalin, as both General Krivitzky and Luis D'Araquistain, Loyalist ambassador to Paris, testify. Stalin is not only an excellent conspirator, but a practical capitalistic businessman. It is his practical side that helps him to kill off idealistic conspiracies.

Conspiracies flourish best over nothing. Then there is lots of fun. One can spend years arguing, debating, planning about what will be done when and if the day comes. And how glorious it is if the day never comes. The American Communists are making a mistake as conspirators because they are trying to force the day to arrive. They are so impatient that they form an alliance with Mayor Kelly, of Chicago. If they are not careful, they will soon enough find themselves in Tammany Hall. Then what will be the use of conspiracy? For they will all have jobs on the public pay roll. And that will make them reactionaries opposed to all change.

Seek Apple Reputation

Missouri wants to be known again as the "land of the big red apples." University of Missouri horticulturists are helping state apple producers to increase consumption of Missouri-grown apples. This is expected to bring about an automatic increase in the number of Missouri apple orchards.

ATLANTA, GA., MAY 28, 1939.

According to Jefferson . . .

Speakers, commentators, politicians, all have a pretty trick of quoting carefully selected extracts from the writings or sayings of the great men of the yesteryears. Scanning the annotated speeches of some enshrined father of the country, they find a few words, a sentence or a paragraph which, at least on the surface, lends support to some argument they sponsor today. Then, with the convincing phrase, "As Jefferson said—" or "As Washington said—" or "As Franklin said—" they confidently produce the alleged clinching quotation and rest content their point has been proven for eternity.

In some cases those who use the honored dead as a sort of appellate court for their own pleadings, go so far as to put their own words in the mouths of the ancient ones. Something like this, "Were Jefferson alive today he would say . . . " And so on.

They forget, however, that almost any man who, during his lifetime, figured prominently in public life, said or wrote so many things it is almost always possible to find a paragraph, somewhere in the record, which will support almost any contention. Too, these former greats, like all men, of today and of the centuries gone by, changed their opinions in the course of a lifetime. No man with courage, who thinks and studies, can possibly hold every idea and opinion of his past inflexibly. Conditions change and viewpoints change, too. Each man in his thinking progresses and, if he is honest, he oftimes admits that previous, perhaps thoughtless and uninformed, statements of his, were not quite correct.

Of late there has been a particular tendency to quote from Thomas Jefferson, in support of those theories of government and public finance which find fullest flower today in the policies of the New Deal and in the fiscal programs of the White House. Jefferson has been quoted as an ardent supporter of fiscal dreams similar to the "spending for prosperity" theory. He has been cited as a man who would have approved an unbalanced national budget and a federal debt mounting, year after year, ever higher and higher in the ethereal realms of the billions.

Yet, with a little research, it is easy to quote Jefferson in utter refutation of all these ideas. The words of Jefferson may, with perfect logic, be used to contradict the words of Jefferson cited on the other side of the argument.

For instance, he wrote to Madison:

". . . with respect to debts . . . there are two laws of finance which I think should be rigidly adhered to. One, never to borrow without laying a tax sufficient to pay principal and interest within a fixed period, and I would fix the period at 10 years . . . two, never to borrow or tax without appropriating the money to its specific object."

That does not sound like indorsement of unbalanced budgets or untrammeled spending of federal funds.

Recently there has been much discussion on the question of whether the United States shall admit, to this country, 20,000 refugee children from central Europe. These are children of many races, of different religions, united only in the common bonds of homelessness, suffering and despair. What would Jefferson say to this? Well, on the question of immigration, he said:

"And shall we refuse the unhappy fugitives from the distress that hospitality which the savages of the wilderness extended to our fathers arriving in this land? Shall oppressed humanity find no asylum on this globe?"

And it might be the voice of President Roosevelt speaking today, instead of that of Jefferson more than a century ago, when we read these words:

". . . the moral principles and conventional usages which have heretofore been the bond of civilized nations . . . have now given way to force, the law of barbarians, and the nineteenth century dawns with the vandalism of the fifth."

If Jefferson, Washington, Franklin and all the revered dead are to be quoted today on one side of political argument, it is only just that they be quoted, just as logically and just as convincingly, on the other.

Paying Twice

The difficulty of attempting to build a merchant marine, with subsidies, when a great percentage of American commerce is transported in foreign ships, and when 70 out of 100 Americans travel under foreign flags, was emphasized in a recent Savannah speech of the chairman of the United States Maritime Commission.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land stressed that American vessels carry but 30 per cent of this nation's foreign trade, and a correspondingly smaller share of goods imported to this country. This is true despite the fact that rates and services are being made comparable or better than those of other countries.

Admiral Land does not speak from the selfish standpoint when he asks that greater patronage be given vessels operating under the flag of the United States. Many national factors are involved in a strong American merchant marine and it is necessary that the commerce fleet be adequately supported, either by traffic or by subsidy. Or both.

Of primary importance is the effect that a withdrawal of foreign vessels, say in the event of war, would have on the national economy. While foreign trade is but a small item in the total national production, it does constitute the balance between prosperous days and lean years. For this reason it is necessary that the nation have available sufficient ships to carry all the necessary goods to countries not at war, but barred from their normal markets.

Also of grave import to the United States is the maintenance of a merchant fleet as an auxiliary arm of the navy. It is a prime requisite of an efficient navy that there be adequate cargo and fuel vessels for service of supply. These vessels must be staunch, speedy and capably manned. Battered tramps and hastily built wooden ships are worse than useless.

There is little or no reason why a greater volume of American goods cannot be shipped in American vessels, or why more Americans cannot travel on American ships. It seems rather silly to pay in taxes money for the support of a merchant marine and at the same time pay vast sums to foreign companies for the transportation of American goods. It is not a matter of nationalism, but of common sense.

Interstate Tariff

The constantly increasing demands of state governments for the right to levy tariffs on interstate commerce has never been better exemplified than in the bill introduced by Congressman Malcolm Tarver, which seeks to require postal authorities to report shipments of cigarets into states taxing this commodity.

The fact that the bill apparently was introduced with the Georgia situation in mind makes the proposal all the more regrettable. While it might be claimed the proposed act is solely designed to prevent tax avoidance, it actually strikes at the foundation of the free trade system among the states, under which the United States has been able to create the highest standard of living the world has ever known.

More than that, the bill opens the way for an increasing federal interference with the mails, which today are inviolate except under certain well-defined statutes.

The whole question of cigaret taxes levied by the states is highlighted by the proposal of Congressman Tarver, emphasizing the great need for a national tax convention at which the whole question of the taxation fields of the federal and state governments could be solved, and to some extent, state taxes could be equalized.

The attempts of states, such as Georgia, to collect high imposts on cigarets and like articles, and to enforce collection of this tax in violation of free trade rights, is slowly adding to the bars being erected between the states, to the harm of all states. And it is with ill grace that Georgia and other southern states should seek to build these bars, at the same time bitterly condemning the action of other states in seeking to exclude oleomargarine and other southern products. Both are, in effect, tariffs between the states and, although different in substance, are alike in principle.

However much it may be desirable to add to the revenue of the state of Georgia, the Tarver bill is not a desirable way.

Reasonable Request

A reasonable request has been made of all owners of dogs and cats in the county by Dr. Roy W. McGee, county health officer, and Police Lieutenant T. W. Cawthorn, who ask that the animals be inoculated at once against rabies. Increase in the number of rabies-infected dogs and cats prompted the request. While the increase has not yet reached serious propotions, the officials indicated they will take whatever steps are necessary to prevent a serious spread of the disease.

The law states clearly that dogs and cats are required to be immunized at least once every 12 months. But compliance with the law is not the only factor involved in this request. It is a health precaution that all good citizens cannot help but appreciate. A rabies-infected dog or cat running loose is just as dangerous as a ferocious lion or tiger. The menace to life is just as great.

While it is true that anti-rabies serum helps to combat the disease, at the same time no human being would want to have on his conscience the bitter realization that his neglect caused some innocent person to suffer torture and possibly death.

Britain might as well make up to the Russian comrade. When the lights go out in Europe, there will be no time for introductions.

Those who might have used the now-abandoned Florida canal will have to take the long way around. But what is time to an alligator?

Here and there a patch of light appears in the stygian darkness of Europe. The Danes have agreed not to attack Germany.

Texas admirers have given Mr. Farley a white horse. With a few plumes, a spotless shield and a motto, Genial Jim would seem to be set for '40.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

GEORGIA'S GREATEST CROP Georgia's greatest crop is going on the market this month and next. That is the crop of graduates, high school and college, who are being given their diplomas by schools of the state.

Many years ago the state realized that an educated citizen was a superior citizen. Today there is very grave concern on the part of educators, not only in Georgia but in the entire nation, concerning the problem of school reform. There is a growing number who think our public school system might be revised.

It is estimated that of the several thousand students who will graduate this year from Georgia high schools less than 20 per cent will go on to college. This in itself is not alarming.

Time was when more than 90 per cent of Georgia's high school graduates attended college. That time was not so long ago. In 1905 there were in Georgia eight accredited high schools. More than 90 per cent of the graduates went to college. Only a few hundred attended high schools then.

If one considers that the decade from 1900 to 1910 was one in which there was little education available in Georgia, one better can understand some of the things that happened in Georgia and why Georgia is a fertile field for demagogic political effort.

The children of that decade now are the adults of Georgia and not many of them went to school.

There has been, of course, a steady increase in the number and the efficiency of the high schools of the state. It still is possible, however, to find many rural sections where specific reform is needed in the supervision of schools.

THE SEVENTEEN PER CENT Today we have many, many accredited high schools and a large number of graduates. Last year only 17 per cent of those graduating from high school went on to college.

Another important bit of school statistics reveals that of the 17 per cent which did enter college about 43 failed to continue through college.

In other words, our college factories are finding about half of their raw material inadequate or are failing properly to utilize it.

The question then becomes whether or not we have not paid too much attention to the 17 per cent and too little to the 83 per cent. The fact that 83 per cent do not go to college is in itself not alarming. Perhaps they ought not to go to college. Almost without exception any sincere college president will say that 25 per cent to 35 per cent of his undergraduates get so little from college and apparently want so little they have no real business in college.

It is an inescapable fact that a great many students go to college because their parents want them to go or because it is the social thing to do or because there isn't anything else to do.

It is also an inescapable fact that while these drones are going to college there are a great many sincere boys and girls with a burning ambition to attend college who cannot go because of lack of funds or opportunity. This ought to be corrected.

Until a comparatively recent date there was not much vocational education in the high schools. Today there is not nearly enough. The surface only has been scratched. The 83 per cent that were not going on to college received practically nothing except a preparation to attend a college they were never going to attend.

It seems to be a fair question to ask whether or not this 83 per cent is not just as valuable to the state as the 17 per cent which enters college?

Industrialization is rather sure to continue and there seems to be no good reason why those students who do not want to go to college but who wish instead to be prepared to go on to the farm or into the skilled trades ought to have high school training which will supply it.

There certainly is no good reason to train all high school students only for college when only a few of them are going there.

THE CROWDED CITIES Fulton county has about eight thousand "paupers." There are a few counties in Georgia where almost 50 per cent of the population receive either surplus commodities or some form of relief.

The cities are crowded. The rural communities have always sent a proportion of their high school graduates to the cities but since the depression and the continuing collapse of the farm as a way of life, more and more of them have come to the cities. The result is that today in Atlanta, and in many other counties in Georgia, there are five or six hungry boys and girls waiting to fill any job which is open.

Not many months ago the city schools of Atlanta had a survey which showed that about a thousand of their graduates of the year before were unemployed. They must have some experience or training to get jobs and they can't get experience or training without a job.

The eroded farms and those small towns which are drying up are sending in untrained boys and girls who are eager and worthwhile but who haven't the training. They are added to those the city already has.

It seems fairly obvious that we need diversification in this crop which is Georgia's most valuable one. The schools, like almost every other agency of government and civil life, find themselves confronted with new conditions brought about by economic changes since the World War. For that reason we will hear more and more about revision of the school system.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

God gave us many blessings
To use, with common sense,
But blessings turn to evil
When enjoyment's too intense.

Sunshine may bring sunburn,
Exercise can kill,
Food can cause repletion,
Beauty drug the will.

So let us use good judgment,
Ere honey turn to gall,
God save us from intemp'rance,
And from fanatics all.

Life Needs Balance.

Fanaticism, it becomes plainer and plainer every day, is the root of most of the evil in the lives of mankind. There is no greater danger, either to the individual or the state, than over-indulgence. In 'most anything.

The trouble is that fanaticism breeds fanaticism. Someone, or some faction, allows the pendulum to swing too far in one direction and someone else gets all excited and pushes it just as far, or further, in the other way. And both are evil.

Pride of nationality is a good thing, so long as it is confined to proper, clean and decent ambition to contribute something worth while to your nation's achievements.

As soon, however, as your national pride runs away with you and you try to add lustre to your nation at the expense of another it becomes an evil. Whether the "you" in the case happens to be a powerful dictator or a humble citizen. Because the evil is in the mind, and in the intent, and the power or position that measure the results are merely the conditions that spread that result either far or near.

It is all right, for instance, to be proud of the United States and to exult in the fine citizenship of most of the people in this country. But when the reverse of the shield comes into play, making you brand men and women of other nations with derogatory labels, "Wops," "Hunkies," "Huns," "Limeys," you are poisoning your own mind and laying the first of a dangerous powder trail that may lead to disaster.

Remember that there are good people in all countries of the world and that they are, in the final analysis, just "good folks," like you and your neighbors.

When Hatred Spawns.

It may be a virtue to dislike avowed enemies within the country. But when that dislike grows to bitter hatred and when you would resort to illegal means to destroy them, you become no better than they. The way to uphold American ideals is to live them, to practice them. And there can be no excuse for stooping to un-American methods just because the other fellow did. Two wrongs never made a right and it doesn't help the cause of understanding and peace to knock a chip off the other guy's shoulder because he made a pass at your chip first.

Just because you heard an absurd individual with a somewhat Semitic cast of features pouring out communistic ravings from a soapbox in Greenwich Village is no excuse for filling your heart with hatred for the entire Jewish race. As intelligent to hate all Americans because some have been guilty of revolting crime.

Because some folks allowed themselves to become dangerously sunburned is no reason for you to hide from all sunshine. Because somebody overate until acute indigestion brought him to the grave, is not a reason why you should starve yourself. Death would be the result, just the same.

Because men have made themselves seriously ill by drinking too much water is no reason why you should never drink it. Nor because some weaklings become dipsomaniacs is it any reason why you shouldn't enjoy any decent beverage, in reason.

Nor, because a few religious fanatics overdo the emotional side of their religion and make more or less neighborhood nuisances of themselves, is it any reason why others should resort to kidnaping and flogging.

The world will never become the place it should be until all men learn temperance in all ways of life and are able to restrain emotions which would lead them into outlawed activities.

Life demands balance. The men or women who would gain the greatest joy in life, the finest peace and make of themselves the best individuals, must eschew all fanaticism and must so order their lives that every blessing, every activity, every emotion, is limited to its proper proportion of the whole.

There is practically no evil that does not spring from over-emphasis on, or over-indulgence in, something that, in correct usage, would have been good.

May the fates give us all, some day soon, that sweet reasonableness that will make us good folks for all the other folks to live with.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Thursday, May 28, 1914:

"Kansas City, May 27.—The general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States (southern) went on record late today as opposed to the use of tobacco among clergymen, candidates for the ministry and church officials."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Tuesday, May 28, 1889:

"It is stated that Texas has never had a native-born governor. This is as it should be. The great majority of Texans are Georgians, and that is the secret of the prosperity of Texas."

THE PROMISED LAND?

Once again the Chamberlain government lowers the prestige of the British Empire and shakes the confidence of the world in its integrity, by its betrayal of a dependent people who trusted in its promises. Who can forget the wave of enthusiasm which swept over the allied nations in 1917 when Arthur Balfour, speaking for the British government, proclaimed the opening of Palestine as a 'national home" for the Jewish people. It satisfied the sense of justice and harmonized with the highest sentiments of millions of the peoples of the world, seemed to be the fulfillment of the dreams and prayers of a homeless people, who had made their priceless contributions to the homes of well-nigh every other nation.

The Balfour declaration was characteristic of the British political genius at its best. It would be an interesting question to raise, what part it played in winning the World War for the allies. I am thinking of something more than that, it focused and intensified the powerful influence of the Jews around the world back of the allied armies. That proclamation, like the eloquent utterances of our own President Wilson, helped to lift the objectives of the war out of the muck and mud of the selfish national interests, and give that bloody conflict a spiritual goal.

After that the purpose of the war was not merely to regain a French or an Italian irredenta. Zion now became the irredenta to be reclaimed for humanity. No really great cause can ever be the exclusive possession of any one nation or one race. The most sacred rights are human rights, and call to the consciences of all men to defend them. The loftiest ideals are those which challenge the depths of human aspirations, and appeal to the latent powers of all men. It is for this reason that we in America claim the right to make our protest, when a British government of today seeks to annul a solemn promise made by a former British government to return the home of the Hebrew fathers to their children.

The Chamberlain government in their latest "white paper," seeking again to "appease" the terrorists that threaten propose to turn over Palestine to the Arabs. Deliver to that backward civilization the control of the Jews, who trusting a solemn promise, have invested their money, their genius for building, their hopes and their lives to transform a barren land into a modern miracle of prosperity.

By What Title?

Just here we face the crux of this whole question. By what right does any people hold possession of any land? There is no inhabited civilization today whose soil has not been stained by the blood of conquest. It is too late in history to go back and reverse the arbitrament of the sword. While we can not question ourselves or others as to how we acquired the land which we proudly call "Fatherland," has not the hour of civilization come when we must ask another more significant question. What have you done with the land which you possess?

By that test what a clear and unanswerable title the Hebrew people would have to Palestine. Think of the Land of Canaan, a tiny bit of a land, which they took and made immortal in the reverent memories of men as "The Holy Land." With a genius for religion unmatched in the story of nations, they hallowed their hills into high altars, sanctified their villages and towns into sacred shrines, a rendezvous for the pilgrim feet of the world, and made holy the waters of their streams and lakes for the baptism of the faithful of every nation. Can we debate the right of a people to live in a land, who have produced a living literature, which has welded every mountain and valley, every village and city, to the thought of God?

Terrorism.

The Balfour declaration said: "His Majesty's government views with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people." Now all that these people ask is that this promise be kept. They have never asked that any of the people living there should be dispossessed. They entered with no weapons in their hands and no martial banners proclaiming a conquest. They bought every foot of land which they hold from those who were eager to sell. This is no beggar people standing at the door of civilization asking for alms. They bought a barren land, which for centuries had been neglected and denuded, and by intelligent thrift they have restored the soil, discovered unknown resources, raised the standard of living among the Arabs, and made Palestine not only a blessing to themselves but to others.

Let it be clearly understood, Palestine has become a problem, not because of the revolt of the Arabs living there, but by reason of the Arabian nationalists from the outside. Stimulated by German and Italian influences, they have terrorized Palestine, in order to awaken British fears for the safety of the Suez canal, and other of her vital interests in the eastern Mediterranean. The question is: Must the Jews in Palestine be sacrificed like the Czecho-Slovakians to the vacillating timidity of the present British government?

GENTLE ART OF CONSPIRACY

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY.

Conspiracy is a fine art. It is best practiced by those who start in their early youth. Like playing scales on the piano, it takes long and heart-breaking practice and only those succeed who not only learn the technique but are divinely gifted with genius.

Trotzky, for instance, is the Paderewski of conspiracy. He tops them all. In his long and amazing career, he has helped to upset a powerful government; he brought a world war to the verge of disaster; he created a new government, a new army, a new foreign policy. He has lived in exile for more than a decade, without a passport or any other legal right to be on this earth. Yet, governments have to meet in solemn assembly to decide what to do about him. Stalin admits by his murders and purges that Trotzky's power today is as great as his own. According to Stalin, Trotzky sits in Mexico wrecking plants in the heart of Soviet Russia, formulating deals with Hitler and the Emperor of Japan, controlling millions of men all over the world.

If one-tenth of 1 per cent of Stalin's accusations are true, Trotzky is today the most powerful man on earth. Now that is first-rate conspiracy. It has art, genius, technique, color, design and thrill.

GRADE B CONSPIRATORS

The passport ring, who were recently convicted in New York, were pretty good conspirators—Grade B, I would say. For instance, that idea of getting the names of dead children and working up to maturity, so that passports might be available, is good technique, although it seems to me that too much energy was expended on that job. The conservation of energy is important in conspiracies. Also, they took too many people into the job. That is always an error, for as any conspirator knows, every man has a sweetheart with whom, by the laws of nature, he will sooner or later quarrel. She, also by the laws of nature, will sooner or later blab to her next sweetheart, who may be an FBI G-Man or a Dies committee investigator, or a capitalistic newspaperman. Conspirators must beware of sweethearts.

General Krivitzky, who is now alias Ginsburg to the Communists who have become anti-Semitic for the occasion, must have been a fairly good conspirator because he got away before Stalin could kill him. But Earl Browder is not so good because he laid himself wide open when he permitted his stooges to attack Krivitzky. That made it possible for that gentleman to say, "What, I'm a bluff? Why, your own sister worked for me in Europe under the pseudonym of Gene Montgomery."

That is very bad, because that can be a provable fact and it must be true because neither Mr. Browder nor the sister have denied it. All that the Communists have done to date is to call Krivitsky Ginsburg. Well, Stalin goes under a phoney name; so did Lenin; so do all the heroes of the Russian conspiracy. That is no answer to anything among conspirators. Even Dutch Schultz had a phoney name.

SILLY CONSPIRATOR

Now General Moseley is a silly conspirator. He has neither science nor art. Like most Americans, it goes against his grain, so he does it badly. The crazy maze of tricks which the Dies committee discloses is almost as silly as Tommy Corcoran's political maneuverings. Simply stated, it is the bunk.

In the first place, no conspirators send identical reports to 40 or more persons. Even marked "Strictly Confidential," such reports will be seen by an infinite number of persons. Everyone has had the experience of being told the most amazing stories in the strictest confidence. And everyone has repeated these stories in the strictest confidence.

Secondly, General Moseley should have known that even Republicans will stand by President Roosevelt if anyone attempts to unseat him by force, because even a retired army officer might be expected to understand that we are Americans first and that we have no desire for Central American elections. We still prefer the ballot.

Now, the Communists are much smarter. They do not try to unseat the President by force. Instead, they seek to steal the government. That is sound conspiratorial practice. Stalin did that to Lenin and Trotsky by taking a key but superficially unimportant position. Hitler did that to Hindenburg and von Papen. Chiang Kai-shek did that to the Kuomintang in China. Get in and grab power.

RANK AMATEURS

While the Moseley conspirators are writing each other letters, the Communists take over the WPA and the left wingers take over the National Labor Relations Board and the left wing New Dealers beguile the President. There is first-class conspiracy. Moseley and his gang are rank amateurs.

There is this about a conspiracy that few men understand: The conspirators must be selfless fanatics in a cause. For instance, 15 Communists can go into the American Youth Congress and walk away with it. They do it so skillfully that many sincere anti-Communists are not aware that they have become stooges. A handful of Communists can control any large organization if they set their minds to it because they work hard, they are fanatical, they do not quarrel among themselves. In a word, they know where they are going.

Their opponents have no technique. Take a group of business men, like the coal operators. They can stand together for a couple of months but they soon fall apart. Each man has his own ideas and his own motive. A conspiracy among business men is impossible beacuse each one will report the details to board of directors, his lawyer, his public relations counsel and his wife. Soon enough Paul Mallon or Messrs. Allen and Pearson will report it in their columns. Or Raymond Clapper will philosophize upon it from the lofty unrealities of Washington. You can't conspire about anything that way. That is why business men cannot even fix their prices: There is always a chiseler among them. They have no taste for the thing.

WHY IT DIDN'T WORK

And the New Deal tries all sorts of conspiracies. For instance, that business appeasement policy of Harry Hopkins was a vast conspiracy on a grandiose scale. It might have made the secretary of commerce President of the United States. All sorts of people were in on it. But it did not work because no one was fanatical about it. Who really cared whether Harry Hopkins became President or not? Everybody knew that the President would take no steps to achieve recovery because that would give the Republicans the 1940 election. To achieve recovery, he would have to admit six years of errors and he could no more do that than he could accept Hugh Johnson and Mark Sullivan as advisers.

As a matter of fact, the President, when left to his own devices, is a better man than most of the conspirators who serve him. His technique is simple: He asks a naive, childlike question and the populace stands in awe at his majestic wisdom and the polls show that his popularity is up a point. For instance, that question addressed to Senator O'Mahoney about why the flow of capital has stopped. The President knows the answer. It is not necessary to drag Mr. Alfred Sloan down to Washington or to pile economist upon economist to discover the reason. The President's pants presser could tell him what it is all about. The answer is that if a man puts one dollar into an enterprise, he expects it to give him one dollar and six cents after taxes are paid. If he cannot get that extra six cents in one year, he does not put that dollar into anything. He holds on to the dollar. If, after taxes are paid, he can only get 99 cents for that dollar, he hides it.

The President knows that answer. But he smiles and asks the question anyhow. And a solemn congressional committee sits majestically and listens to profound platitudes which provide nothing new to the sum of human knowledge. And learned scribes record the platitudes and comment upon them. And the people gape in awe. There is first-class conspiratorial technique.

HE TALKS TOO MUCH

Father Coughlin never understood conspiracy. He talks too much. He gives himself away. He will some day be taught the value of silence. And he talks badly. For instance, all his ballyhoo about other people's conspiratorial tactics only attracts attention to his own. His followers believe him, but he makes no new converts to his cause because his raucous voice and grating words foul his purpose. Richelieu was smarter than Coughlin. But Richelieu had no radio to tempt him.

I have spent more than 20 years studying conspiracies in the raw and I can testify that they never really succeed. Sooner or later, somebody comes along and hits the conspirators on the head, alive or dead. For instance, Stalin got Trotzky; Chamberlain is getting Hitler; the Dies committee will get those that J. Edgar Hoover has to miss because of the law. Somebody always talks. But worse than that, some practical fellow comes along and steals the conspirators' show. That happened in Spain, when the Republicans and Socialists were robbed of their revolution by Stalin, as both General Krivitzky and Luis D'Araquistain, Loyalist ambassador to Paris, testify. Stalin is not only an excellent conspirator, but a practical capitalistic businessman. It is his practical side that helps him to kill off idealistic conspiracies.

Conspiracies flourish best over nothing. Then there is lots of fun. One can spend years arguing, debating, planning about what will be done when and if the day comes. And how glorious it is if the day never comes. The American Communists are making a mistake as conspirators because they are trying to force the day to arrive. They are so impatient that they form an alliance with Mayor Kelly, of Chicago. If they are not careful, they will soon enough find themselves in Tammany Hall. Then what will be the use of conspiracy? For they will all have jobs on the public pay roll. And that will make them reactionaries opposed to all change.

Seek Apple Reputation

Missouri wants to be known again as the "land of the big red apples." University of Missouri horticulturists are helping state apple producers to increase consumption of Missouri-grown apples. This is expected to bring about an automatic increase in the number of Missouri apple orchards.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON.

Now, about this gambling business. In his speech last Monday night the President accused the critics of his fiscal policies (among them "high-brow columnists and high-geared economists") of being "eager to gamble the safety of the nation." The New Deal, he said, is conservative. "We cannot bring ourselves to take radical chances with other people's property. . . . We do not have the right to gamble with the well-being of 120,000,000 Americans."

This statement would seem to indicate that the New Deal has, and has had, a consistent policy arrived at without benefit of high-brow columnists and high-geared economists and that that policy has worked, and, therefore, the New Deal is sticking to it.

Actually, the New Deal has had three separate policies, each of which has been winsomely presented to the public, and each of which has had the support of some high-geared economists and some highbrow columnists—if you count my friend Heywood Broun as a highbrow! Heywood has believed in the infallibility of all three of them.

There are radical differences in all of these policies put forward by an Administration which takes its name, the New Deal, from a gambling game. The New Deal has staked its money—I mean our money—on all three hands. And they can't possibly, all three, be winners in the same round.

FISCAL POLICIES OF MARCH, 1933.

The first was the fiscal policy enunciated in the special economy message of March 10, 1933. At this time Mr. Roosevelt was implementing his criticisms of the Hoover regime's waste and deficit policies.

"We shall have piled up from the preceding fiscal years an accumulated deficit of $5,000,000,000. . . . It has contributed to the recent collapse of our banking structure. . . . Too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy. . . . I give you assurance that if this is done (proposed economy) there is resonable prospect that within a year the income of the government will be sufficient to cover the expenditures of government."

This is Mr. Roosevelt talking the language of high-geared conservative economists. Lewis Douglas and Dr. B. M. Anderson, of the Chase Bank, and high-browed columnist, Mark Sullivan.

THAT OF JANUARY, 1934.

But on January 3, 1934, the President had decided to put his money (our money) on another hand. This budget message was inspired by the theory of such high-geared liberal economists as Russell Leffingwell, of Morgan's.

Now, the President adopted the idea of the cyclical budget—the idea of compensatory government spending. The proposed increase in the deficit was to be so arranged and conditioned as to accelerate recovery and secure a balance within the business cycle.

"We should plan to have a definitely balanced budget for the third year of recovery, 1936, and from that time on seek a continuing reduction of the debt."

JANUARY, 1935.

In the second budget message of January 3, 1935, the President noted the continuing problem of unemployment and said:

"For this reason it is evident that we have not yet reached a point at which a complete balance can be obtained. . . . I am, however, submitting to the congress a budget for the fiscal year of 1936 . . . Such deficit as occurs may be expected to decline." . . .

JANUARY, 1936.

In the message of January 3, 1936, he congratulated himself on the success of his policy.

"Our policiy is succeeding. The figures prove it. Secure in the knowledge that steadily decreasing deficits will turn, in time, to steadily increasing surpluses. . . . let us pursue the course we have mapped."

The year closed six months later with a record-breaking deficit of $4,361,000,000.

JANUARY, 1937.

On January 8, 1937, there was another optimistic budget message.

"Business conditions have shown each year a marked improvement . . . the gains make it possible to reduce for 1938 many expenditures. . . . We expect in 1939 a completely balanced budget."

Immediately following this message the government embarked upon a drastic deflationary policy not radically reducing spending but increasing three times the Federal Reserve requirements and sterilizing gold.

This move was supported by conservative high-geared economist, Winthrop Aldrich and by Marriner Eccles, and was protested by high-geared liberal economists Parker Gilbert, of Morgan's, and Alexander Sachs, of Lehman Corporation. Mr. Morgenthau also looked a little sour.

Low- or high-browed columnist Dorothy Thompson and others predicted a depression, on the argument that the deflation was wildly drastic, that it was a mistake to undertake it unless accompanied by the release of capital, a radical change in the tax structure, and a revival of business confidence, which had been seriously, though indirectly, shaken by the attack on the supreme court.

Columnists were reprimanded for pessimism.

There was a depression, eventually admitted by the government.

CHANGE COMES IN JANUARY, 1938.

In January, 1938, a new policy takes form. The budget is going to be balanced when and if the national income has grown to the "requisite amount." High-geared economists, some of whom supported policies 1 and 2, are notably absent in expressions of enthusiasm for No. 3.

High-brow columnists who saw merit in 1 and 2 are almost all "from Missouri" on 3.

Just what the proper national income ought to be at which the budget will be balanced is not clear. High-geared economist Paul M. Sweezy thinks $100,000,000,000 would be "an immediate goal," and that "one cannot expect business men to undertake the necessary investments; the risks are too large." (Too much of a gamble.)

The President in his speech to the retailers (no bargain basement) suggests $80,000,000,000—to be achieved by pumping in "purchasing power."

And the budget for 1940 presented before the congress on January 7, 1939, contains a table showing the revenues that would result from existing taxation if there should be advances in national income."

"Seventy billions means $6,000,000,000 revenue; $80,000,000,000 means $8,000,000,000; $90,000,000,000 (we have never had it) would produce $10,600,000,000. . . ."

The high-geared economist and commentator who first thought up this idea was named Ellis Parker Butler, and he called the description of the system "Pigs Is Pigs."

Unfortunately, wealth is not produced by parturition, as in guinea pigs.

NOTHING BUT BRIGHT HOPE.

Now, there is nothing except bright hope to indicate that this last certianty will not be much the most serious gamble.

Eeither policy 1 or policy or 2 could have succeeded, had it been followed consistently and intelligently by the Administration, or had either been fully comprehended in the first place and the whole conditions taken into account.

Paul Reynaud has in general followed policy I in bringing into order the finances of the French government from the disorder produced by Blum's French New Deal.

The British recovery—at a high scale of taxation and revenue—was achieved by this policy.

The Swedish and Australian governments adopted the cyclical budget and compensatory spending idea (policy 2) with success, but in an ordered and rational fashion. They were clearly aware that it would work only if there was the closest collaboration between government and business; only if the areas in which business and government were operating were delimited; only if private capital was given every encouragement by incentive taxation and only if labor relations were stabilized.

All of the liberal high-geared economists who have advocated this policy—Mr. Keynes, of London; Mr. Copland, of Australia; Professor Mirdal, of Sweden—have insisted that there is no possible recovery by government spending, i. e., by government reflation, if political or economic policies result in business deflation or business stagnation.

DRAWS TO INSIDE STRAIGHT.

This viewpoint is also supported by Professor Alvin H. Hansen, of Harvard, who is now quoted as a high-geared economist in defense of the last policy. Professor Hansen writes: "It is wholly fallacious to assume that a goveenment can safely rely, in a private capitalist economy, on spending its way out of depression into a sustained recovery."

Pump priming succeeded in Sweden, but has failed here, because it has not been pump priming here.

It is not pump priming to put a monkey wrench into the pump, muddy the well and hock the farm to transport water from irrigation projects built by WPA.

That's a gamble—a draw to an inside straight. What we need is at least three of a kind.

The Law And the People

By PEYRE GAILLARD.

My good friend the Head Painter was finishing off a coat of "buff" in the rear as I went in. So I strolled back, sat down and ordered a cup of coffee. I figured he'd have something on his mind. He always does. But don't get the idea there's anything superficial about him. His work might be on the surface, but not his thinking.

"I see where a painter over in London helped pull Queen Mary out of that automobile wreck last week," I ventured by way of being facetious. "It's a darn good thing he had his step ladder with him."

"That was a house painter," the H. P. shot back a trifle annoyed, "— — just an ordinary dauber. Them boys can't paint!"

This was a surprise to me. Frankly I had never given much thought to the matter. I had always felt that anybody with a brush, a pair of overalls and a step ladder could get a job painting something. Of course I knew that Rembrandt and Gainsborough were not supposed to be in the same league with the lad who did the garage roof last week. Well, anyway, I stood corrected and admitted it. This seemed to please the H. P. and he grinned good naturedly.

IF HE'D BEEN IN ATLANTA

"What kinder laws they got over there anyway," he wanted to know, "— — when a truck driver kin come pretty near killin' the Queen and not even get arrested? If he'd been in Atlanta they'd 'er thrown him in the jug just to show the cops was on the job!"

"The police can't be too careful, you know," I observed—always on the side of the law.

"Betcha he was drivin' on the wrong side of the street, too," he went on, as he put the final touch to the artificial panelling, "—or maybe the Queen was. I seen in a news-reel the other day where the whole gang in London was going hell-bent down the wrong side an' the cops just standin' there lookin'!"

I explained that in England, when it comes to traffic law, the left side of the street is the right side and the right side is the wrong side to drive on.

"The right side is the wrong side in other things too over there," he came right back, "—gettin' ready to start another war and we still tryin' to catch them what wouldn't fight in the last one."

THINKING OF BERGDOLL

Of course I knew he had Grover Cleveland Bergdoll in mind—the prodigal draft-dodger who returned home from the "vaterland" last Thursday.

"Oh, they'll salt him down for five years in the federal pen," I replied, sensing the H. P.'s rising indignation and hoping in this manner to appease him. "Won't that suit you?"

"They shouldn't 'er let him dock!" he snapped.

I was startled at his sudden vehemence and the manner in which he began smacking the wall with his brush—messing up his finished work—at the mere thought of Bergdoll's lack of patriotism.

"They couldn't very well have kept him out," I attempted to explain. "He's a native-born citizen of the United States even if he is a sorry one. He's been convicted of a crime and sentenced to serve time. He's returning to pay the penalty. You can't get around facts."

"Maybe he was scared 'er bein' drafted over there," the H. P. cut in, but I brushed aside the interruption, regardless of its probability.

WOULD BE UNCONSTITUTIONAL

"It would have taken a special act of congress to have kept him from landing," I went on. "This would have been equivalent to deportation—a much severer penalty than five years' imprisonment. And such an act of congress would necessarily have to be predicated upon the untenable ground that the consequences of draft-dodging are considered greater now than at the time the crime was committed. Do you believe that? Personal feeling against Bergdoll, you know, has nothing to do with the matter. To set up a special penalty for a crime committed 20 years ago, aside from the fact the man has been tried, convicted and sentenced, would be unconsitutional. It would be 'ex-post facto law.'"

"If congress wants to pass it," he cracked, "they oughter kin do it."

"I'm afraid you don't understand the Constitution of the United States," I responded rather warmly. "The people only have the right to change or amend it. Have you ever read it?"

He admitted that he had not. But at this point he began gently caressing the wall with his brush, repairing the damage he had done in a moment of unthinking indignation. He was becoming himself again. He was thinking. And as I went out I got the impression he'd be getting a copy of the Constitution, that he'd soon be studying it and having done so, would become a defender of the great document instead of the depricator he had inadvertently become.

Perfect composition distinguishes this example of photographic art. The tall trees swaying in the breeze, with the drifting white of clouds across the evening sky, are symbols of the beauty that is to be found by all who have eyes to see. The picture was made last week in Piedmont park, Atlanta, just as the sun was sinking toward the horizon, its light limning the fleece of the clouds and making floodlights against the slowly darkening sky of evening.

The Pulse of the Public

The columns of The Constitution are always open to the expressions of the public, regardless of the opinion expressed. The only limitation on communications are that they shall be signed; be brief—preferably not longer than two or three hundred words—and not libelous. All communications will be subject to editing, and none will be returned unless postage is inclosed.

PROBATION CHIEF LAUDS EDITORIAL

Editor Constitution: Referring to your editorial under the heading of "Probation and Parole", I wish to congratulate you and thank you on the stand you have taken in giving the difference between probation and parole. It was a fine explanation.

I feel confident that if the public knew more of probation work, they could better understand it. For the past 20 years I have been connected with this work in Fulton county. I have seen wonderful results, and know it to be well worth while in teaching first offenders and young offenders before they were made harhardened criminals.

I assure you that we do appreciate your statement and explanation of the work. Close supervision has been worth many times its costs in preventing those that were unfortunate in coming before the courts charged with some crime, from committing similiar offenses. Such supervision has assisted many in reclaiming themselves and making good citizens, who support their families, thereby relieving the tax-payers of supporting them and their families had it been necessary for them to serve their sentence.

It was my privilege to attend the Southeastern Probation and Parole conference in Jacksonville, last week. Hearing the reports from government officers, who have made scientific studies of the work, and from probation officers of long experience, it was very convincing that this work is so often misunderstood.

Again, I desire to thank you and your able staff for the consideration shown from time to time to us in this very worthy work of the courts.

Chief Probation Officer.

USEFUL CAREER CLOSED BY DEATH.

Editor, Constitution: The death of John M. Parker on last Saturday closed one of the most useful careers of our generation.

He was a rare blending of the cavalier and the Puritan. An extraordinary power of will kept in restraint the warm blood of the knight-errant. He was born in Mississippi, midway of the Civil War and located in New Orleans in a turbulent era. He kept step with his restless comrades who resisted reconstruction tyranny and yet kept a cool, commercial poise. He was a leader on the right side of every public question. He gave of his energy and sagacity like a spendthrift to the upbuilding of Louisiana and the south. He was never too busy, though at the head of great business, to sacrifice private gain for the public good.

When I was president of the Georgia State Chamber of Commerce and when that institution was struggling for reforms of crops and industries to meet the shock of the boll-weevil and the World War, Governor Parker accepted our invitation and came over to Georgia to aid in the campaign. He was every inch a gentleman of the old school and every ounce a business genius. It was not surprising that Theodore Roosevelt paid him the highest tribute. The young men of the south ambitious to serve their country will find the life story of John M. Parker an inspiration.

FOR ROOSEVELT IN THIRD TERM.

Editor Constitution: Your editorial of May 24, "The Same Program," was in keeping with all the Liberty League crowd that's trying to destroy the Democrat party.

I heard President Roosevelt's speech and there was nothing said by him or intimated that the federal government would ever repudiate a debt. The coming generations will have the same use of all the government's projects, sewer systems, electric lights, bridges, viaducts, school houses that we have. Certainly it's just as much their obligation to pay for them as it is ours. There are a few men that can take President Roosevelt's place, but we have none that fill it. I believe there is enough good Democrats in America to continue him in office.

LET US TEACH 'EM TO UNDERSTAND

Editor, Constitution: In last Sunday's "Pulse of the Public" someone made reference to the following report of the Georgia Fact-Finding Committee as printed in The Constitution was not being understood by the "horny-handed farmer" and the "muscle-bound mechanic:"

"The point here is this, industrial democracy and paternalism are different economic systems, just as representative government and feudalism are different political systems.

"And it is doubtful whether Georgia can ever have political democracy as long as the major portion of her laboring people remain economically and politically inarticulate."

It is possibly true that many of us do not understand the real import of this statement as made by the Fact-Finders, a committee consisting of some of our most educated citizenry. It is perhaps due to our lack of education and economic slavery for generations. But help us to keep open the schools and educate our illiterates to read and write so that they and our children will learn.

CONDITION OF STREETS CALLED DISGRACE

Editor Constitution: Your editorial entitled "An Atlanta Disgrace" certainly hit the spot and challenges the attention of our citizens to a condition in our midst that should be changed speedily.

Arising early and reading this strong editorial I walked around over West End with an eye open to see how this section rated. White street must have had Sherman's heavy artillery roll over it on his way from Dalton to Savannah. Other streets were filled with holes some 12 inches across, and the sidewalks! Well, only two words come to your mind while walking: "Impossible, disgraceful."

A short while ago in another section the writer drove across a street through which a ditch about seven inches wide had been cut through the concrete and poorly filled. Result—in a couple of weeks two tires went down, the fabric broken throuh by the jar.

CONTROLLING EROSIN

Editor, Constitution: R. H. Black has been doing some wonderful work on the Piedmont college farm at Demorest, Georgia.

He has found the way of controlling erosion on north Georgia hillsides in the cheapest, and I might say, the most effective manner.

His plan briefly is, in the fall with a narrow plow he runs a furrow in contour lines around the hillside, repeating this with another furrow about every six feet, and then he goes down those same furrows again until it is eventually plowed about 16 or 18 inches deep. During the winter the rains gather in these deep furrows and soak into the soil and there is practically no run-off at all. Any soil it moves goes into the furrows.

Now, Mr. Black has already planted corn along the furrow that's coming up and in between he has about four feet of solid vetch and clover which reseeded from last year. Part of this he intends to leave on top of the soil as a mat to reseed and hold the water, and part he is going to turn under to see which plan works the best.

The great thing about Mr. Black's plan of operation is that it is something any one-horse farmer in Georgia can do. If he only has one mule, he can swap a day's work with a neighbor and put two mules to plowing out this deep furrow, and it is not necessary to have a tractor to do this type of sub-soiling.

THERE IS LAW TO PROTECT BIRDS

Editor, Constitution: Noting your "Pulse of the Public", especially the bird killing protest, I wonder can I help all concerned, especially, the birds.

The writer has been a Scouter about 15 years and the Bird Study Merit Badge is instructive and interesting. May I suggest, in all grades, the Bird Law be explained. In Scouting, boys are taught to protect wild life. The federal law protects all song and migratory birds, even as they cross the Canadian border. Various states have laws protecting all but birds of prey which includes hawks, owls, eagles, crows.

The birds in other parts of the city are not all exterminated. Seven species of birds eat daily in my back yard. I scatter chicken feed amongst the shrubbery and even close to the back door. Here they come, starlings, brown thrushes, blue jays and his mate, cardinals, (as red as fire) robins, mockers, and dozens of English sparrows.

All hop with joy as they pick up the scattered grub. Then they get a drink or two at the fish pond, take a bird bath, shake their head as if to say "thank you" and off they go, but always come back when hungry. The blue jays often come very close to the back door and I am glad they feel at home. Birds are not only attractive, but they eat many insects that would destroy plant life.

Happenings in the Church World

By DR. HERMAN L. TURNER.

THE METHODIST CHURCH.

Dr. Paul Hutchinson writes to The Christian Century from Kansas City under date of May 11, as follows: "Before more than 10,000 spectators who filled the far reaches of the municipal auditorium the new Methodist church was orn here last night. While 50 bishops and 900 delegates held assenting hands aloft, Bishop John M. Moore, of the former southern church, recited a series of five unifying declarations, each couched in formal legalistic language, and each was greeted with the common affirmation: 'We do so declare.' Then, in unison, bishops and delegates repeated: 'To the Methodist church thus established we do solemnly declare our allegiance, and upon all its life and service we do reverently invoke the blessing of Almighty God.' The formal vote consummating union of the Methodist Episcopal, the Methodist Episcopal, South, and the Methodist Protestant churches followed quickly. It was unanimous—and no wonder, for it would have taken a hardy spirit to have voted against union in that company. The choir burst forth in the Hallelujah chorus, and a few moments later the Methodist uniting conference had passed into history . . ."

STATISTICAL STUDY

A most illuminating statistical study of the new church recently appeared in The Christian Advocate under the title of "Methodism's Working Forces," written by Dr. Thomas P. Potter. The article reads:

"With the legal union of the Methodist Episcopal, the Methodist Episcopal, South, and the Methodist Protestant churches, it is well to take inventory of the forces of the new Methodist church and the investments that are available in this group for bringing the kingdom of God to men.

"This study is not made for the purpose of giving emphasis to the size of the new church, but that we may measure our responsibilities to the world in the joining of forces. With the elimination of overlapping agencies, a greater and more effective working force of the church should be the result.

NOT COMPLETE IN ALL ITEMS

"Since the methods of reporting differ in the three churches—not all reporting on the same items—this study is not complete in all details. However, it gives a challenge to the new church for a consecration that will build, upon the foundations laid by our fathers, a structure that will worthily represent the kingdom of God among men.

"First in importance, of course, in the resources of the new church, is the personal power as represented in the ministry and membership of the church. In the United States, as of December 31, 1937, there were 50 effective and retired bishops, 24,900 ministers, members of conferences, 13,100 local preachers and 900 deaconesses.

"The work was carried on in nearly 700 districts, with 43,100 preaching places grouped in 22,100 pastoral charges served by 17,800 members of conference and 4,300 supply pastors. Those who served in special appointments numbered 1,250; 450 attended school and 60 were on leave of absence for travel and study.

MEMBERSHIP STATISTICS

"During 1937, 120,000 children and 110,000 adults were baptized, 250,000 were received on confession of faith, and there were 7,386,000 full members. In the young people's societies there were 800,000 members and the 40,000 Sunday schools reported 550,000 officers and teachers and 5,600,000 members.

"Churches numbered 42,700, parsonages 20,700; and these with other properties used by the local congregations, had a reported value of $725,000,000. This sum was invested in 43,000 communities for carrying on the work of the Kingdom.

"During 1937, for ministerial support, for buildings and current expenses, a total of $63,878,000 was paid,or $8.65 per member. For church benevolences a total of $11,324,000 was paid, or $1.53 per member. Total cash payment amounted to $75,202,000 or $10.18 per member.

In addition to the work of the pastoral charges under the auspices of the Methodist Church, there will be 140 schools and colleges with 6,000 professors, 105,000 students, and property and endowment valued at $308,000,000.

EIGHTY-TWO HOSPITALS

"Eighty-two hospitals are under the auspices of the new church, with 5,300 nurses and nurses in training, caring for 263,000 patients during last year, with property and endowment of $73,250,000. There are 133 homes with 10,500 inmates and 225 superannuate homes with a total value of $30,150,000. Forty-six deaconess homes are valued at $3,430,000.

"The Woman's Home Missionary Society owns property valued at $9,390,000 and supports 600 workers. Goodwill Industries number 50 and are valued at $3,000,000. The publishing interests represent an investment of nearly $10,000,000. This shows an investment in co-ordinating agencies of $437,220,000, making a total investment in the United States of over $1,162,220,000.

"The new church will have work in 30 foreign countries, besides aiding the work in the autonomous Methodist churches of Brazil, Japan, Korea and Mexico.

"In these 30 countries there are 2,500 ministers, 3,900 local preachers, and 1,400 deaconesses. Thirteen bishops, together with supervision by bishops resident in the United States, have oversight of the work in 2,760 charges in 193 districts, served by 1,625 members of conference and 1,135 supply pastors. Two hundred men were in special appointments, 60 were in school, and 40 on leave of absence.

"During the year 19,400 children and 12,900 adults were baptized, 12,750 were received on confession of faith, and 355,300 full members were reported. There were 63,700 members of young people's societies, and 16,400 officers and teachers and 315,900 were enrolled in 6,360 Sunday schools.

MISSION MEMBERS

"In Africa 27,800 members were reported, 68,800 in China, 87,000 in Europe, 97,500 in India, 62,100 in Malaya and the Philippines, and 13,100 in Latin-America besides 5,500 in China and Japan that are counted in American Conferences.

"The 2,835 churches, 2,060 parsonages, and other local properties had a value of $29,865,000.

"There was contributed by the charges $900,000 for ministerial support, $1,221,000 for local expenses, and $31,600 for benevolences, a total of $2,152,600 or $6.06 per member.

"Under the parent Boards of Foreign Missions and the women's work there are 1,275 missionaries, not including the wives of missionaries, 2,100 native members of conferences, 16,500 other native workers in the mission fields.

"Ninety-five hospitals, 65 homes, 42 deaconess homes, and 2,750 schools of various grades with 180,000 students are under Methodist supervision. In addition to the churches and parsonages there was reported a property valuation of $30,027,000, making a reported investment of $59,892,000 in the foreign field.

SIXTY-FIVE BISHOPS

"In the world-wide work of the Methodist church, based on the reports for 1937, there were sixty-five effective and retired bishops, 27,400 members of Conference, 17,000 local preachers, 2,300 deaconesses.

"The work of the church was carried on in 900 districts, with 24,860 charges served by 19,425 members of conference and 5,435 supply pastors. Men numbering 1,450 served in special appointments, 510 were in school, and 100 on leave for study and travel.

"During 1937, 139,400 children and 122,900 adults were baptized, 262,750 were received on confession of faith, and there were 7,741,300 members and 400,000 preparatory members on roll. There were 863,700 members of young people's societies in the world church and 566,400 officers and teachers and 5,915,900 members enrolled in 46,360 Sunday schools.

"The 45,535 churches and 22,760 parsonages, with other properties used by the local churches, had a reported valuation of $754,865,000.

"The charges contributed $36,285,000 for ministerial support, $29,714,000 for buildings and current expenses, and $11,355,600 for benevolences. This is a total of $77,354,600, or $10 per member. Special gifts for college and hospital buildings and endowments among which there were three gifts in 1937 for hospital buildings totalling $9,500,000.

SCHOOLS, COLLEGES

"As a part of its work in building the Kingdom, the Methodist Churches had 2,890 schools and colleges with 285,000 students, 177 hospitals, 133 old people's and children's homes, 225 homes for superannuates, 88 deaconess homes, 50 Goodwill Industries, and their publishing interests. The total reported value of these properties is $467,247,000, making the estimated investments the sum of $1,222,112,000 for the work of the Kingdom.

"If, according to the words in Deuteronomy, 'one chase a thousand, and two shall put ten thousand to flight,' then our 27,400 members of Conference, 17,000 local preachers, enforced by a property investment of almost one and a quarter billion dollars, and a budget of $77,000,000 should be 'steadfast and unmovable,' and 'abounding in the work of the Lord.' With nearly six million enrolled in our Sunday schools and seven and three-quarter million members, and with the Spirit of God directing the energies of the new church, we shall be able to go forward to be a very vital power in redeeming the world.

"It is not by numbers and values that we shall win; but if these numbers and values are dominated and controlled by the spirit of God, nothing shall be able to keep us from fulfilling Christ's great commission."

U.S. BUREAUS SEND 'TALENT SCOUTS' TO BIG CAMPUSES

Uncle Sam Takes a Tip From Big Business on Assembling a Bright and Efficient Personnel.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—Talents scouts for government have joined the spring march of business executives through the colleges of the land—hoping to hire "the cream of the crop."

Several government agencies have entered this year in the annual battle to snag the "bright young men" of the graduating classes. Agents for big business corporations long have made the rounds year after year in search of outstanding men who might become future executives. And the scouts of professional baseball teams and football corporations annually put their lines out to catch the college heroes.

What They Want.

Convinced that government service offers a "career" that few young men appreciate, several agencies have sent men to the colleges this spring to talk it up—and to answer questions.

Most of the government men are looking for specially-trained June graduates who might become experts — chemists, bacteriologists, statisticians, economists, lawyers, foresters, engineers.

However, some have their eyes peeled for the "big-man-on-the-campus" type — the collegian whose forte is leadership.

A few government "scouts" go out with the power to hire men. If they find a likely fellow with an outstanding record they can sign him on the dotted line before some bond house or manufacturer's representative gets to him.

Scour Law Schools.

Thus, Thurman Arnold, chief "trust-buster" of the Justice Department, primed one of his aides to scour the leading law schools for young men who have read their big case-books carefully. And Josephine Blades has been looking around the land-grant colleges for young electrical engineers to work into the Rural Electrification Administration.

But most of the government men can only urge the students to try their skill on the stiff exams of the Civil Service Commission. By showing the work-opportunities of government, they hope to spur more college seniors into joining the competition. Men who pass the civil service tests with high grades go on the "eligible list" for openings in Washington or in the field." An official estimates that 743,000 persons taking such an exam recently, about 500 would get federal jobs.

For "Ag" Students.

In this field, men from the Department of Agriculture have explained the duties of junior pomologists, junior botanists (taxonomic) and junior soil physiologists to "ag school" students.

In a few cases, where the college paid travel expenses, the Civil Service Commission has sent its own experts out to explain the whole broad field of government work to bright-eyed seniors.

To meet the competition of industry for the outstanding men of the younger generation, the Civil Service Commission hopes this year to post its "lists" by the end of June. In other years, some officials had complained, many outstanding graduates already were "placed" in industry by the time they learned a government job was open to them.

The greatest need of the big business of government now, officials say, is young men trained in public administration, with a groundwork knowledge of the "administrative technique" needed in junior executives or a knowledge of personnel problems.

Not All College Men.

Despite this new drive for experts in the government, however, a civil service official emphasized that the door still is open for persons without formal education. For example, the Post Office Department—which alone employes one-third of the federal workers—still picks its new men on a "what do you know?" test, without asking "what college did you go to?"

And there still are careers in government, he said, for persons who start as clerks or stenographers. He cited instances of women who began as typists at $1,200 a year and worked up to $5,600 jobs as division chiefs.

RETURNED MENTAL PATIENTS RULED WARDS OF COUNTY

Arnall Says State Is Not Obligated To Support 'Harmless' Insane Cases Certified as Incurable.

Attorney General Ellis Arnall ruled yesterday the state is under no obligation to support "harmless and inoffensive" mental patients at Milledgeville hospital for insane if state medical officers certify they cannot be restored to sanity by further treatment.

In a letter to Ordinary Walter C. Stevens, of Bibb county, the attorney general said counties cannot refuse to accept returned patients and added:

"If the patient discharged is a pauper, the county is bound for his or her support. . . .

Rules on Non-Paupers.

"If, on the other hand, the discharged patient is not a pauper, then the county is not bound . . . and although it is the duty of the county authorities to receive, at least temporarily, the custody of the person discharged . . . where members of the family of the discharged person are found who are able to support him or her the county should turn the discharged patient over to them or to the guardian of such person, and if he or she has an estate sufficient for his or her support, the county is not liable and cannot contribute to support of such a person."

Arnall ruled the state hospital could discharge any non-violent patient if its medical officer certifies to the State Department of Public Welfare:

Ruling Listed.

"(1) The condition of such patient is such that no probability exists of his or her restoration to full reason and sanity by medical ministrations thereto.

"(2) He or she is regarded as harmless and inoffensive in spirit.

"(3) His or her return to social life would reasonably involve no danger to the life of those with whom he or she would be associated."

Hospital for Treatment.

Explaining his opinion to reporters, Arnall said it was "a common misapprehension" that the state hospital at Milledgeville was a place where mentally unbalanced persons "can be put away indefinitely."

"Actually the law construes it to be a hospital for treatment of mental cases," he said. "And where treatment is no longer of avail, harmless patients should be discharged."

He said the ruling did not apply to violent mental cases.

COTTON MAN FEARS WALLACE ACTION

Leader Says Secretary May 'Inadvertently Wreck Marketing System.'

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 27.—(AP) Everett R. Cook, president of the Cotton Research Foundation, expressed belief today that many cotton men fear that Secretary Wallace "inadvertently will wreck" the cotton marketing system.

In his Little Rock address Friday, Wallace asserted that "apparently" the objective of many in the cotton business was the destruction of the "entire agricultural program."

"Being in contact with most of the gentlemen Secretary Wallace can refer to," Cook said in a statement, "I believe nothing can be farther from their minds. Secretary Wallace's production program and the marketing system are of equal importance to the cotton farmer."

Estimating the cost of an export subsidy, as promulgated by Wallace, at $90,000,000 next year on the basis of a 6,000,000-bale export, Cook declared there would not be enough money available from anticipated congressional appropriations and other sources to pay it.

Kyle Rallies To Beat Duncan, 2-1, for British Amateur Golf Crown

A CHAMPION CLUTCH HITTER IN ACTION - - - HERE'S THE START AND FINISH OF MARSHALL MAULDIN'S EFFECTIVE SWING

First shot finds Marshall Mauldin poised, leaning forward, studying the pitcher—No. 2: Bat goes back, ready for anything—No. 3: Starts Swing—No. 4: The old follow through—No. 5: It's a hit—throws bat down and sets sail for first. Mauldin, adept at playing both the infield and outfield, has been hitting around the .330 mark and breaking up ball games with wallops in the clutch. And he hustles every minute every game.

Kyle Rallies To Win British Golf Title

Winner Is First Scotch Champ Since Thomson; Bad Putting Costs Duncan Victory.

HOYLAKE, England, May 27.—(AP)—Alex Kyle, a free-swinging, fastidious Scotsman, came from behind on the last round today to beat Soldier Tony Duncan, of Wales, 2 and 1, for the British amateur golf championship.

Two down after 18 holes and even after 33, Kyle won the 34th and 35th to take the title back to Scotland for the first time since Hector Thomson won it in 1936. Ironically, Duncan, a superb putter, lost it on the green. At the 34th he was only 18 feet from the cup in three, but then his putter failed him and he needed three putts to get down.

The soldier lost his chance to send the match to the final hole by hitting his second out of bounds at the 35th and ending up with a 6, two over par, while Kyle played safe with a 5. Duncan actually put himself in a tough spot by hitting balls out of bounds at the 19th and 21st holes to lose the two-hole advantage he gained through the first 18 holes.

Duncan was really right during the morning round, however. After being two down through the first 12 he won four of the last six holes. He shot a 36 for the homeward nine, one under par, while Kyle took 40 strokes.

After Kyle had tied the match at the 21st and went one up at the 25th as Duncan sliced his tee shot, the Welshman got square again at the 26th with a birdie four. But he drove into the sand at the 27th and headed into the last nine one down. Duncan squared the match again at the 28th, went one down at the 31st where Kyle dropped an iron shot six inches from the cup for a deuce. Duncan drew even again at the 33rd, but faltered on the next three holes.

Kyle succeeds America's Charlie Yates, who was eliminated during the early rounds.

Net Finals Set Today In Biltmore

Boland Vs. Jones or Reese; Mrs. Jones Plays Coyne in Ladies' Meet.

Dr. Kels Boland and the winner of the incompleted Champ Reese-David Jones match will meet this afternoon in the finals of the Biltmore tennis championships at the Biltmore Club, on Fourth street, between Peachtree and Juniper.

The men's finals will follow the ladies' finals between Mrs. David Jones and Mrs. Etta Coyne and an exhibition match between Bitsy Grant and Russell Robbitt. Doubles finals will conclude the program.

Boland advanced yesterday with an easy victory over Hank Crawford, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4, but the top-seeded Jones was having a battle with Reese when rain halted the match. Reese won the first set, 7-5, dropped the second, 4-6, and was trailing in the third, 3-4, when the bottom dropped out.

The match is scheduled to be finished this morning and the winner will meet Boland for the title.

COYNE VS. JONES.

Mrs. Coyne, one of the city's best players, sprang the first major upset in the women's tournament with a hard-fought victory over second-seeded Gladys Valebuona, former southern ranking player. The scores were 8-6, 2-6, 6-4.

Today's final program in the annual Biltmore tennis championships:

2 O'Clock—Women's final: Mrs. David Jones vs. Mrs. Etta Coyne. Best of three sets.

3 O'Clock—Exhibition: Bryan Grant Jr. vs. Russell Bobbitt. Best of three sets.

4 O'Clock—Men's finals: Dr. Kels Boland vs. David Jones or Marion Reese. Best of five sets.

5 O'Clock—Doubles finals.

Mrs. Jones advanced with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Majorie Ingram, who had won her way into the semi-finals with a 6-4, 6-1 win over Helen Hughes.

The ladies' finals should present

Skeet Shoot Carded At West End Today

The regular weekly skeet shooting tournament of the West End Gun Club will be held today at the grounds on Fort McPherson reservation. In the main event, a 50-target all-bore, prizes will be awarded for high scores in scratch and handicap divisions. Shooting lasts all day.

During the afternoon, several novelty events will be staged, including do-or-die and miss-and-out events. These affairs are very popular with shooters and spectators and will hereafter be included regularly in the programs.

Authorities at Fort McPherson have announced that the roadway through the fort, which was closed last Sunday, will again be open today, and those going to the club will use the main entrance through the grounds as usual. The Campbellton road gate will be closed.

TROJANS ANNEX I. C. 4-A MEET

Southern California Totals 71 1-2 Points; Pitt 2d; Records Topple.

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP)—A smooth - working, high - geared piece of track and field machinery swept through the 63d championships of the intercollegiate A. A. A. A., today and turned in a set of record-shattering performances that should stand for many years to come.

Before a crowd of 7,500 in Triborough stadium, and under perfect weather conditions, the Trojans of Southern California piled up 71 1-2 points, highest in the meet's history, to win the team title for the second straight year and the ninth time since 1925.

Winning five individual events, sharing in two others and adding the mile relay championship as a crowning touch, the Trojans spread-eagled the field so badly that Pittsburgh, in second place, had only 26 points and none of the others got beyond 20.

But while the Pacific coast conference champions were making good so handsomely on their awesome reputation, long John Woodruff, of Pittsburgh, did all that could be expected of a lone easterner standing up against this 20-man western invasion.

WOODRUFF STARS.

In his final I. C. 4-A., appearance, Woodruff won the 440-yard and 880-yard titles for the third straight year and made this finale the best of the three.

Forced to show fight to retain his quarter-mile honors in a fourman blanket finish which saw him equal the meet record of 47 seconds flat for the third time, he ran a front race in the half-mile an hour and 20 minutes later and set up a new I. C. 4-A., mark of 1 minute 51.2 seconds.

U. S. C.'s team score bettered its own mark of 62 3-4 points established in 1932 at Berkeley, Cal. Woodruff's 880, in which he won by 10 yards over Curtis Giddings, of New York U., who subsequently was disqualified for fouling on the turn, lopped seven-tenths of a second off Ben Eastman's seven-year-old standard.

3 NEW RECORDS.

In addition to Woodruff's performances, three new records were made and one meet record was equalled, all by U. S. C.'s representatives. Lou Zamperini, who ran the 5,000 meters on the 1936 U. S. Olympic team, brought the one-mile time down to 4:11.2 in his first I. C. 4-A., appearance.

Red-head Earl Vickery, who flew over the 220-yard low hurdles in 23.1 in yesterday's eliminations for a new record, hauled that down to 22.8 in final.

And Bob Peoples' javelin throw of 223 feet 11 3-4 inches, which led the qualifiers yesterday, stood up as the best performance of the two days. U. S. C.'s Jim Hum-

All in the GAME

by Jack Troy

Here's hoping Tom Watkins gets his wish about football.

Certain Southern league towns, Memphis being one, are dallying with the idea of entering a football league in the winter.

And it certainly would be a great thing if Memphis could get in the league provided it would serve to correct a little matter involving the Memphis baseball team.

That is to say, it would be tops if the Chickasaws then would confine their huddles to football and let baseball pursue its normal course.

Now, time is suspended more frequently than the family wash when Memphis comes to Atlanta. Any ordinary occurrence like, say, a base on balls, is the signal for a Memphis huddle.

Manager Frank Brazill charges out of the dugout, the infielders dash toward the mound, and there they all get together and have a friendly little chat.

This sort of thing has been going on for years and years. And the huddles vary in duration according to the seriousness of the occasion. If there is a base on balls and a hit, then a much longer huddle is necessary. And on such occasions as the bases being loaded, it takes full persuasive powers of an umpire to clear the field.

I am not saying that it isn't all right to huddle in a crisis. But there is no sense in carrying a thing too far. The Chicks go to extremes in the matter.

It is not fair to the fans for them to be allowed to keep on doing it. For instance, Friday night's game was scoreless through the eighth. There was snappy fielding.

And yet, the game required almost two hours and a half of playing time because the Chicks managed to waste more than half an hour with their inane huddles.

The Crackers and other Southern league clubs figure out what they're going to do in the dressing room and employ signals on the field. They huddle only in dire emergencies.

But not the Chicks. Anything is cause for a huddle. The situation would be relieved a little if Brazill or some other Chick would flash a pair of dice. Or if some attendant came out bearing a tray of tea and cakes.

THEY'RE GETTING SMARTER.

Youngsters of today who have exceptional talents as baseball players are holding themselves a little dear as regards the signing of a contract.

Scouts are fine fellows, as a rule, and it's their job to get a boy signed up as economically as possible. But it is funny to hear one of them moan about such and such a boy being so unreasonable because he happens to want a little something for himself.

Baseball has a glowing future for boys who really have it. They can, if smart, insist on a reasonable nest egg and later on the salary is commensurate with the ability they show.

It always has seemed bad for boys with great ability to be signed up without getting anything but a song and then having to depend entirely on salary for their future livelihood.

Now, the boys themselves can carry the signing business to extremes. If they're not reasonable, they are hooked. They

DRUID HILLS STAR GETS HOLE-IN-ONE

Bogey Goes Unclaimed; Today Is Final Day To Qualify.

Alvin Cooledge turned in a hole-in-one yesterday when he sank his tee shot on the par 38th hole at Druid Hills.

He used a No. 4 iron to negotiate the 200-yard hole.

Cooledge was playing with Arthur Mims, Hal Braun, Phil Anderson and Joe Horacek Jr.

Druid Hills' blind bogey went unclaimed yesterday. None of the many golfers who trekked over the course were able to hit the number 71.

Runners-up with 70's were A. N. Other, Dr. A. S. Sanders and A. C. Shaw. M. B. Hargrave posted a 72.

With a 69 was P. D. MacQuiesten. Austin Dilbeck and Morris Ewing turned in 73's. A. C. Newell, R. T. Black, Dr. Harvey Payne and Leonard Crawford had 74's.

Today is the final day to qualify in the annual club championship at Druid Hills. Gene Gaillard, with a 66, is leading the sharpshooters.

Parris' Accuracy Wins Capital City Prizt.

Ralph Parris was the most accurate golfer on the Capital City course Saturday afternoon. That is, his tee shot on No. 3 was closest to the cup for a special prize.

The best foursome of the day included E. B. Adams, D. W. Everett, M. C. Bishop and J. L. Respess.

Individual winners in their respective foursomes were: M. C. Bishop, Dr. J. L. Pittman, Billy Warlaw Jr., Joe Horacek Jr., John Grant Jr., A. H. Sturgess, R. G. Vance and J. E. Barnes.

Jones, Porter Cop Bogey at Ansley.

Two players hit the winning number—69—in the Ansley Park blind bogey tournament Saturday afternoon. They were H. P. Jones and J. D. Porter.

Two players had a score of 70. They were Joe Fisch and D. M. Ward.

E. H. Niefert and E. S. Merritt had a score of 68. The low net prize was won by Ed Merritt with a 68.

Chicks Score Four In Third; Win, 6-4

Stein, Durham Finish Game; Double-Header Slated This Afternoon.

By JACK TROY.

The Crackers got 13 hits off Ed Heusser yesterday, but it wasn't a lucky number because Heusser bore down in the pinches and dropped the Crackers out of first place by percentage points as the Chicks won the second game of the series, 6 to 4. Chattanooga was idle yesterday and regained the lead despite the fact that the Crackers were half a game ahead before yesterday's game.

They say figures don't lie, and yet the Crackers lost only half a game but still dropped the lead.

Frank Brazill's Chickasaws, making the most of nine hits, routed Luman Harris and pecked away at Pete Stein and Bob Durham until the end.

Harris was the losing pitcher. He got by the first two innings in great style, but in the third it was necessary to call on Stein to retire the side after the Chicks had collected four hits and as many runs.

This sudden outburst nullified a two-run lead the Crackers had amassed off Heusser and never again did the Crackers know what it was like to be ahead. The Chicks scored the other runs in the seventh and eighth.

In five and one-third innings, Stein allowed four hits and two runs, but fanned seven Chickasaws. Durham worked the ninth and Bates' double was the only damage.

Eckhardt and Veverka led the Chick hitting with two safe blows each. Heusser contributed a timely double to the cause.

TWIN BILL TODAY.

For today's double - header, starting at 2 o'clock, the Chicks will have Doyle and Gaddy on the mound in opposition to Johnston and Robinson.

A base on balls started the Chickasaws' four-run rally in the third inning. Whiteak walked, Piet bounced a hit off Harris' glove and Heusser doubled, scoring Whiteak. Bush flied to Mailho and there was no advance. Bates walked. Eckhardt beat out an infield hit and Piet scored. Epps flied to center and Heusser scored after the catch. When Veverka pounded a single to right, scoring Bates, Harris retired and Stein came in to strike out Rikard and retire the side.

In the seventh, with two away, Bush singled and stole second, Bates was safe on Peters' error, and Eckhardt singled to right, scoring Bush.

The final run in the eighth came on singles by Veverka and Rikard and an outfield sacrifice by Whiteak, scoring Veverka.

CRACKERS SCORE IN FIRST.

Three straight hits with two away gave the Crackers their initial run in the first inning. Mauldin and Mailho beat out infield hits and Peters drove Mauldin across on a single.

Whiteak booted Oetting's easy grounder in the second, Richards doubled and Rubeling drove out a sacrifice fly, scoring Oetting.

The Crackers scored a third run in the third inning. Mailho singled and was forced by Peters. Then Rucker, Oetting and Richards hit consecutive singles to score one measly run.

A pretty good rally was started in the ninth, but it ended abruptly when Durham had to hit for himself with the tying runs on base. Rubeling led off with a walk, Mauldin beat out an infield hit, and Mailho singled to left, scoring Rubeling. Peters was thrown out by Heusser and both runners advanced. Rucker had a chance to become a hero but couldn't see it that way. He flied to short center and there was no chance for Mauldin to score. Durham batted and struck out.

Raise Flags Monday.

Monday night has been set as double flag-raising night at Ponce de Leon park when the Little Rock Travelers come here for a two-game series.

Just before the game, the Southern league and Dixie series flags will be hauled up the flagpole. Music will be supplied by the state military girls' band.

Johnstown Runs First By 10 Lengths in Mile

DERBY WINNER NOT EXTENDED BY FIVE RIVALS

Hash Second and Porter's Mite Third in Belmont Race.

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP)—William Woodward's Johnstown, Kentucky Derby winner, waltzed in to win the historic Withers mile by ten lengths at Belmont Park today.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash was second by a head over W. E. Boeing's Porter's Mite.

Johnstown covered the mile in 1 minute 35 4-5 seconds, equalling the record for the event set by Man o' War in 1920.

The big son of Jamestown-La France, odds-on favorite, broke on top and by the time the field passed the half-way mark was so far out in front he couldn't be caught. His entry mate, Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Gilded Knight, was a disappointing fourth, six lengths behind Porter's Mite, with George D. Widener's Birch Rod fifth and last in this smallest field in the Withers in 12 years.

The victory was worth $15,750 to Johnstown, bringing his money winnings for the year to $87,625.

The chief fight was for place, with Porter's Mite taking over second from Gilded Knight at the half, and then giving it up to Hash in a drive down the stretch. Hash was 2-1 for place, and the Mite paid 8-5 for show.

Alvin Untermyer's Cockerel, two-year-old bay colt by Transmute-Chickie, came on in the closing strides today to win the juvenile stakes five-furlong dash, supporting feature to the Withers mile.

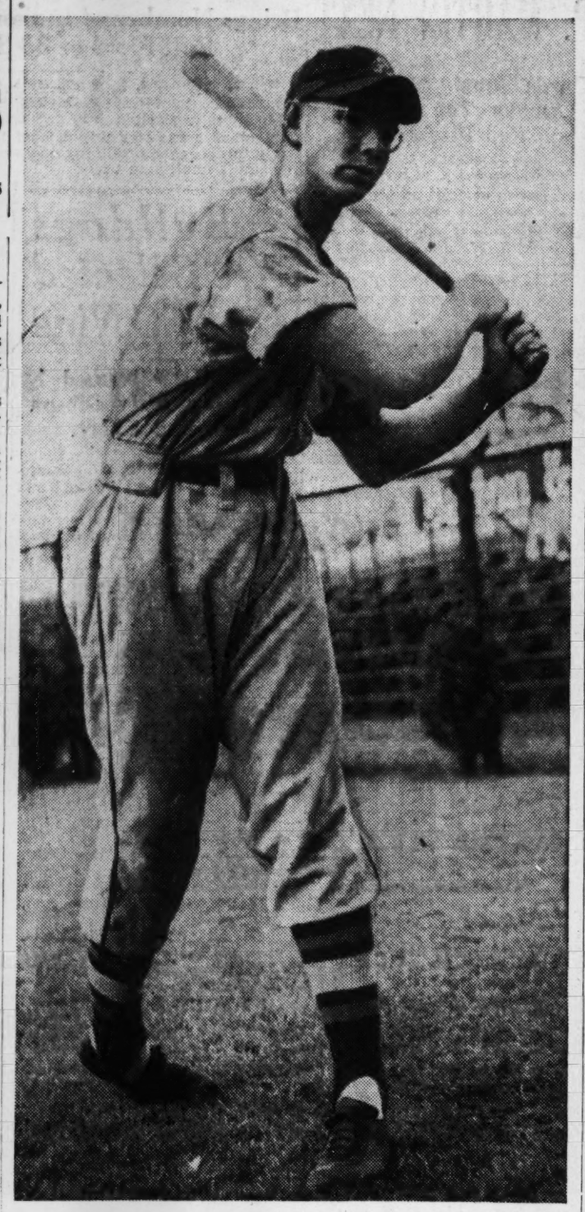

Rated well off the pace for more than four furlongs by Jockey Eddie Arcaro, the Untermyer colt just nipped A. G. Vanderbilt's chestnut filly, Now What, with the betting favorite, B. F. Whitaker's Gannet, third to end a four-race winning streak.

Cockerel, which collected $4,775 as the winner's share in this 63rd running of the juvenile, covered the five-furlong straightaway in 57 4-5 seconds, paid 5 to 1.

PEB PLAYER GOES.

SCRANTON, Pa., May 27.—(AP) The Scranton Red Sox of the Eastern league today acquired Second Baseman Sidney Signaige from Little Rock of the Southern association. Signaige joins the Sox today in Albany. He played last year with Canton, Ohio, in the Mid-Atlantic league.

ON WAY BACK TO BIG LEAGUES

Russ Peters, whom the Crackers bought from the Athletics, is on his way back to the majors. He is hitting the ball far and often and is considered one of the Southern league's great defensive shortstops of all time. One particular play he executed against Memphis Friday night must be ranked with the finest fielding gems seen at Ponce de Leon park.

Abernathy, Hafey, Mailho Continue To Lead Southern Batters

CHAPMAN, FIFTH AT .350, LEADING 6 DEPARTMENTS

Tops in Hits, Runs, Doubles, Homers, Total in Bases and R.B.I.

By HOWE NEWS BUREAU.

Calvin Chapman, Nashville outfielder, swatted away in a merry style during the past week and took over nearly everything but the presidency of the Southern Association.

Chapman now leads in runs scored with 35; in hits, with 50; in total bases, with 96; in doubles, with 14; in home runs, with 10, and in runs batted in, with 30. In addition he is batting .350, which ranks him fifth among the regulars who have gone to bat 70 or more times.

Woodley Abernathy, Knoxville outfielder, retained the batting leadership but dropped 24 points and now has .406, while Bud Hafey, of Knoxville, dropped from .422 to .393, and remains in second position as Emil Mailho fell from .416 to .389, but held on to third place. Emil holds the lead in stolen bases, with 10.

Dutch Meyer, of Knoxville, is fourth with .354. Russ Peters, of Atlanta, has hit the most triples, eight.

The Knoxville Smokies continue to lead the circuit in batting and now have .308. Birmingham leads in fielding, with .974, and Chattanooga in double plays, with 49.

Crip Polli, of Chattanooga, heads the pitchers with five wins and no losses. Floyd Stromme, of New Orleans, has won the most games, seven, and has lost two.

Include Day Games of Thursday.

Pelicans Purchase Gordon Maltzberger

NEW ORLEANS, May 27.—(AP) New Orleans, of the Southern association, substituted a pitcher today. Gordon Maltzberger, right-hander, was purchased from Knoxville and Glenn Gabler was given his unconditional release.

Barnes, Emory Ace, Plays at Montgomery

Left-handed Tommy Barnes, of Columbus, Ga., Emory's champion golfer, will discard his books next week and be off for the Montgomery invitation tourney which begins Friday in Montgomery.

Termed the outstanding invitation meet in southern golf, the tourney will draw the cream of this section's amateurs.

Barnes, only a freshman at Emory, captured the campus golf championship a week ago with a decisive win over Curtis Benton. He is considered one of the best left-handed prospects the south has produced in many years.

THOMASTON MEET SET FOR JUNE 8-9

THOMASTON, Ga., May 27.—A number of changes are being made in the golf course at the Thomaston Country Club in preparation for the 14th annual Peach Belt tournament, which will be held here on June 8 and 9.

Traps and hazards are being added to the course, along with remaking and changing the greens. Julian H. Roberts, club pro, believes that the winner this year will shoot a higher score than in preceding years.

The annual tournament is the leading event of the year at the local club, and attracts visitors from the state at large. In 1938 George Hightower and G. G. King Jr., local youths, won first and second place in a field of more than a hundred.

Golfers may qualify any time between June 3 and June 8.

The following trophies will be given: Individual low qualifying score, 18 holes; winner championship and each other flight; runner-up championship and each other flight; consolation championship and each other flight.

Thursday evening, June 8, the visitors will dance to the music of Bill Clarke and his orchestra.

phrey tied the record of 14.4 seconds in winning the 120-yard high hurdles.

The Trojans also placed one-two in the discus, with Phil Gaspar and Art Wrotnowski; tied for first, with Loring Day, and took third with Irving Howe, in the pole vault, and put two men, Clarke Mallery and Jack Wilson, in a three-way tie for first place in the high jump.

MOST THRILLING.

The 440 was the most thrilling race of the day. Erwin Miller, of U. S. C., coming out of second position at the start, led down the chute with Woodruff at his shoulder and Don Watts, of California, third. They held that order as they came into the straight-away with inches separating them and long John almost pocketed.

Woodruff, who has to lengthen his stride when he wants to run faster, gave it all he got as they came into the last 30 yards. Literally, he fought his way up between the two westerners and literally, he won by pushing his chest into the tape bare inches ahead of U. S. C.'s Howard Upton, who came up like a streak on the outside.

Second with a score of 72 were Scott Hudson Jr., E. L. Wight, R. A. Beard, R. A. Martin, C. W. Carver and F. O. Sallee.

Five players were next with a score of 73. They were Julian Baxter Jr., R. W. Gaston, J. H. Irwin, A. R. Moore and W. L. Markert.

Ten players were last with a score of 74. They were O. O. Rae, W. P. Branch, L. C. Nance, E. S. Humphries, J. D. Wilcox Jr., Jack Robertson, J. J. Nicholson, J. C. Kyle, M. E. Cox and D. J. Evans.

Today is the last day for first-round play in the club handicap tournament.

The regular Sunday dogfite tournament will begin promptly at 1:30 o'clock on the No. 2 course. Entries must be in the golf shop by 12 o'clock sharp.

The mixed foursome play will begin promptly at 1 o'clock on the No. 1 course.

FOXX IS LEADING MAJOR BATTERS WITH .373 MARK

Bruce Campbell Hitting .452 in 16 Games; Mazzera Drops to Fourth.

A one-day's gain of 20 points on Thursday when he made three hits in five times at bat, shot Bruce Campbell, Cleveland outfielder who learned about hitting in the Chicago park's system, to the top of the American league batting order, but Campbell's .452 top average is for only 16 games.

The regular is Jimmy Foxx, Boston first baseman, who has an average of .373. Another first baseman, George McQuinn, of the Browns, is third with .369 for 32 games. Mel Mazzera, of the same team, lost 78 points this week, dropping from the league lead to .348.

Two more home runs off the mighty bat of big Hank Greenberg, of Detroit, raised his ante in the home run derby to eight, which is a margin of two over his next nearest rival, Charlie Gehringer. With 29 runs driven in to his credit, Greenberg has taken the lead in this invaluable contribution to team welfare.

Charlie Ruffing, of the Yankees, stands out all by himself among the league's hurlers with seven straight triumphs. Bobby Feller, of Cleveland, has the same number of wins, but has been beaten twice. Feller allowed the Boston Red Sox only one hit while beating them, 11 to 0, on May 25. Alejandro Carrasquel, of Washington, gave the Browns two hits while winning his third victory, 4 to 1, on the same day.

(Include Games of Thursday.)

WARREN TAKES 5-INNING BATTLE

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., May 27. Warren's high-stepping baseball team won its 19th victory here this afternoon with a 9-2, five-inning victory over Cartersville. The game was called on account of rain at the end of the fifth.

Moody, Rucker and Ford led Warren hitters. Moody got four for four, Rucker three for three and Ford two for three. McDaniel got two hits in two times up for the losers.

The victory was Warren's 19th against only four losses.

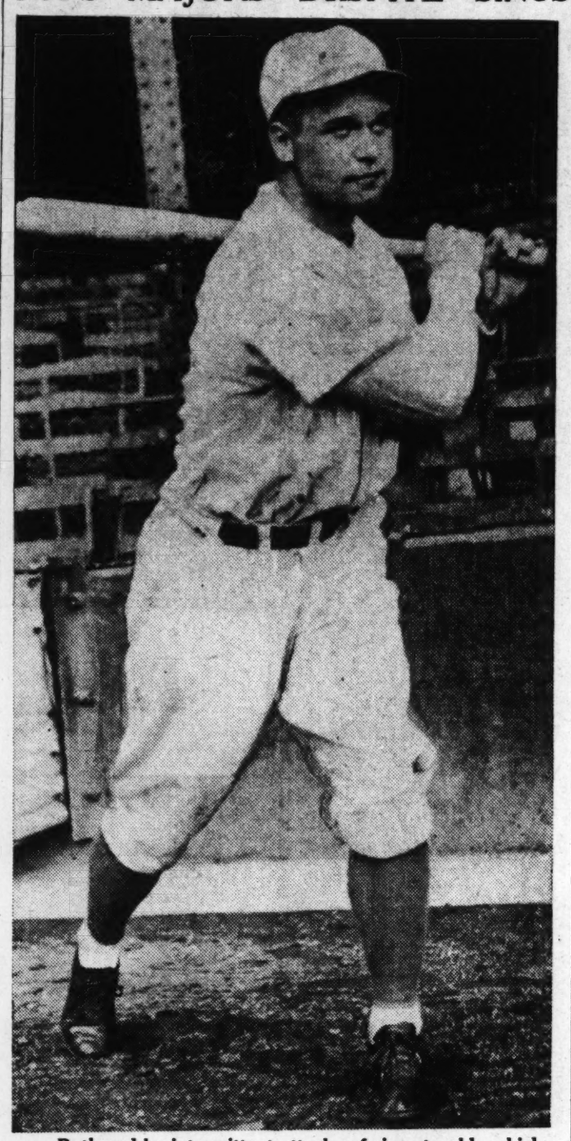

The Warrens meet American Bakers tomorrow afternoon on the Warren athletic field. The game will start at 3:30 and ladies will be admitted free. Ralph West will pitch for Warren. He will be opposed by Pete Osborn.

Score by innings:

Warren	300	51—9	11 0
Cartersville	010	10—2	5 1

Rucker and Ford; Price and Johnson.

TOPS MAJORS DESPITE SINUS

Bothered by intermittent attacks of sinus trouble which keep him out of the lineup every now and then, Jimmy Foxx, ace Red Sox first sacker, nevertheless is leading all regular players in the majors with a fat .373 average. Bruce Campbell, Indian outfielder; Joe DiMaggio, ailing Yankee outfielder; Johnny Marcum, Brown hurler, and Leo Nonnenkamp, Red Sox outfielder, are all ahead of Foxx in averages, but none of them have appeared in enough games to warrant consideration for top honors. Morris Arnovich, leading regular in the Natonal, is hitting .371.

Germans Take Lead Over Swedish Team

BERLIN, May 27.—(AP)—Germany's Davis cup team gained a 2-0 lead over Sweden in their European zone match today by sweeping both singles matches.

Roderich Menzel defeated Morgan Hultman, 6-0, 6-2, 6-1, and Heinrich Henkel disposed of Karle Schroeder, 5-7, 3-6, 6-2, 8-6, 6-3.

Notre Dame Defends Track Crown Friday

MILWAUKEE, May 27.—(AP)—The 14th annual Central Collegiate Conference championships, with more than 30 schools entered, will draw the track and field spotlight to the Marquette University stadium here next Friday.

Notre Dame will defend its team title and the Knute Rockne Memorial challenge trophy.

ARNOVICH HOLDS NATIONAL LEAD; P. MARTIN NEXT

Cards Supply Two Each Among Top Batters and Pitchers.

Morirs Arnovich, of the Phillies, managed to beat off all challenges to the National league batting lead this week, clinging to the honor with .371 percentage for 32 games.

There are plenty of rivals within shooting distance of the hustling Jewish star. Pepper Martin, of the Cards, is near by with his figure of .369 for 20 games, and Leslie Powers, Philadelphia first baseman, is only two points lower.

Booming along at .354 is Joe Medwick of the Cards, who may sweep to the front most any time. Two points from Medwick is the brilliant Frank McCormick, Red first baseman, who is tied with Dolph Camilli, of Brooklyn, in home run hitting with eight apiece.

Although standing pat on his record, Whitlow Wyatt, of the Dodgers, who was injured in a collision, still tops the elder circuit's twirlers with four and nothing. Lou Fette, of Bees, is sitting pretty with six victories and one loss.

Four More Qualify For 500-Mile Race

Brings Number of Indianapolis Starters to 27; Full Field of 33 Seems Assured.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 27.—(AP)—Qualification of four more drivers today for the Memorial Day 500-mile motor speedway race brought the number of starters to 27 and made it seem virtually certain a full field of 33 speedsters would start in the annual classic. The only likely threat is the possibility of a steady rain that might wash out the remaining qualifying trials.

A check at the garages showed approximately a dozen speedsters ready to fight it out for the remaining six places. If more than 33 cars qualify the ones making the slowest qualifying speed will be eliminated.

Russell Snowberger, of Detroit; Tony Gulotta, of Kansas City; Tony Willman, of Milwaukee, and Kelly Petillo, of Los Angeles, were today's qualifiers. Petillo's speed was 123.660 miles an hour; Snowberger's 123.199 miles an hour; Willman's 122,771 and Gulotta's 121.749.

PROVIDE DRAMA.

Petillo's effort provided all of the drama of the day. Twice before he had started but failed to finish and this was his last attempt. He ran a half dozen practice laps then came in, changed all four tires, took on gas and made his run. He won in 1935.

Waving his arms and talking a mixture of Italian and English to his father and speedway officials, Petillo jumped from his car, grabbed Louis Schwitzer, a technical committee member, lifted him high in the air and then swung him around.

The final trials will be held tomorrow from 10:30 a. m. until 5 p. m. Experts believed it would take at least 120 miles to get in the race. Thus far every car that has qualified has exceeded that speed.

The 27 qualifiers to date have an average of slightly better than 124 miles an hour.

Jimmy Snyder, the former Chicago milkman, has the pole position in the front row. His qualifying speed a week ago was 130.138 miles an hour.

Drivers who are expected to make their runs tomorrow include Louis Webb, of Knoxville, Tenn.; Ronney Householder, of Van Nuys, Cal.; Duke Nalon, of Chicago; Louis Tomei, of Portland, Ore.; Deacon Litz, of D

Yankees, Red Sox Win Double-Headers; Reds Beat Cards, 3 to 2

GROVE WINS 4TH AS BOSTON TOPS SENATORS TWICE

Yankees Win First Game, 8-2, on 5 Hits; Second, 11 to 9.

By The Associated Press.

Scoring six runs on two hits, five walks and a hit batsman in the first inning, the world champion Yankees humbled the Philadelphia Athletics, 8 to 2, yesterday in the first game of a double-header.

The Yanks also won the second game with a five-run rally in the seventh inning, 11 to 9.

Henrich and Selkirk both got two homers during the day.

Bill Beckman pitched seven and one-third innings of the first game in relief role. He allowed only four hits but one of them was Keller's homer with a man on base.

Lefty Grove chalked up his fourth victory of the season when he pitched the Boston Red Sox to an 11-to-4 victory over the Washington Senators in the first game of a double-header. Jimmy Foxx and Joe Vosmik each slammed out a home run.

Vosmik hit another homer in the ninth inning to give the Red Sox a clean sweep, 7 to 6.

The Detroit Tigers batted Vernon Kennedy, former teammate, out of the box as they beat the St. Louis Browns, 12 to 5, in the first game of a double-header behind the eight-hit pitching of Tommy Bridges. Charley Gehringer, Detroit second baseman, got a single, double, triple and home run in that order to bat in five Tiger runs.

The teams were rained out in the second game in the fourth inning with the Tigers leading, 4 to 3.

Johnny Humphries, of the Cleveland Indians, stepped into the box in the ninth inning of yesterday's game with the Chicago White Sox, retiring three men in order to nip a two-run rally and give the Indians a 7-to-6 victory. First Baseman Hal Trosky, of the Indians, injured his shoulder in the seventh and was placed under a physician's care.

ATHLETICS 2-9; YANKEES 8-11.

THEY HAVE CHOICE SEATS FOR DRUID HILLS SWIM MEET

Constitution Staff Photo—Wilson

SPORTING DESTINY.

NEW YORK.—There is always such a thing as that mist-ridden, fog-covered, mysterious word as destiny connected with sport. No one can explain it, just as no one can explain a big part of life's unguessable plan or scheme. As some sporting philosopher once wrote, "Dame Fortune is a cock-eyed wench that looks not where she aims—"

Taking no credit away from the Yankee background of shrewd planning and smartness along most lines, there is no question that this unknown sporting destiny has worked in their favor. They took certain chances and these chances made good.

But chance doesn't always work that way. Chance never works in any set, given direction. That's why it happens so to be labelled chance. There are so few certainties in this somewhat spotty and sporting existence that they rarely rate the word. The shadow of chance still hangs above all so-called certainties.

Chance—and Babe Dahlgren

Chance has played a part in the directing of many a ball player's career—how much of a part even the ball player frequently doesn't know. Take Babe Dahlgren of the Yankees, successor to Lou Gehrig at first base.

In the years that he was on unceasing duty, Gehrig scared off or discouraged more rising young first basemen than any other star that ever played the bag. For years the Yankees weren't seriously interested in any kid toting a first baseman's mitt or, if they did take one up, it was with the thought of using him as trading material or sending him to one of their farm clubs.

Mostly they were robust hitters. Yankee scouts long ago were instructed, when looking over candidates for any job, to pick only the hitters. That's why the Yanks pack a punch in every position. The Yankees sought Hank Greenberg because he could hit, thinking either to use him in a trade or convert him into an outfielder. But Hank wanted to play first base and he saw no future with the Yankees—not with Gehrig standing guard over first base. So he got away. But the Yankees took Gibson and McQuinn—and sent them to Newark. And took Hassett and fooled around with him for a while and then cut the string on him.

When Gehrig Cracked.

Finally they took Dahlgren. He wasn't a hitter—not a big league hitter, at any rate, although he managed to do pretty well at the plate in the minors. They had him in Newark and sold him to the Red Sox and then bought him back and kept him on the bench. The chance that he ever would take over at first base at the stadium seemed remote.

Being a wise and forward-looking young man, Babe worked out at the other infield positions, hoping that somehow he could sneak into one of them for a few games at a time. He wasn't going to waste all his time sitting on the bench, waiting for Gehrig to crack—especially when Joe McCarthy showed some interest in Tommy Henrich's pre-game gallopings around first base.

But when Gehrig cracked it was Dahlgren who took his job. The forgotten man of the Yankees suddenly was precipitated from the shadow of the dugout into the bright light that beats down on the regular players. Fans at the stadium suddenly learned the identity of the slim young man who had bobbed around on the field during practice every day—and then bobbed into the dugout when the bell rang to start the ball game.

He Needn't Hit.

Save for a brief flurry at the plate when he first climbed into the lineup, Dahlgren hasn't hit. Moreover, he isn't likely to hit, since no one has yet devised a method for teaching a powder-puff hitter to knock down the fences.

It happens that he doesn't have to hit to hold his berth. Not with Dickey, Rolfe, Crosetti, Gordon, Keller, Gallagher, Selkirk and the rest of those maulers walking up to the plate every day and Di-Maggio on his way back to work. He will hit now and then, of course, but they could carry him if he couldn't hit at all.

His value lies in his defensive work—and he is giving full value. He has pulled the Yankee infield together again where it had sagged as Gehrig made his futile stand against the onslaught of time. He makes seemingly impossible plays—and makes them with astonishing ease. He doesn't strike terror to the heart of an enemy pitcher when it is his turn to hit—but he already has thwarted enemy raids by grabbing base hits or wild tosses out of the dust—or the sky.

Better Than in '37.

DODGERS DOWN LOU FETTE, 4-2; BUCS TOP CUBS

Hamlin Hurls 5-Hitter in 4-2 Victory; Pirates Blast Higbe.

By The Associated Press.

The rampaging Cincinnati Reds showed their heels to the St. Louis Cardinals again yesterday, dusting them off, 3 to 2, before a cloudburst broke up the game after eight innings.

Play could not be resumed after a 30-minute delay and the Redlegs racked up their 12th successive victory, and increased their grip on first place in the spirited National league race to nearly two full games over the Cardinals.

It was a tense, thrilling struggle and a homer on the pavilion roof by Lonnie Frey in the seventh inning turned out to be the run that brought home the bacon. It was his fourth of the season, and Cincinnati's 33rd in 33 games.

Lee Grissom, Ray Davis and Lloyd Moore held the Cardinals to four hits, two of them doubles by Jimmy Brown and Pepper Martin to account for the opening Card run in the first inning.

Zeke Bonura led the New York Giants in a 14-hit assault on four Philadelphia Phillies' pitchers yesterday for a 10-to-1 victory behind Hal Schumacher's steady eight-hit flinging. Bonura got four safeties, including a home run.

For the second day in a row the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Chicago Cubs, this time 9 to 1 with 11 hits off Kirby Higbe, Ray Harrell and Gene Lillard. Truett Sewell limited the Cubs to five hits.

Luke Hamlin's five-hit pitching helped the Brooklyn Dodgers to beat the Boston Bees, 4 to 2, but triples by Goodie Rosen and Harry Lavagetto drove Lou Fette from the mound in the fifth and provided the winning runs.

Southeastern Pros Vie Here Tuesday for Places in National P. G. A.

GEORGE PICARD FAVORED TO WIN ONE OF 5 SPOTS

Cooley Chief Atlanta Threat Over Capital City Route.

By ROY WHITE.

Professional golfers from Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North and South Carolina and Tennessee will begin to arrive in Atlanta today to participate in the Southeastern Sectional qualifying for the National P. G. A. Tuesday on the Capital City course.

Five low scorers in Tuesday's 36-hole medal competition will win places to compete in the biggest pro tournament of the year during the late summer.

George Picard, from Charleston, S. C., younger brother of Henry, won first place last year and will be favored to win again Tuesday.

Practice rounds will be permitted today and Monday also, though the course will not be closed to members of the Capital City Club.

NORRIE ARRIVES.

George Norrie, from the Idle Hour Club, Macon, Ga., is president of the Southeastern P. G. A. and was in Atlanta Friday completing arrangements for Tuesday's play. Howard Beckett, veteran Capital City pro, is vice president and host to the visitors. John Budd, Tallahassee, Fla., is the secretary-treasurer and will be in the city Monday for a practice round and also to assist in promoting the tournament.

In a practice round with Beckett, Norrie was very much pleased with the condition of the course. It was the first round on the summer greens, which will be in use Tuesday. The course is in better condition than ever before at this time of the year and the weather has been so favorable that the sprinkler system has not been used at all.

Hoke Cooley, assistant professional at the Capital City Club and probably the most improved pro in this section, will be Atlanta's chief threat to win one of the places. Harold Sargent, young assistant at East Lake, will be another of Atlanta's best prospects. Sargent, after a shaky morning round in the National Open, came back with a par 70 in the afternoon, a gain of 11 strokes during the day.

EDWARDS LIKED.

Charlie Edwards, new pro at the West End club, who was runner-up in the city amateur several years ago, may be another of Atlanta's best bets to win a place.

Gene Cook, who learned his golf in Atlanta and led the National Open eliminations Tuesday at Birmingham, will be one of Picard's chief threats for medal honors.

Beckett said Saturday afternoon that approximately 40 players will participate in Tuesday's event.

BOXING TOURNEY STARTS JUNE 13

The city amateur boxing tournament will open at Lakewood park on Tuesday, June 13. Both novice and open divisions will be held and the tournament will be run on a round robin basis with each boy meeting every other boy in his weight class.

No boy will be eliminated from competition but will receive points for each win and the boy with the highest number of wins will be declared champion.

Boxing trunks, robes, shoes, mouthpieces and other equipment will be awarded boys from time to time for their showing. Winners in each weight class will be given handsome belt buckles for their championships. Boys with most number of points will be chosen to represent Atlanta in the inter-city matches against Pensacola, Chattanooga, Charlotte, Birmingham and other cities.

This tournament, which will be held each Tuesday at Lakewood, is sanctioned by the A. A. U. and Y. M. C. A. Entry blanks may be secured at the Y. M. C. A. service counter from Tommy Phillips. Both novice and open division boys are requested to enter.

1927 still is a matter for debate but it is certain they are greater than the Yankees of 1937, who were good enough to romp off with the pennant and then go on and flatten the Giants in the World Series.

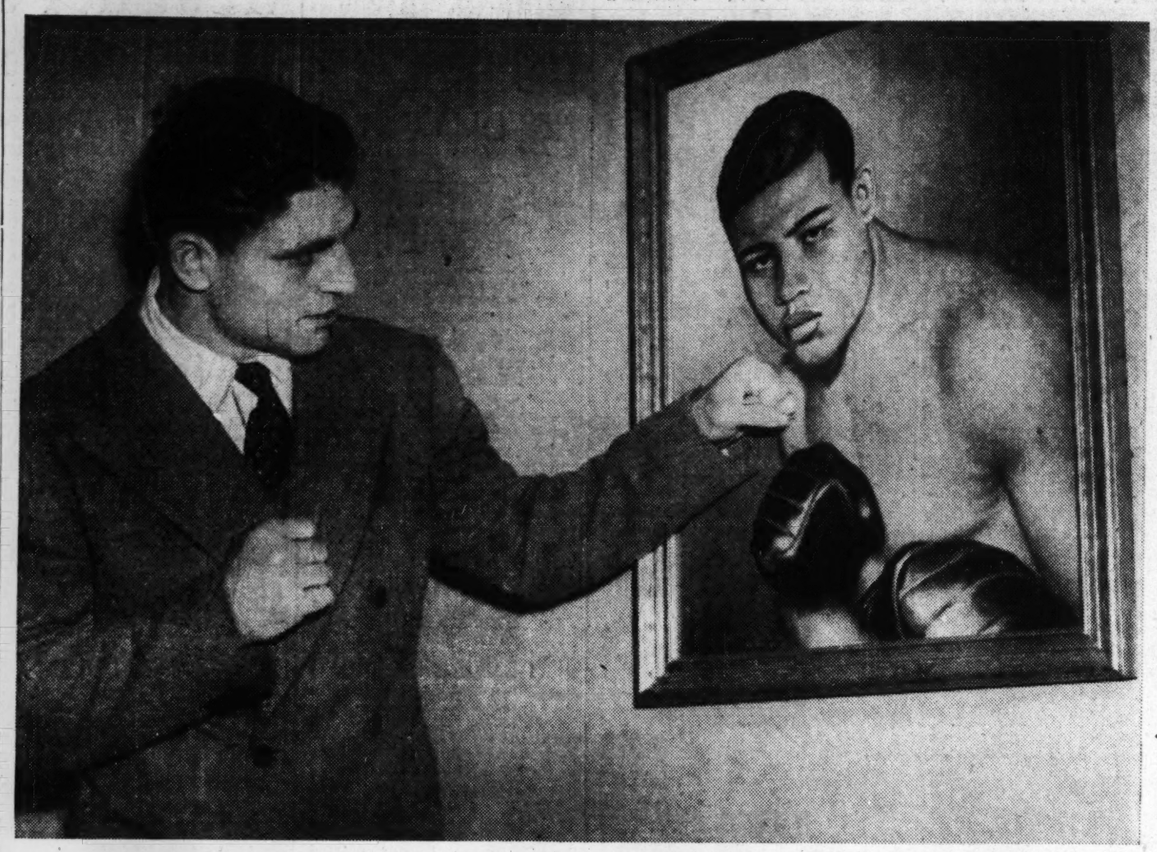

The big difference lies in the speed they have picked up on the right side of the infield. In 1937 Tony Lazzeri was playing his last year as a Yankee regular and getting slower by the day. His hitting was one of the features of the World Series that year but he was through as a regular and he knew it. That's why he asked for his release. Meanwhile, Gehrig had begun to slow down.

Last year Joe Gordon came up from Newark and, after a slow start, struck a whirlwind pace as the season swept along—but Gehrig was slower and with the passing of almost every day Gordon had more ground to cover on the line between first and second.

NOVA FIGHTS BAER ON THURSDAY WITH ONE EYE ON LOUIS

'3-1' NET TOURNEY STARTS JUNE 4

Boland, Courts, Dudley, Haverstadt Seeded in First Group.

The second annual "3 in 1" tournament of the Atlanta Tennis Club will begin Sunday, June 4, at 10 o'clock.

Top-seeded in the first group is Kels Boland and second is Malon Courts, last year's winner. No. 3 position is held by Dr. Glenn Dudley, runner-up to Courts. Fourth seeded is Jimmy Halverstadt. Russell Bobbitt, whose entrance is doubtful, was not seeded on this account, but his name appears in the draw.

In the second group, Ted Zuber, last year's winner, is given the No. 1 position, and Molly Williamson, eliminated by Zuber in the finals last year, gets the No. 2 position. Harry Gault is No. 3 and Roger DeLeon is No. 4.

The third group's No. 1 position is given to George Elyea, last year's runner-up to Cody Laird, who this year is placed in Group 2. Arthur Potter is No. 2, Clifford Anderson No. 3 and J. R. Johnson No. 4.

The tournament will be played on successive days and the winner of each group will be given a box of shirts by the club president, "Doc" Wilson. The club tournament committee, consisting of Molly Williamson and Lee Turman, will be in charge of the matches.

The first round matches will be as follows:

SUNDAY, JUNE 4, 10 O'CLOCK A. M.
Knox vs. Wilson, N.
Courts vs. Boyer.
Enloe vs. Chambers, P.
Bobbitt vs. Campbell, Allen.
Gault vs. Smith, C. T.
11 O'CLOCK A. M.
Dudley vs. Simpson.

"Doc" Wilson vs. Anderson, Cliff.
Johnson vs. Smith, W. A.
Lane vs. Hopkins.

Those whose names do not appear on the above schedule drew byes in the first round.

GUNTHER MEETS ROBERTS ON MAT

Joe Gunther, handsome and powerful young holder of the southern junior heavyweight wrestling championship, returns to Warren athletic field for his second title appearance Thursday night, meeting Red Roberts, of Little Rock.

This is the second of a series of new light-heavy shows featuring outstanding stars who never before have appeared in Atlanta. Last week's inaugural card created considerable favor.

Bill Hall, Toledo, and Jack Dillon, rangy Californian, open the card at 8:30.

Warren athletic field is ideal for outdoor shows. Every seat in the stands is a ringside and promoters intend to offer a number of big-time attractions during the summer.

Fans asked for new faces and they are getting them with some of the game's greatest performers being booked for action at the Warren park.

BELGIUM LEADS.

BRUSSELS, May 27.—(AP)—Belgium established a 2-0 lead over Norway in the third round of the Davis cup European zone competition today.

A. LaCroix beat J. Haanes 6-1, 6-4, 6-2, and Charles Naeyaert defeated Sigurd Rinde 6-1, 6-0, 6-0.

Baer Is Slight Choice Over Nova Thursday

Lou Gains in Favor as Max Looks Bad in Training; Gate of $100,000 Seen.

By SID FEDER.

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP)—Madcap Maxie Baer, who used to be a playboy, and serious Lou Nova, who never was, neared the end of their training grind today, but even at this late date their fight Thursday night still looked as close as ham and eggs.

These two family men from California are due to tangle 15 rounds or less (for the wives and kiddies) in Yankee stadium, for the right to take on the winner of the June 28 Joe Louis-Tony Galento get-together in September

Up to now, Madcap Maxie, who swears he's given up the pastimes of elbow-bending and whoopie-manufacturing for the home-like habit of rocking the cradle, has been installed as a slight favorite to take the young ex-college clouter. You can get $5 for $1 if you think the former heavyweight king will kayo the blond blaster, or he's favored at something like 2 to 3 to win the decision.

But Maxie has looked so woeful in training, has been belted around so consistently by sparmates, while Lou has shown such improvement, that there are any number of short-enders along Bash Boulevard these days. Then, too, Maxie is about as unpredictable as the weather when he climbs into the ring.

PICKS NOVA.

For what it's worth, this corner likes Nova to take Baer apart over the full route, with the chance that he may also rock Maxie into dreamland.

Undoubtedly there will be plenty of empty seats when they climb into the ring, sometime around 9 p. m. (E. S. T.), for the folks around and about have given indication that they can take this fight or leave it alone. But Promoter Mike Jacobs probably will count about $100,000 in the till by the time the waltz starts, which, as they say along Jacobs' beach, will put plenty of herring in the pantry.

In addition to their mutual ambition to collect some $50,000 or so for a September title brawl, these two fellows have a lot in common right now. Each has shouted that he's out to produce so that the youngster'll be proud of daddy.

Maxie, of course, is 30, has been around a long time, and, while he has an advantage in experience, isn't as frisky as when you first heard him hollering about himself from the west. He hasn't fought since March of 1938, when he outpointed Tommy Farr in a return match, after losing to the game Welshman a year previously in London. He still talks a great fight, but you can't tell whether he or his legs believe it, although no one can deny that when he connects with that right-hand swing, you might as well pick up the marbles.

LOTS TO LEARN.

Nova, on the other hand, is a strong, fast 24-year-old stand-up fighter, with worlds of ambition. He still has lots to learn, is cocky and in many ways—particularly in his left hand and his temperamental, excitable characteristics—resembles Gene Tunney.

He, also, is a member of the "I-Beat-Tommy-Farr" Cheering and Chowder Society, whipping the ex-coal miner in a 15-rounder last winter. Since then, he has acquired considerable ring polish. He has a short right-hand chop that he pitches inside with plenty of "zing," and a sweeping body attack that isn't at all conducive to good appetite.

Up at his menagerie-training camp at Nyack, N. Y., he has had the advantage of training almost daily with Jimmy Braddock, the man who took the heavyweight crown from Baer in '35, and who has particularly impressed on the ex-footballer the necessity of not letting Maxie twist him off balance.

Nova has been boxing professionally only since 1936, has had 26 professional fights, won 21, kayoed 13 opponents, been held to four draw verdicts, and lost only twice, a somewhat disputed decision to Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom last June. Baer is celebrating his tenth anniversary in the cauliflower ear industry. He has been to the wars 55 times and lost 10, including the four-round knockout by Joe Louis.

ALL IN THE GAME

have to be exceptionally good to get everything they ask and it's a mistake if they insist on too much.

But they are entitled to something and it is a source of much satisfaction to see that a lot of them are getting it. One of the saddest cases I can think of, off hand, involves Virgil Trucks, who had, and still has, great possibilities. The Tigers got him for $100. He was a strikeout sensation not long ago and is doing well for Beaumont, a Tiger farm, now.

While baseball is a great game as a career, it also is a hazardous pastime. So many things can happen to shorten a player's career. The boy with the great promise might come up with an injury hampering his future.

But in the matter of the signing, that's the risk the ball clubs should take. The boy has it when he signs—and he is entitled to some sort of financial security.

WARREN TO PLAY BAKERIES TODAY

The Warren baseball team, which has won 18 and lost five games (instead of six as was previously reported), faces a busy schedule for the next fortnight.

This afternoon at the Warren field at 2:30, American Bakeries will be met. Ladies will be admitted free.

Goodyear, of Atco, Ga., will invade the locals' field Tuesday night. Central Cafe provides the opposition Wednesday night and Shep Lauter takes his fast club to Rome to play Tubize Thursday night.

On Friday night Tubize will invade the Warren field and next Sunday Warren will be host to Buford's highly regarded club. In two games this season Warren and Buford each scored a victory.

Ralph West, former Cracker, is likely to start today for Warren. Ladies will be admitted free to all games except the Buford contest.

LEWIS ORDERED TO TAKE EXAM BY FIGHT GROUP

If Unable To Pass N. B. A. Will Vacate Light-Heavyweight Title.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—The National Boxing Association today ordered John Henry Lewis to submit to a medical examination and told him that if he failed to pass it the association would declare his light heavyweight title vacant.

Earlier this year Michigan boxing authorities refused Lewis permission to enter a bout at Detroit on the ground that the sight of one eye was damaged. Lewis then went to England for a bout and encountered a similar refusal there.

Charles F. Reynolds, president of the N. B. A., sent the order to Gus Greenlee, Lewis' manager, after a meeting of the executive board. He said that a physical examination by three Pittsburgh doctors selected by Commissioner Harvey Boyle, of Pennsylvania, would be satisfactory to the association.

"In making this decision," Reynolds said, "we are trying to be fair to boxing as a sport, to the public that supports it, to John Henry Lewis in the interests of his own health and to the leading contenders for his title."

Should Lewis fail to pass the examination, the association said, it would recognize as a world's championship contest a bout between Melio Bettina, Beacon, N. Y., and any of the following: Gus Lesnevich, Cliffside, N. J.; Dave Clark, of Detroit; Don Richards, of Australia; Billy Conn, of Pittsburgh.

HIGHLANDS CLUB TO OPEN FRIDAY

HIGHLANDS, N. C., May 27.—Extensive preparations have been made for the official opening of the Highlands' Country Club house and golf course Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Although the golf course has been in play about two weeks, it will be officially opened Friday when Jeff Modie, former professional at the James L. Key course in Atlanta, returns to resume his duties as Highlands' summer pro.

In addition to golf, Highlands' Country Club provides for horseback riding, tennis on one of the best bent grass courts in America; fishing, skeet shooting and hiking over the many mountain trails through laurel and rhodendron.

It was on the Highlands' course where Bobby Jones completed his final practice before he won all the major golf crowns in 1930 and retired.

A new short cut has been paved from Dilard, Ga., thus making Highlands slightly more than 100 miles from Atlanta on an all-paved highway.

DOT KIRBY PLAYS IN ATHENS MATCH

Dorothy Kirby, former Southern Woman's Golf champion; Mrs. Colleen Butler, Georgia's champion; Miss Louise Suggs, runner-up to Mrs. Butler in the state tournament in her second tournament, and Mrs. J. C. Wright, president of the Atlanta Woman's Golf Association, will play an exhibition match Tuesday on the Athens Country Club course.

The exhibition is a feature of an all-day golf tournament and outing for the Atlanta Woman's Golf Association, sponsored by the Athens Country Club.

R. M. Hubert, former Atlanta professional who is now the pro at the Athens club, last week invited the Atlanta association to Athens for its regular Tuesday play and scheduled the exhibition match as a special feature.

The exhibition will start at 10 o'clock.

Unser, Triplett Lead Tarheel Swatsmiths

Manager Al Unser, Gastonia catcher, slammed Tarheel league pitching for 14 hits in 25 trips to the plate during the past week and brought a .341 percentage up to .424 and took over the batting leadership of the league.

Larry Tone, Shelby outfielder, took over the second spot with his .413 and leads in hits with 33. McWilliams, Hickory catcher, is third with .408 with Hooper Triplett, of Gastonia, and Marvin Felderman, of Lenoir, tied at .400. Triplett holds the home-run lead with seven and the runs-batted-in lead with 32.

Ben Brown To Fight At Houston June 6

Ben's next local appearance will be around June 15 and promoters are keeping the wires hot trying to bring a top-notcher here to oppose the hard-hitting Brown, who hopes to meet Solly Krieger before the summer season fades out.

In Dixie's FIELDS AND STREAMS

Conservation clubs throughout the state of Georgia will do well to take advantage of the President's proclamation acclaiming the week beginning May 31 as National Flood Prevention Week, and so arrange club programs and local publicity on flood and erosion control in order to focus public attention on the great damage being done to good fishing streams through erosion. Many factors contributing to floods cannot be man-controlled. It is not to be hoped or expected that floods can ever be entirely tamed. We cannot control the amount of rainfall nor the quantity of stream flow resulting from rainfall. We can, however, help make waters "walk" instead of "run," so that the total flow, while not reduced, is spread over a longer period.

Erosion, the prime factor behind the silting and muddying of our streams, must be controlled through a well balanced program of terracing and vegetative planting in agricultural sections. Over 75 per cent of the streams in the state of Georgia have become unsuited for game fish because of muddy waters and pollution. Streams which people still living today can remember when they flowed sparkling and clear, now rush seaward with every gallon carrying its prorated amount of soil. Conditions of this kind cannot be corrected overnight. Like many other evils that are taking surprising toll of our natural resources, they cannot be legislated out of existence. Only public sentiment can correct these evils through long term planning.

The solution to the problem lies in the hands of the tillers of our soil—people who are today confronted with many perplexing problems. Erosion and its resulting damages to our streams, present an individual problem on each farm. Strip planting and rotation of crops with proper terracing is necessary on practically all areas.

The reverting of some agricultural land on slopes and poor soil sites to forest areas with their resulting protective covering will be necessary. The forest litter mechanically retards flow and holds back water for absorption. Its coarseness permits penetration, it serves as a filter to hold back most of the particles that might clog the soil's pores, and its presence as a blanket keeps underlying soil moist and absorbent.

Gullies and other critically eroded areas necessitate planting of shrubs, seedlings and grasses. No more effective step could be taken by any conservation club or organization than having a special program during National Flood Prevention Week dedicated to the control of erosion, and the securing of the services of a competent speaker from the soil conservation service, state forester, county agent or similar conservation agency.

Arranging these programs and inviting the attendance of all farmers in the community will serve as a gesture of friendship on the part of the sportsman, and will doubtless provide enlightening information on these problems.

A.W.G.A. TOURNEY SET FOR JUNE 5-8

Atlanta's women golfers will hold their annual city tournament June 5-8, on the No. 1 East Lake course. It's the first time in many years that the tournament has been played this early in the season. It is usually set for late September or early October.

Mrs. Perry Crawford is the defending champion.

Mrs. Colleen Butler, who recently won the Georgia woman's title after being a runner-up for some four years, is the outstanding favorite to win the city crown this year.

An effort is being made to have Miss Margaret Maddox return to tournament play in the city tournament. Louise Suggs is also invited to participate in the city tournament.

Qualifying rounds will be played on Monday, starting at 9 o'clock. Match play will start Tuesday and the players will be grouped into divisions of 32 each.

Several private club tournaments will be in progress this week in addition to the special outing Tuesday on the Athens Country Club course in the final week of practice before the city tourney.

Qualifying Ends Today In Forrest Hills Meet

Qualifying rounds for the Forrest Hills president's cup tournament will end with this afternoon's play. Lamar West carded a par 72 several days ago to take the lead among the early scorers. Jack Broadwater and Charlie Ozmer are holding second place only two strokes away.

The tournament is open to all Forrest Hills players and will be spread over a period of several weeks in order that every match may be played.

Davis Leads Y. M. C. A. Volley Ball Auto Race

L. M. Davis continues to lead the other "drivers" in the Y. M. C. A. volleyball league auto race. Julian Warner can not be counted out as he trails Davis by 10 miles, with 60 miles traversed.

Other players or drivers and their mileage follows: Hugh Brower, 45; C. Zaban, 45; Alvin Palmer, 43; W. O. Andrews, 40; M. C. Bennett, 35; Tom Dunn, 33; L. D. Hutchinson, Ed Johnston and Bob Price 30; Bill Stubbs, 29; S. B. Greene, F. A. Smith, H. J. Cates, 20; Carl Howard, H. E. Miller, Bob Kushner, John M. Henderson, 15; A. J. Ledbetter, 11; J. W. Echols, Jim Powell, W. A. Alsobrook, 10; Theo Vaughan, T. G. Hill, Silas Betbeze, Mike Warr, 5 miles.

3 MATCHES SET FOR GOLF LEAGUE

James L. Key, the leaders; John White, the defending champions, and Piedmont Park will be host this afternoon in the fourth round of the city municipal golf league. Play will start at 9 o'clock this morning.

The undefeated Key team plays Black Rock, tied with the John White golfers for second place, in the feature match, on the Stockade course.

John White's players will meet an improved Candler Park team on the sporty nine-hole course in West End, while Piedmont Park plays Bobby Jones at Piedmont.

The league voted early in the season to play eight men on each team, but since some of the clubs had more players available, it was later voted to include as many players as the two teams agreed on All matches played will be included in the team's standing.

A minimum of eight players for each team was set at a recent meeting of the Atlanta Municipal Golf Association.

Today's round will be the semi-final of the first half schedule.

SANDLOT TEAMS MEET THIS WEEK

The 1939 city sandlot baseball season is scheduled to get under way Wednesday, June 7, at 11 a. m., at Piedmont Park.

Leagues will be sponsored for three age groups this year, 14 years and under; 16 years and under, and 19 years and under by the city parks department and the WPA. recreation division. Each league will play two rounds and a city tournament will be held in each age group for the winners and runners up.

George I. Simons, general manager of parks, has consented to serve as sandlot baseball commissioner this season, while John W. DeLay, of the WPA recreation division, will serve as secretary and actually supervise the operation of the leagues.

The final organization meeting will be held in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday, May 31, at 4 p. m. All managers are urged to be present at this meeting. If possible, players should be signed up and lists turned in at that time. Contract forms may be secured from the recreation department office at 601 City Hall.

A number of baseball celebrities will be on hand to see the pitching of the first ball, officially opening the 1939 city sandlot season.

OANA HITS HARD IN SOUTHEASTERN

Harry Walker, Pensacola outfielder, dropped 12 points during the last week, but he remains the only regular with a better than .400 average and continues to lead Stuart Stephenson's Southeastern league with his .407 average. David Danaher, of Mobile, is hitting .452 but has only gone to bat 62 times.

Charles Baron, Pensacola first baseman, is in second position with .390. Frank Gustine, of Gadsden, climbed 22 points to take over third place with .374. Maury Jungman, of Jackson, also climbed and is now fourth with .371 with Wimpy Jansco, of Jackson, fifth with .370. Jungman has made most hits, 52, and Jansco leads in runs scored with 36 and in doubles with 15.

Henry Oana, of Jackson, hitting 348, leads in total bases with 87; Al DeRenne, of Gadsden, in stolen bases with 11 thefts; Vern Johnson, of Anniston, in home runs with eight, and Art Rebel, of Anniston, in runs batted in with 37.

Oana has hit safely in 16 straight games through games of May 23. Mickey Rocco, of Anniston, was stopped on May 22 after hitting safely in 20 consecutive games and Carter Mitchell, of Montgomery, was stopped on May 21 after he had hit 15 straight games.

Carrier Tops 4 Divisions in Carolina State Loop

Bill Carrier, Mooresville first baseman, kept his average at the same figure as last week, .435, and continues to lead the North Carolina State league hitters with what is now a commanding lead.

Carrier also continues to lead in hits with 40, in total bases with 63, and in runs batted in with 25.

Manager Gerald Fitzgerald, of Concord, is second in the batting struggle with .388, a rise of 13 points. George Saab, also of Concord, is third with .369. Fourth place is held by James Milner, of Mooresville, with .363 and he leads in doubles with 10.

Boys' High Beats G. M. A., 8 to 3, To Tie Smithies for Prep Crown

M'KINNEY LEADS PURPLES TO WIN WITH 2 HOMERS

Purple Mound Star Also Holds Cadet Nine in Check.

By ROY WHITE.

Jack McKinney led Boys' High to an 8-to-3 victory over G. M. A. Saturday afternoon at College Park, giving the Purples a tie with Tech High for the leadership of the city prep league.

McKinney started the fireworks in the first inning with a home run, scoring three runners ahead of him. In the fifth inning he homered again with a mate aboard and he was left on third base after a triple in the eighth inning. He drove in twice as many runs as the Cadets scored.

Not only was he the leading hitter for the Purples but he held G. M. A. scoreless until the eighth when he let up after an 8-to-0 lead and allowed the Cadets to score three runs.

Hodges gave up 11 hits, but wildness and errors coupled with McKinney's timely hitting were costly.

The game was postponed from the last half of the schedule and was made necessary when Tech High completed its schedule and postponed games with but a single loss.

Boys' High also has only one defeat, splitting a two-game series with Tech High.

Due to school being out this week it is unlikely that the teams will try to play-off for the championship.

It's a bit unfair to settle a city prep baseball championship between Tech High and Boys' High in one game, so it may be that for the first time in more than a dozen years the bitter city rivals will share a baseball championship.

G. M. A.	000	000	030—3 7 3

TIPTON TO SIGN WITH ATHLETICS

RICHMOND, Va., May 27.—(AP) The Times-Dispatch said tonight it had learned on good authority that Eric G. Tipton, 24-year-old Petersburg athlete and All-American football player at Duke University, would join the Philadelphia Athletics at Detroit, June 8.

Tipton, who hit a better than .400 clip during his three years of college baseball, will graduate from Duke June 7.

The paper said Tipton was prohibited from signing a contract with Connie Mack's squad while still in school but would go through the formality at Detroit and probably would be put to work immediately in left field.

some of the best tennis between members of the fairer sex ever seen here. Mrs. Jones is state champion but will have her hands full with the hard-hitting Mrs. Coyne.

Boland, the defending champion, will face a battle no matter who wins the right to play him. Should Jones win, net fans will have a chance to see how the doctor's patball game works against the service which aced Wilmer Allison some 40 times in one match. Jones is the hardest hitter in Atlanta and won his way into the finals of the Atlanta invitation in 1938.

The exhibition between Grant and Bobbitt is scheduled for two out of three sets. Grant, who won the Atlanta invitation this year, has been playing good tennis lately. Bobbitt, former Southeastern conference champ, lost out in the Big 13 this year in the semi-finals to the sensational Joe David of Vanderbilt.

Doubles finals will also be played today. Quarter-final and semi-final matches will be played this morning in order to run the tournament off on schedue.

Seats are available for the public.

Ben Ridgely Blanks Underwood Nine, 3-0

Southern Railway Hurler Gives Methodists Three Hits in 3-0 Victory.

Ben Ridgely gave up three hits as Southern Railway beat Underwood Methodists, 3 to 0, at Piedmont Park Saturday afternoon in the Atlanta Commercial league.

Southern scored its runs in the opener. While Underwood threatened several times they lacked the hitting power to put the runs across.

Pirkle hit perfectly with two for two. Kennerly, Gilleland and W. Herndon were the only ones to hit for the losers.

JAPANESE WARNS OF GRAVE OUTLOOK IN SHANGHAI AREA

Consul Says Japan Wants More Representation On Municipal Council, Revision of Land Laws.

SHANGHAI, May 27.—(AP)—Japanese Consul General Yoshiaki Miura warned today of a grave outlook for Shanghai's International Settlement unless authorities agreed to Japan's "reasonable and legal" demands for increased Japanese representation on the municipal council and revision of land laws.

Miura gave the warning immediately on his return from conferences in Tokyo at which it was believed Japan's future policy regarding the International Settlement and the French concession was decided.

Meanwhile the first political shooting in Shanghai in several months occurred. Ku Ming, Japanese - supported magistrate of Yangchun, Kiangsu province, was shot and wounded and his secretary killed in a downtown hotel by unidentified assailants.

MRS. EUGENE BART DIES IN 70TH YEAR

Rites Tomorrow for Native of France.

Mrs. Marie Rosine Bart, 69, a native of France but a resident of Atlanta for many years, died last night at her home, 98 Currier street, N. E.

Mrs. Bart was born in La Petite Roan (Vosges), France. At the age of 2 she came to Atlanta with her parents. In 1901 the family moved to Augusta, but in 1923, following her marriage to Eugene Bart, she returned to live in Atlanta.

Mr. Bart was formerly in charge of the United States arsenal at Augusta. Both were pioneer members of St. Mary's parish and the Immaculate Conception church at Augusta.

Surviving, besides her husband, are a daughter, Sister Marie Therese, of Sacred Heart convent; a son, Joseph J. Bart, and several grandchildren. Funeral services will be conducted at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning at Sacred Heart church. Burial will be in Casey's cemetery, under the direction of Sam R. Greenberg.

Russian Snubbed by Chamberlain Becomes the Apple of Britain's Eye

Fruits of Diplomatic Victory Sweet to One Who Tasted Defeats.

By JAMES B. RESTON.

It is July, 1937, and Maisky is pale with rage.

"Up there, gentlemen," he says to newspapermen with a wave at the Locarno room, "the British are selling the democracy of Spain.

"Soviet Russia is for the Spanish government and democracy. Britain, Germany and Italy are on the other side."

Eight months later and six days after Germany annexed Austria, Maisky returned to the foreign office.

He handed a note to Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax in which world powers were invited to consider joint action against aggressor nations.

British Still Cool.

A week later he received the British reply.

"His Majesty's government are of the opinion," Prime Minister Chamberlain announced, "that the indirect but none the less inevitable consequence of such an action as is proposed by the Soviet government would be to aggravate the tendency toward the establishment of exclusive groups of nations, which must be inimical to the prospects of European peace."

Sitting in the gallery of the house of commons plucking at his thin goatee, Maisky listened to this statement and duly reported it to Moscow.

Then followed two incidents which angered Maisky and his government.

Angered by Peer.

On October 10, 1938, after the Munich agreement pared off the Sudetenland and other areas from Czecho-Slovakia, Lord Winterton, a member of the British cabinet, explained to an audience in Shoreham that Russia did not help in the Czecho-Slovak crisis but "only made very vague promises owing to her military weakness."

The next day Maisky sent a scorching note to the foreign office, branding Winterton's speech as "a complete perversion of the actual position of the U. S. S. R."

Again, six days after Germany absorbed Bohemia and Moravia, Russia sought British aid by suggesting an immediate conference to halt Nazi-Fascist expansion. Britain called the suggestion "premature."

Then British foreign policy took an abrupt turn, and Maisky became a key figure in the realignment of Europe's great powers.

Since the disappearance of the Czecho-Slovak republic, Britain has promised to fight for Poland, Rumania, Greece and Turkey and all the genius of British diplomacy has been directed toward getting the support of Soviet Russia.

But Ivan Maisky has been suspicious.

In diplomatic quarters it is said he remembers too well the series of rebuffs—the long fights in the Locarno room against Britain's "hands-off Spain" policy, the polite rejections of Russia's attempts to enlist Britain's help, Chamberlain's incautious reference to Russia as that "half-Oriental power."

Now an agreement finally is in sight, virtually on Russia's terms.

Moscow has new British proposals, designed to meet the main Russian objections to earlier terms suggested by London for Russia's addition to the British-French front, coupled with an invitation to War Commissar Marshal Klementi E. Voroshiloff to attend British army maneuvers this fall.

The new proposals, said to bear Polish and Rumanian approval, were understood to provide:

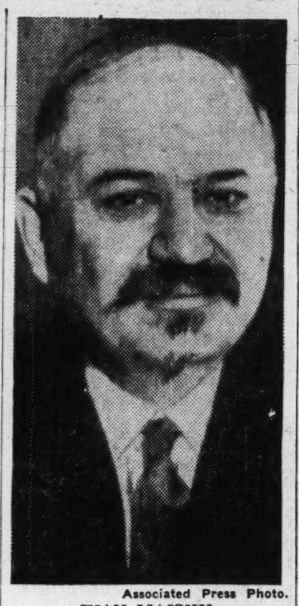

Mutual Assistance.

The joining of Britain, France and Russia immediately in common defense in event any one of them should be a victim of European aggression. An attack on Russia in the Far East would be excluded.

Co-operation of all three if any one of them were involved in war while fulfilling assurances to other European states—thus covering British and French guarantees to Poland and Rumania and possible Russian guarantees to her Baltic neighbors.

Consultation on common action in event of acts or threats of aggression.

A declaration that the agreement is defensive only and embodies the principles of the League of Nations' covenant although mutual assistance would not be withheld pending a League verdict.

SINGS FIVE YEARS FOR AN AUDIENCE OF JUST ONE MAN

HOLLYWOOD, May 27.—(AP)—There was nary a note of Hindu music in the files or catalogs, the music department was dismayed to learn when an assignment came along for "The Rains Came."

No phoney stuff, the music department was warned. No revamping of "Song of India" or any other of the several numbers that usually are played when the action is laid in India.

So they telephoned Lal Chand Mehra, a Hindu who has performed a great variety of tasks in Hollywood during the 12 years he's been here. How come, they asked him, there was no Hindu music? Because, he answered, Hindu music is not written—it is sort of handed down, from ear to ear as it were.

Mehra started singing several more truly Indian numbers. A deal was made then and there for him to sing and sing and sing.

A music arranger, David Buttolph, adjusted his ear and began writing notes. And they've been doing it for five years.

STATE PROBATION OFFICERS TO MEET

Two-Day Conference To Open at Sea Island Friday.

Members of the Georgia Probation Officers' Association will assemble at Sea Island Friday for a two-day series of speeches, conferences and discussion.

Meeting will open that morning with an invocation by the Rev. J. Sullivan Bond Jr., rector of Christ church, Frederica, St. Simon's Island. First speaker will be Judge Gordon Knox, of Brunswick, who will talk on "The Judge's View of Probation for the Adult Offender." Friday's other speaker will be Myrl Alexander, of Washington, parole chief of the Federal Prison Bureau. He will talk on "Treatment of Federal Offenders."

Saturday morning will be devoted to a half-hour round-table discussions led by county officers. Subjects include "Investigation," "The Use of Community Resources," "Prevention" and "Home Finding and Child Placing." The Fulton county officers will lead a panel on "Organization of Probation Work." Miss Lottie Ramspeck, chief Fulton county juvenile probation officer, will close the morning's program with a discussion of the history of probation in Georgia.

Judge W. S. Criswell, of the Duval county juvenile court, Jacksonville, will talk on "The Problem of Intangible Environment" at the Saturday luncheon. After a business session that afternoon Henry B. Mays, of the State Welfare Department, will address the meeting on "Georgia's Probation System."

Officers of the association are Miss Lottie Ramspeck, president; George Allen Maddox, chief Fulton county adult probation officer, vice president, and Sim N. Manning, of the Fulton county staff, secretary-treasurer. All judges in Georgia have been invited to the conference.

TOWNSEND SPONSOR DOUBTS PASSAGE

Hendricks Wires Cox Concerning Controversy Over Statement.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—Representative Hendricks, Democrat, Florida, telegraphed Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia, of the house rules committee, today that he did not expect the Townsend bill to pass when it comes up in the house next week.

Some controversy had arisen as to whether Hendricks told Cox at a meeting of the committee Wednesday that he had no expectation that the measure, which bears Hendricks' name, would receive house approval.

Hendricks had issued a statement in Florida yesterday in which he said he told Cox:

"That if he believed this to be a bad bill he should grant a rule to bring it before the house and vote it down, and bring in one which he thought reasonable. I predict the . . . leaders in the house will be surprised at the result."

Informed of the statement, Cox said the committee members would verify that Hendricks said he did not expect the bill to pass.

In his telegram today, Hendricks said:

"Have no intention of denying that I said Townsend bill would not pass. I still do not believe it will pass. What I do deny is that I said that the bill is an unreasonable one."

Newspapermen had understood Hendricks to say to the committee that after an unfavorable vote on the Townsend bill, "maybe we can get down to something reasonable."

2D CLIPPER HOPS AS FIRST RETURNS FROM MARSEILLE

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP)—Scarcely had the 41 1-2-ton Yankee Clipper come to rest at Port Washington today, completing the first regularly scheduled round trip mail flight to Europe, than her sister ship, the Atlantic Clipper, took off on the second flight at 3:26 p. m. (Atlanta time).

Coming in six hours late as the result of a 300-mile detour via Bermuda to avoid bad weather in mid-Atlantic, Captain Arthur E. La Porte of the Yankee Clipper said his entire 11,000-mile journey to and from Europe had been uneventful.

Flying time totaled 72 hours, he said, and elapsed time one week. Time from Marseille, France, to Port Washington was 35 hours.

Indicative of the speeds which trans-Atlantic passengers may expect when regular flights start about July 1 was La Porte's report that eastbound he averaged 164 miles per hour, and 144 westbound.

O. N. WILLIAMS, 29, KILLED IN WRECK

2 Companions Slightly Hurt As Car Overturns Near Conyers.

O. N. Williams, 29, of 1109 Hawthorne street, S. W., an employe of the National Wire and Iron Works, was instantly killed shortly after 7 o'clock last night when a car in which he was riding skidded and overturned on Highway No. 12, about four miles west of Conyers, near the Rockdale-DeKalb counties line.

State Highway Troopers Bill Jones and J. C. Walton, of the Madison station, reported that the car was driven by Willie N. McCall, of 21 Bliss street, N. W. McCall and a woman companion, whose name could not be learned, were slightly hurt.

Investigating officers reported the accident was caused by the automobile traveling at high speed on wet pavement.

Williams is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eula Williams; a brother, Watson W. Williams, of the Hawthorne street address; and his parents, of Social Circle. The body was taken to the White & Company Funeral Home, Conyers, pending funeral arrangements.

Speech Before Retailers Revives F. D R. Third Term Speculation

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—President Roosevelt, willingly or otherwise has revived a hotbed of political speculation over his third-term plans by his "no-retreat" speech before the Retailers' National Forum here during the past week.

While the prevailing belief among competent observers still is that the President will not run again the effect of his straightforward declaration that he is standing pat on spending, relief and taxation has been to focus attention more than ever on his future plans.

And even among those who, for one reason or another, are firm in the conviction that he is not seriously considering a third-term venture it is admitted that the implications of the speech are such that it cannot be lightly dismissed as having no pointed bearing on the 1940 campaign. Whether he is a candidate or not, Mr. Roosevelt, in the following words, seems to have made it sufficiently clear that he will insist on the objectives of the New Deal administration being made a cardinal plank in the platform adopted by the next national convention:

"You cannot expect this administration to alter the principles and objectives for which we have struggled the last six years," he said. Since he had been talking about spending-for-recovery his words were interpreted as meaning not only that a continuation of that policy may be expected for the remainder of his term, but the policy must be embraced by candidates who look to New Deal support in the campaign.

The main source of discussion growing out of the President's speech, however, deals more with his personal plans as regards a third term rather than the identity of some potentioal candidate whom he might prefer as his successor. Speculation on the subject has been revived in scores of stories being written out of Washington and elsewhere since his appearance before the Retailers' Forum May 22.

Opinion Divided.

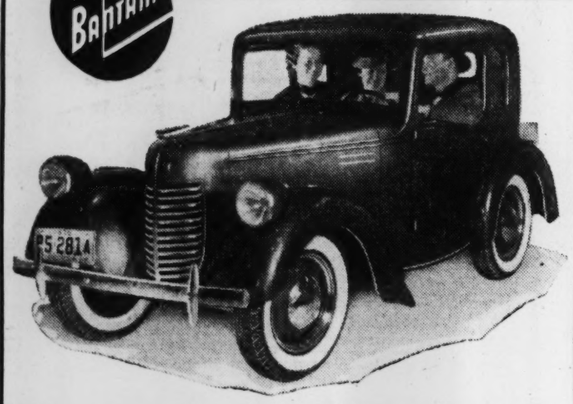

Opinion is divided into two groups among those who profess to see in the President's declaration a definite move toward a third term. Mr. Roosevelt's bitter enemies attribute to him an active ambition to be the first chief executive to serve three terms and interpret all of his actions as designed to that end, while his friends, the New Deal element, deny that he is a candidate but add that it will be necessary for the party to draft him. Who else is there, the New Dealers ask, that has a program or a popular appeal approximating the things the President stands for?

Meantime the speculation is intensified by the President's continued silence and the frequent emergence from the White House of Democratic wheelhorses from scattered sections of the country with statements that they have urged Mr. Roosevelt to again lend the use of his name on the party ticket. Every few days sees some new figure aligning himself with the third-term program. The most recent was former Governor Dave Sholtz, of Florida, who declared unequivocally for Mr. Roosevelt. Others have ranged from Mayor Kelley, of Chicago, to former Governor Sweet, of Colorado; former Governor Kraschel, of Iowa—and, not the least interesting of all, Elder (Happy-Am-I) Michaux, former Savannah, Ga., negro, now perhaps the leading evangelist of his race in New York city.

JAPANESE WARNS OF GRAVE OUTLOOK IN SHANGHAI AREA

Consul Says Japan Wants More Representation On Municipal Council, Revision of Land Laws.

SHANGHAI, May 27.—(AP)—Japanese Consul General Yoshiaki Miura warned today of a grave outlook for Shanghai's International Settlement unless authorities agreed to Japan's "reasonable and legal" demands for increased Japanese representation on the municipal council and revision of land laws.

Miura gave the warning immediately on his return from conferences in Tokyo at which it was believed Japan's future policy regarding the International Settlement and the French concession was decided.

Meanwhile the first political shooting in Shanghai in several months occurred. Ku Ming, Japanese - supported magistrate of Yangchun, Kiangsu province, was shot and wounded and his secretary killed in a downtown hotel by unidentified assailants.

Russian Snubbed by Chamberlain Becomes the Apple of Britain's Eye

Fruits of Diplomatic Victory Sweet to One Who Tasted Defeats.

By JAMES B. RESTON.

It is July, 1937, and Maisky is pale with rage.

"Up there, gentlemen," he says to newspapermen with a wave at the Locarno room, "the British are selling the democracy of Spain.

"Soviet Russia is for the Spanish government and democracy. Britain, Germany and Italy are on the other side."

Eight months later and six days after Germany annexed Austria, Maisky returned to the foreign office.

He handed a note to Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax in which world powers were invited to consider joint action against aggressor nations.

British Still Cool.

A week later he received the British reply.

"His Majesty's government are of the opinion," Prime Minister Chamberlain announced, "that the indirect but none the less inevitable consequence of such an action as is proposed by the Soviet government would be to aggravate the tendency toward the establishment of exclusive groups of nations, which must be inimical to the prospects of European peace."

Sitting in the gallery of the house of commons plucking at his thin goatee, Maisky listened to this statement and duly reported it to Moscow.

Then followed two incidents which angered Maisky and his government.

Angered by Peer.

On October 10, 1938, after the Munich agreement pared off the Sudetenland and other areas from Czecho-Slovakia, Lord Winterton, a member of the British cabinet, explained to an audience in Shoreham that Russia did not help in the Czecho-Slovak crisis but "only made very vague promises owing to her military weakness."

The next day Maisky sent a scorching note to the foreign office, branding Winterton's speech as "a complete perversion of the actual position of the U. S. S. R."

Again, six days after Germany absorbed Bohemia and Moravia, Russia sought British aid by suggesting an immediate conference to halt Nazi-Fascist expansion. Britain called the suggestion "premature."

Then British foreign policy took an abrupt turn, and Maisky became a key figure in the realignment of Europe's great powers.

Since the disappearance of the Czecho-Slovak republic, Britain has promised to fight for Poland, Rumania, Greece and Turkey and all the genius of British diplomacy has been directed toward getting the support of Soviet Russia.

But Ivan Maisky has been suspicious.

In diplomatic quarters it is said he remembers too well the series of rebuffs—the long fights in the Locarno room against Britain's "hands-off Spain" policy, the polite rejections of Russia's attempts to enlist Britain's help, Chamberlain's incautious reference to Russia as that "half-Oriental power."

Now an agreement finally is in sight, virtually on Russia's terms.

Moscow has new British proposals, designed to meet the main Russian objections to earlier terms suggested by London for Russia's addition to the British-French front, coupled with an invitation to War Commissar Marshal Klementi E. Voroshiloff to attend British army maneuvers this fall.

The new proposals, said to bear Polish and Rumanian approval, were understood to provide:

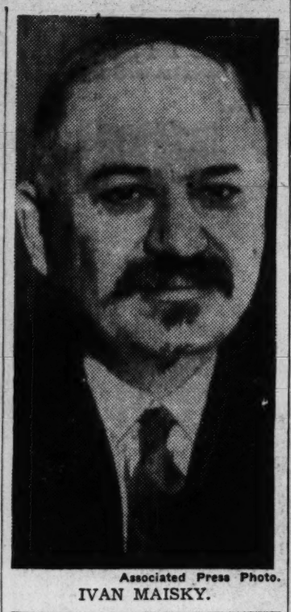

Mutual Assistance.

The joining of Britain, France and Russia immediately in common defense in event any one of them should be a victim of European aggression. An attack on Russia in the Far East would be excluded.

Co-operation of all three if any one of them were involved in war while fulfilling assurances to other European states—thus covering British and French guarantees to Poland and Rumania and possible Russian guarantees to her Baltic neighbors.

Consultation on common action in event of acts or threats of aggression.

A declaration that the agreement is defensive only and embodies the principles of the League of Nations' covenant although mutual assistance would not be withheld pending a League verdict.

SINGS FIVE YEARS FOR AN AUDIENCE OF JUST ONE MAN

HOLLYWOOD, May 27.—(AP)—There was nary a note of Hindu music in the files or catalogs, the music department was dismayed to learn when an assignment came along for "The Rains Came."

No phoney stuff, the music department was warned. No revamping of "Song of India" or any other of the several numbers that usually are played when the action is laid in India.

So they telephoned Lal Chand Mehra, a Hindu who has performed a great variety of tasks in Hollywood during the 12 years he's been here. How come, they asked him, there was no Hindu music? Because, he answered, Hindu music is not written—it is sort of handed down, from ear to ear as it were.

Mehra started singing several more truly Indian numbers. A deal was made then and there for him to sing and sing and sing.

A music arranger, David Buttolph, adjusted his ear and began writing notes. And they've been doing it for five years.

STATE PROBATION OFFICERS TO MEET

Two-Day Conference To Open at Sea Island Friday.

Members of the Georgia Probation Officers' Association will assemble at Sea Island Friday for a two-day series of speeches, conferences and discussion.

Meeting will open that morning with an invocation by the Rev. J. Sullivan Bond Jr., rector of Christ church, Frederica, St. Simon's Island. First speaker will be Judge Gordon Knox, of Brunswick, who will talk on "The Judge's View of Probation for the Adult Offender." Friday's other speaker will be Myrl Alexander, of Washington, parole chief of the Federal Prison Bureau. He will talk on "Treatment of Federal Offenders."

Saturday morning will be devoted to a half-hour round-table discussions led by county officers. Subjects include "Investigation," "The Use of Community Resources," "Prevention" and "Home Finding and Child Placing." The Fulton county officers will lead a panel on "Organization of Probation Work." Miss Lottie Ramspeck, chief Fulton county juvenile probation officer, will close the morning's program with a discussion of the history of probation in Georgia.

Judge W. S. Criswell, of the Duval county juvenile court, Jacksonville, will talk on "The Problem of Intangible Environment" at the Saturday luncheon. After a business session that afternoon Henry B. Mays, of the State Welfare Department, will address the meeting on "Georgia's Probation System."

Officers of the association are Miss Lottie Ramspeck, president; George Allen Maddox, chief Fulton county adult probation officer, vice president, and Sim N. Manning, of the Fulton county staff, secretary-treasurer. All judges in Georgia have been invited to the conference.

TOWNSEND SPONSOR DOUBTS PASSAGE

Hendricks Wires Cox Concerning Controversy Over Statement.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—Representative Hendricks, Democrat, Florida, telegraphed Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia, of the house rules committee, today that he did not expect the Townsend bill to pass when it comes up in the house next week.

Some controversy had arisen as to whether Hendricks told Cox at a meeting of the committee Wednesday that he had no expectation that the measure, which bears Hendricks' name, would receive house approval.

Hendricks had issued a statement in Florida yesterday in which he said he told Cox:

"That if he believed this to be a bad bill he should grant a rule to bring it before the house and vote it down, and bring in one which he thought reasonable. I predict the . . . leaders in the house will be surprised at the result."

Informed of the statement, Cox said the committee members would verify that Hendricks said he did not expect the bill to pass.

In his telegram today, Hendricks said:

"Have no intention of denying that I said Townsend bill would not pass. I still do not believe it will pass. What I do deny is that I said that the bill is an unreasonable one."

Newspapermen had understood Hendricks to say to the committee that after an unfavorable vote on the Townsend bill, "maybe we can get down to something reasonable."

2D CLIPPER HOPS AS FIRST RETURNS FROM MARSEILLE

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP)—Scarcely had the 41 1-2-ton Yankee Clipper come to rest at Port Washington today, completing the first regularly scheduled round trip mail flight to Europe, than her sister ship, the Atlantic Clipper, took off on the second flight at 3:26 p. m. (Atlanta time).

Coming in six hours late as the result of a 300-mile detour via Bermuda to avoid bad weather in mid-Atlantic, Captain Arthur E. La Porte of the Yankee Clipper said his entire 11,000-mile journey to and from Europe had been uneventful.

Flying time totaled 72 hours, he said, and elapsed time one week. Time from Marseille, France, to Port Washington was 35 hours.

Indicative of the speeds which trans-Atlantic passengers may expect when regular flights start about July 1 was La Porte's report that eastbound he averaged 164 miles per hour, and 144 westbound.

O. N. WILLIAMS, 29, KILLED IN WRECK

2 Companions Slightly Hurt As Car Overturns Near Conyers.

O. N. Williams, 29, of 1109 Hawthorne street, S. W., an employe of the National Wire and Iron Works, was instantly killed shortly after 7 o'clock last night when a car in which he was riding skidded and overturned on Highway No. 12, about four miles west of Conyers, near the Rockdale-DeKalb counties line.

State Highway Troopers Bill Jones and J. C. Walton, of the Madison station, reported that the car was driven by Willie N. McCall, of 21 Bliss street, N. W. McCall and a woman companion, whose name could not be learned, were slightly hurt.

Investigating officers reported the accident was caused by the automobile traveling at high speed on wet pavement.

Williams is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eula Williams; a brother, Watson W. Williams, of the Hawthorne street address; and his parents, of Social Circle. The body was taken to the White & Company Funeral Home, Conyers, pending funeral arrangements.

Speech Before Retailers Revives F. D. R. Third Term Speculation

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—President Roosevelt, willingly or otherwise has revived a hotbed of political speculation over his third-term plans by his "no-retreat" speech before the Retailers' National Forum here during the past week.

While the prevailing belief among competent observers still is that the President will not run again the effect of his straightforward declaration that he is standing pat on spending, relief and taxation has been to focus attention more than ever on his future plans.

And even among those who, for one reason or another, are firm in the conviction that he is not seriously considering a third-term venture it is admitted that the implications of the speech are such that it cannot be lightly dismissed as having no pointed bearing on the 1940 campaign. Whether he is a candidate or not, Mr. Roosevelt, in the following words, seems to have made it sufficiently clear that he will insist on the objectives of the New Deal administration being made a cardinal plank in the platform adopted by the next national convention:

"You cannot expect this administration to alter the principles and objectives for which we have struggled the last six years," he said. Since he had been talking about spending-for-recovery his words were interpreted as meaning not only that a continuation of that policy may be expected for the remainder of his term, but the policy must be embraced by candidates who look to New Deal support in the campaign.

The main source of discussion growing out of the President's speech, however, deals more with his personal plans as regards a third term rather than the identity of some potentioal candidate whom he might prefer as his successor. Speculation on the subject has been revived in scores of stories being written out of Washington and elsewhere since his appearance before the Retailers' Forum May 22.

Opinion Divided.

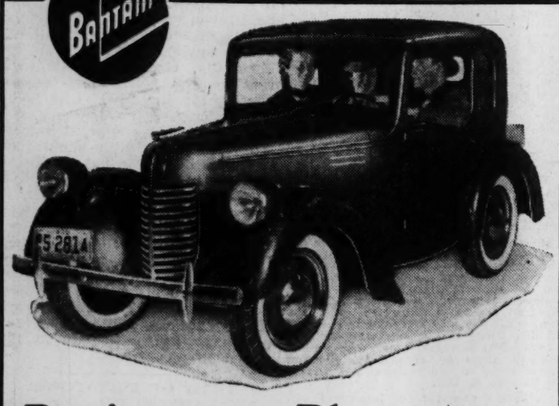

Opinion is divided into two groups among those who profess to see in the President's declaration a definite move toward a third term. Mr. Roosevelt's bitter enemies attribute to him an active ambition to be the first chief executive to serve three terms and interpret all of his actions as designed to that end, while his friends, the New Deal element, deny that he is a candidate but add that it will be necessary for the party to draft him. Who else is there, the New Dealers ask, that has a program or a popular appeal approximating the things the President stands for?

Meantime the speculation is intensified by the President's continued silence and the frequent emergence from the White House of Democratic wheelhorses from scattered sections of the country with statements that they have urged Mr. Roosevelt to again lend the use of his name on the party ticket. Every few days sees some new figure aligning himself with the third-term program. The most recent was former Governor Dave Sholtz, of Florida, who declared unequivocally for Mr. Roosevelt. Others have ranged from Mayor Kelley, of Chicago, to former Governor Sweet, of Colorado; former Governor Kraschel, of Iowa—and, not the least interesting of all, Elder (Happy-Am-I) Michaux, former Savannah, Ga., negro, now perhaps the leading evangelist of his race in New York city.

"To Err Is Human"—That's why the "Incontestable" clause in life insurance.

Since high legal authorities differ in their interpretation of this clause, we would prefer to give you the facts, quote the clause to you, tell you why it is in the policy, and then let you be both Judge and Jury and render your own decision.

Let's take case one, and assume that you applied for insurance today and forgot to tell the doctor about that attack of appendicitis that you had ten years ago. You pay your premiums regularly for several years and then one summer you are out on a fishing trip. You have another attack, and this time you are too far from home. By the time your friends get you to the hospital it's too late. The hospital records show this to be the second attack, yet your policy reads differently. If you are guilty of misrepresentation of facts. But the incontestable provision in your policy reads, "This policy shall be incontestable after it shall have been in force during the lifetime of the insured for two full years from its date of issue."

Now for case two: Mr. X applies for insurance. The physical examination is perfect, and the insurance is issued. Three years later Mr. X dies from tuberculosis, in its advanced stages. Investigation shows that Mr. X had been suffering from T. B. for years, and could not possibly have stood the perfect examination three years ago. Actually, a good friend of his went by the doctor's office for the examination, and this friend was to profit by the insurance. Clearly, this is an absolute case of fraud, and, although the policy contained the same two-year incontestable clause, do you think there is a Court in our land that would uphold such a fraudulent contract?

For all practical purposes, therefore, I think we could safely explain this clause as meaning, "In the absence of gross and intentional fraud, payment of a policy cannot be disputed by the company after the expiration of the incontestable period." This is our opinion, but if you have one that is different, we would certainly like to hear it.

CHICAGO, May 27.—(AP)—Rains that have revived hopes for much wheat in the southwest and virtually broken the drouth in the spring wheat belt caused selling which lowered prices more than a cent a bushel in the Chicago market today.

Although rains have been experienced most of the week in many sections of the belt, particularly in the northwest, this was the first session in which the market showed any unusual weakness. Establishment of the season's best prices yesterday at levels 10 cents higher than a month ago and 7 to 10 cents better than a year ago attracted profit-taking and the market had less support from milling and other commercial interests than was the case yesterday.

After advancing to within small fractions of yesterday's best levels with net gains of as much as 3-8 cent, prices took a definitely lower course as selling expanded. The day's lows of 77 5-8 for July and September contracts were about 1 1-4 cents below the highs. Despite slight rallies from these levels, wheat closed 1-2 to 7-8 lower than yesterday, with July and September at 78 to 78 1-8.

Other grains sagged with wheat, with July soy beans slumping the 4-cent limit permitted in one session to 91 1-2. Corn closed 5-8 to 1 1-8 lower, July 51 to 50 3-4, September 52 3-8 to 52 1-4; oats 5-8 to 3-4 lower; rye 1 to 1 1-4 down; lard unchanged to 7 lower.

Liverpool markets were closed, not to reopen until Tuesday, and export business was very quiet. Rotterdam wheat closed 3-8 to 3-4 higher.

Tending to support wheat at times was the loan level, which on a Chicago basis is still slightly above futures prices and numerous trade statements referring to continuation of the government spending program and its possible effect on prices.

UNEMPLOYMENT DROPS TWO PER CENT IN APRIL

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP)—Unemployment in the United States declined 2 per cent in April to around 10,177,000 as the present month opened, the national industrial conference board reported today.

The board, a research organization supported by contributions from private business corporations, said the jobless in April decreased by 220,000.

The decline, it was added, was "due largely to considerable increase in the number of agricultural workers, which is usual at this time of year."

AVERAGE PRICE.
NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP)—The average price of middling cotton today at ten southern spot markets was 2 points lower at 9.39 cents a pound. The average price for the past 30 market days was 9.04 cents a pound.

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP)—New crop cotton deliveries took the lead in today's market. July dropped 2 points, but later months gained 7 to 13.

Cotton gained from 70 cents to $2.15 a bale on the week at the close of today's session. Brokers saw many factors influencing the price trend but chiefly mentioned were a bullish interpretation of the government 1939-40 program for the staple, continued tightness of the southern spot basis and a pickup in sales of cotton goods. Strength in securities markets stimulated buying, they added.

Demand today stemmed mainly from domestic mill buying and foreign covering. Offerings were supplied by southern spot houses and Wall Street sources. Bombay sold near months and bought distant.

July failed to keep pace, analysts said, because the price for that delivery appeared sufficiently above the government loan stock to attract cotton out of the loan.

Exports today, 4,134 bales; season so far, 3,276,639. Port receipts, 3,154; port stocks, 2,010,903.

ACTIVE COVERING SENDS COTTON UP

NEW ORLEANS, May 27.—(AP) Cotton futures again reached new seasonal highs here today under active covering and trade and spot house buying. Closing prices were steady at net gains of 3 to 8 points.

INDUSTRY MOVES CAUTIOUSLY AHEAD

Auto Sales Highlight News in Past Week.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—(AP)—Trade and industry moved cautiously forward this week. Higher figures were posted for steel production and car loadings.

Although the pressure of the coal strike lifted, a new strike—at the Briggs Manufacturing Company—put a dent in automobile production. Labor difficulties resulted in shutdowns at the Chrysler Corporation plants.

However, analysts noted that the two other major producers—General Motors Corporation and Ford Motor Company—were holding output at virtually the same pace as the previous week.

There was a comparatively brisk rate of sales of new passenger cars. Commerce Department records showed heavier turnover in New York. Turnover in Wayne county, Michigan, for the past week was about three times greater than the like week last year. Distribution in Shelby county, Tennessee, for the first 20 days of May were more than double those for the like period a year ago.

KING AND QUEEN CLIMB MOUNTAIN JUST FOR A 'REST'

BANFF, Alberta, May 27.—(AP) Mountain climbing is King George's and Queen Elizabeth's idea of "resting."

The sovereigns spent part of their day of relaxation at this Canadian Rockies resort today by scaling the last stretches of Tunnel Mountain after taking automobiles part of the way.

Later the King and Queen drove up Norquay mountain, and on the way back to their hotel the King took pictures of a mule deer, a bear cub and grouse.

PINEAPPLES STAGE FLORIDA COMEBACK

Sweet-Scented Crop Is Almost Ready for Harvesting at Boynton.

BOYNTON, Fla., May 27.—(AP)—Pineapples are ripening in Florida fields, and soon workers with short, blunt knives will shuffle through the rows harvesting the crop.

It won't take long, for only about 100 acres are given over to the sweet-scented product. Even these few acres, planted by a dozen growers, present a huge gain over the near-extinction that overtook the industry after the real estate boom, but there is much expansion ahead before it returns to the level of its one-time peak of some 7,000 acres.

Oscar R. Winchester, Florida's biggest pineapple grower, believes the industry definitely is on the upcurve, but will grow slowly. His 50 acres near here produce about 6,000 crates a year, or about 75 per cent of Florida's crop. Perhaps more important, thousands of immature plants, called "slips," come from his fields. They are used to propagate the fruit.

Two of the several factors which killed off pineapple growing here were Cuban competition and the boom. During the boom land was more valuable for speculation purposes than for growing. When it collapsed, land values were too high to devote to a crop that takes two years to mature.

PENSIONS EXTENDED BY PRESBYTERIANS

Lay Employes To Get Same Benefits as Ministers, Missionaries.

CLEVELAND, May 27.—(AP)—The Presbyterian Church in the United States of America today extended its pension system to an estimated 20,000 lay employes, providing for them the same benefits now received by its ministers and missionaries.

The action was voted by 900 commissioners to the church's 151st general assembly who also approved a controversial proposal that all employes, including ministers, be required to retire from active duty henceforth, if they accept a pension.

Interest paid on the $41,000,000 pension fund was reduced from 4 per cent to a "basis soundly returnable."

By extending its pension system to all employes—from ministers to janitors—the assembly hoped to avoid inclusion in the federal social security act as provided in a proposal pending in congress.

REALTY OUTING TO BE ON JUNE 14

Committees Preparing Program for Annual Affair for Board Members.

By MRS. LOUISE PEACOCK.

For many weeks now, inquiries have been coming into the board office as to when the board was going to hold its annual outing. This is the day of all days among members of the board as evidenced by the fact that when this annual event was started some few years back, only some 75 or 100 attended, while last year over 500 were in attendance. The annual outing committee, consisting of Gilbert Withers, chairman; Jesse Draper, Hoke Blair, Charles Ewing, Henry Robinson, H. E. Mayfield and Cone Maddox Jr. have set the date this year on Wednesday, June 14, at Druid Hills Golf Club.

Hoke Blair will again preside as master of ceremonies. As usual, there will be golfing, tennis, badminton, ping-pong, swimming, bingo and various other forms of entertainment in the afternoon, followed by a barbecue at 6:30 p. m. The highlight of the day will be the selection of "Miss Atlanta Realtor" at 8:30 p. m., followed by dancing until 12 p. m.

In the "Miss Atlanta Realtor" contest, staged last year for the first time, each firm member of the board is asked to elect one lady from each office to represent it in this contest. The entrants will, therefore, be the choice of the various offices and the winner will be judged not on beauty alone, but on personality, charm, attractiveness and poise.

In addition to the regular annual outing committee, a committee of ladies, selected from various member offices, has been appointed to assist in making plans for this outing. This committee consists of Arlene Harris, Marian Guy, Mary Helton, Frances Clarke, Jewell Robinson, Frances Snow, Mildred Grant, Bernice Johnson, Clisby Eskridge, Ethel Gorman and Sara Melton.

CARL W. FORT SELLS BEAUTIFUL HOME

A very handsome and commodious North Side home was sold during the week by Carl W. Fort, local real estate man, from Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Whitten to Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Hamm. The new owners will occupy it as a home soon. It has just been completed at the corner of Habersham road and Habersham way. It occupies a lot over 200 feet front, has four bedrooms and three baths, slate roof, recreation room and basement.

No consideration was announced, but it is the type of home in that section that sells for around $25,000 to $30,000.

New Quarter-Million-Dollar Plant To Be Built by Atlanta Coca-Cola Bottling Company

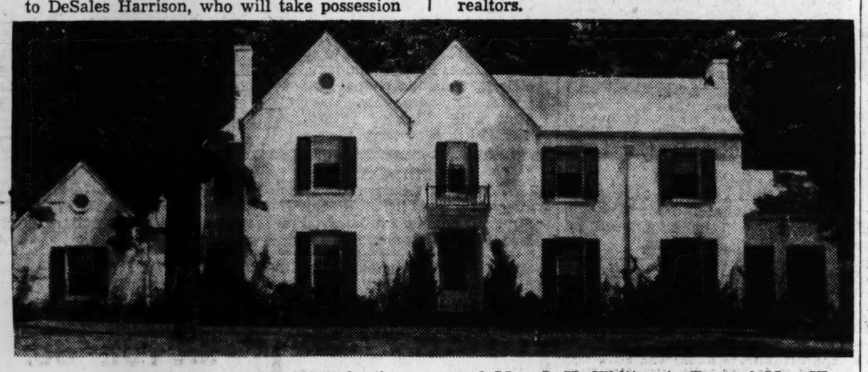

Shown is Architect Bond's drawing of the new office and plant to be erected by the Atlanta Coca-Cola Bottling Company on the block surrounded by Spring, Sixth, Williams and Eighth streets. It will be one of the largest and most attractive plants of its kind in the south. The entire block is to be nicely landscaped, and many of the large shade trees on the property preserved. Griffin Construction Company will begin on the work soon. The entire tract was purchased from the Peters Land Company through Draper-Owens Company, realtors, negotiations being handled by Harry Paschall Jr.

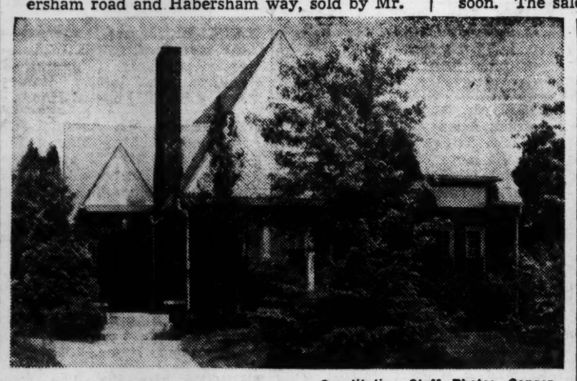

Beautiful Homes and Apartment in Week's Sale List

This is the handsome home at 255 Tuxedo road, sold a few days ago by Malon C. Courts to DeSales Harrison, who will take possession about September 1. Sale was negotiated by George L. Harrison, of Ward Wight Company, realtors.

Another beautiful Northside home in the $25,000 to $30,000 class, at the corner of Habersham road and Habersham way, sold by Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Whitten to Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Hamm for a home. They will move in soon. The sale was handeld by Carl W. Fort.

This home at 12 Fairfield drive, Avondale Estates, sold by National Bondholders Corporation to Eugene C. and Margaret R. Ford. The sale was handled by R. A. Macon, of National Realty Management Company, Inc. The property is in the $5,500 price class.

Home Accidents in 1938 Killed More People Than Automobiles

NEW YORK, May 27.—Home accidents caused more deaths than automobiles in 1938, the Architectural Forum magazine reveals in urging that homes be designed for safety as well as comfort.

Pointing out that this is the first time home fatalities have exceeded the annual motor vehicle toll, which declined almost 20 per cent last year, the magazine declares a large proportion of home accidents "are traceable to causes which can be wholly or partially eliminated by better home design and construction, often at little or no added cost."

"Up 2 per cent over 1937, last year's estimated 32,500 home fatalities, plus its 140,000 permanent and 4,610,000 temporary disabilities, are black marks against a year otherwise distinguished by a 10 per cent reduction in general accident fatalities, the largest so far achieved," the Architectural Forum states. "They are also a challenge to the architect and the home-building industry to do everything in their power to bring a reduction in home accidents corresponding to those being made in other fields.

"Nearly two-thirds of home accidents are caused by falls and fires," the magazine points out. "More than half of all home accidents are caused by falls, and almost a third of these occur on stairs—indicating more than 5,000 annual deaths and 20,000 permanent disabilities which might be drastically reduced by improved stair design, safer surfacing, and better lighting.

"Next to bad stairs, slippery floors and loose rugs result in the largest number of falls. Contrary to general belief, the number of falls which occur in the bathtub and bathrooms is only 6.1 per cent, and the number getting in and out of bed is tiny, only 2.1 per cent.

"By far the largest proportion of falls, especially fatal falls, occur among persons 65 and over," the Architectural Forum explains. "A special precaution which should do much to reduce the number of such accidents is the provision of ground-floor bedrooms for the very old.

"Burns, the next largest cause of home accidents, accounted for 6,000 deaths in 1937, caused mostly by fires originating inside and outside the house and explosions, resulting in 18 per cent of the total deaths. No other single cause accounts for more than 5 per cent."

LEASE IN ARCADE TO BRING $15,000

John O. Chiles, of the Adams-Cates Company, announces the leasing of store room at 4 Peachtree street in the Peachtree Arcade to the Buhl Optical Manufacturing Company. The Buhl Optical Company operates a chain of 48 optical stores with headquarters in Pittsburgh. This is their first unit in the south.

The store will be completely remodeled with new and modern fixtures. The lease is for a term of years with an aggregate rental of approximately $15,000.

BETTER Construction BY FRED C. HALE
ATLANTA LUMBER & BLDG. SUP. ASS'N.

Most people define their ideal house in terms of its principal exterior materials; a red brick house with a slate roof, for example, or a white shingled house, or a stucco house. Thus they reveal their inherent love for some particular type of construction—a type, no doubt, that recalls some earlier environment or some particularly delightful house they would like to reproduce.

It is fortunate that there is no question about the worth of these many favored construction materials. All of them make a good house, if properly employed; the choice between them depends on preference, budgets and fitness of the style.

But each material used in building construction has its own characteristics, advantages and limitations. No one material is perfect under all conditions, nevertheless for each condition of design, pocketbook or locality there is always one material that is best suited to the job. The task of the architect or owner is to choose what is best for his particular project.

It may seem almost a hopeless task to choose wisely among the vast number of traditional and new materials now available for homes. To simplify this task there is summarized in this article some of the more important things to think about when choosing materials for various parts of structure.

Foundation walls should be built of whatever material has locally proven satisfactory in view of soil conditions (wet or dry), strength cost and good appearance. Today appearance of the interior surfaces becomes important because basements are made useful for recreation and hobby rooms. The cellar floors should be water-proofed and hardened for the same reason.

Termite Protection.

Wherever termite infestations have appeared it is wise to take precautions against their entrance into a new house. All wood members should be kept eight degrees above the ground level. A copper or lead shield on top of the foundation walls, protruding 4 inches out on either side, is usually effective. Timber in sills and first-floor joists may be treated before installation to make it resistant to both termites and decay.

Here the choice is largely governed by personal preferance, style and cost.

When masonry construction is desired, the first choice to be made is between a veneer of masonry over a wood frame and a solid masonry—the latter term including all-masonry walls of hollow type. Veneers of brick, cut stone and stucco are practical if wood frame is of "balloon" construction. With solid masonry it is wise to make certain that the interior "bearing partitions" on which the floors rest are designed for minimum shrinkage. Modern steel joists used with solid masonry walls make an excellent rigid and firesafe construction.

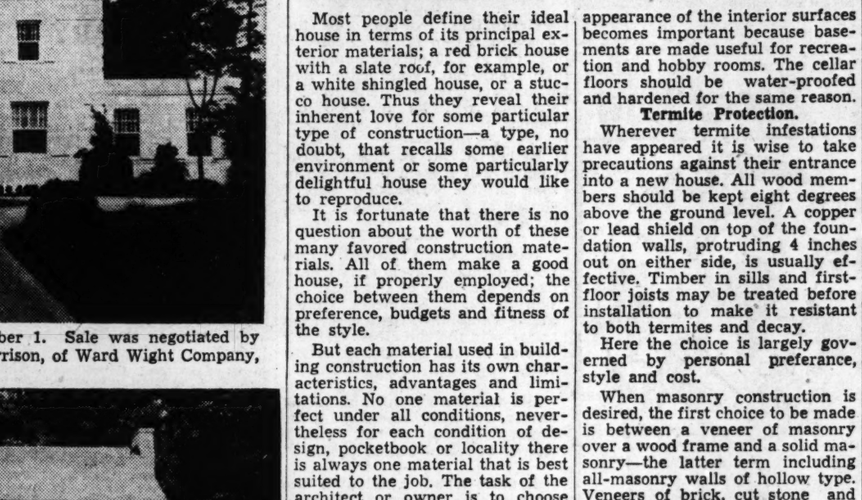

Brick masonry may be of brick throughout or with a facing of brick bonded to a backing of structural clay tile. Stone is difficult to use unless there is a local form which lays up well and has the right scale for texture for the style of the house. Stucco is in itself a veneer; it may be applied to metal lath on a wood frame, or better on scored structural clay with tile or some form of cement block or solid cement.

Cinder concrete masonry units in the new "ashlar" forms make a decorative, stone-like wall of good structural value. Walls of solid concrete, though excellent for foundations, are not used generally for small houses because they are unnecessarily strong and massive.

All exterior walls, whether of wood or masonry, should be insulated with appropriate insulating materials. It is a popular but erroneous belief that masonry walls are warmer in winter and cooler in summer than wood walls. Often the reverse is true.

Chapman-Baldwin Bowlers Receiving Their Silver Cup

Scene in Westridge Park, Built Up Within Recent Past

Row of typical pretty homes built within the past year along Cahaba drive in Westridge park, one of West End's newest and fast-growing subdivisions. C. N. Ragsdale is president of the company and Grover Holcombe secretary and treasurer. Out of 152 lots, 67 have been sold, and 45 homes, such as shown above, erected within the last several months. Many more homes are expected to be built in the near future.

$80,000 INVOLVED IN FIVE TRANSFERS

Garlington-Hardwick Company Sell Residential, Business, Apartment Property.

Garlington-Hardwick Company, realtors, announces the closing of five sales covering a diversification of properties—residential, apartments and business.

Heading the list was a three-story and basement building containing approximately 27,000 square feet, and located at 415 Peachtree street, N. E., which was purchased by Lorenz Neuhoff for an unannounced sum. However, the property is assessed for taxes by the city for $42,500. It is now under lease to the Capital Electric Company. Mercer Poole handled the transaction.

The 12-unit apartment house building located at 461 Highland avenue, N. E., was purchased by Morris Arnovitz from the Atlantic Realty Company. This property is assessed for taxes by the city for $19,000. Perry Adair handled the transaction.

Mrs. Beatrice L. O'Keefe purchased from C. E. Beem through Mercer Poole 900 West Wesley road, just west of Howell Mill road, which i a two-story brick on a lot 100x300 feet. It is understood that this house brought approximately $16,000.

G. B. Baxter purchased from HOLC the four-room frame dwelling at 6 Loveless avenue, N. W., for the sum of $900. The sale was handled by H. J. Graf.

Ella Mae Cobb purchased from Realty Purchase Corporation, 253 Sydney street, S. E. This piece of property is one of the old landmarks of this section, having been built before the Civil War. It is assessed by the city for $2,000. H. J. Graf also handled this sale.

Bowlers Given Pretty Silver Cup

About forty enthusiastic bowlers who have taken part in the Realtors' Bowling League, representing a number of real estate offices, wound up the season's festivities with a luncheon at the Atlanta brewery Wednesday evening. President W. J. Hogan Jr., of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, presided and distributed the prizes won during the short season.

Informal discussion brought out plans for the fall season, when it is hoped to have at least 12 to 15 teams in the race.

The chief prize for the past few months was a large, engraved silver cup, awarded to the team representing Chapman-Baldwin Realty Company. They finished in first place by one pin, the deciding game between them and the Haas & Dodd team winding up that close. The winners copped 21 games and lost 9.

Other prizes were distributed as follows:

$10 Cash—$5 given by Modern Repair Company and $5 given by W. C. Teal Company, awarded to team scoring highest score in any one game; won by Haas & Dodd, on May 18; score, 535.

$5 Cash—Given by the Modernization Company, awarded to individual scoring highest set of three games in any one night; Columbus Jones, of Haas & Dodd, on May 11; score, 383.

$5 Cash—Given by Davey Plumbing Company, awarded to individual scoring highest score in any one game; won by Van Smith, of Chapman-Baldwin, on May 4; score, 144.

$5 Cash—Given by Lipscomb-Ellis Company, awarded to individual scoring second highest score in any one game; won by Columbus Jones, of Haas & Dodd, with score of 142, but as only one prize could be won by an individual, this prize went to third highest scorer, Joe Prickett, of Haas & Dodd, on April 20; score, 141.

The bowling committee, in recognition and appreciation of the work of John Teepell, who acted as secretary and treasurer during the ten weeks' season, presented to Mr. Teepell $5.

TOTAL OF $135,226 FOR ADAMS-CATES

Heading List Were 26 Parcels to the Atlanta Housing Authority.

Sales for the week for Adams-Cates Company realtors, totaled $133,226, as announced yesterday by Henry Robinson, sales manager.

Heading the list was 26 parcels acquired by the Atlanta Housing Authority from various individual owners in the Capitol project; these sales were handled by Josiah Sibley, Rudolph Geissler and Howard D. Watkins.

Clarence Moeckel, guardian, sold to R. M. Abernathy the residence at 407 South Candler street, in Decatur, for $1,500; the salesman was Harrie W. Dews.

HOLC sold to Gertrude Liberson the property at 423 Central avenue for $500 cash, through Josiah Sible; HOLC to Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Sligh, 311 McDonough boulevard, S. E., $2,800, through Sharp-Royiston Company; HOLC to Minnie Dooley, 71 Boulevard, N. E., $2,000, through Henderson Realty Company; HOLC to Mrs. N. L. Griffin, 954 Williams Mill road, $4,750, through Dolvin Realty Company; HOLC to A. C. Layton, 3231 Jackcon street, Hapeville, $1,750, through J. E. Hughie.

$140,971 IN SALES FOR DRAPER-OWENS

Housing Authority Purchased 27 Properties in the Capitol Area.

Sales totaling $140,971.50 and involving 34 properties were closed during the past week by the Draper-Owens Company, realtors, as reported by Boyd F. White, vice president.

Twenty-seven properties were sold to the Atlanta Housing Authority for their development in the Capitol area. Representatives from Draper-Owens Company handling negotiations were Jesse Draper, J. C. Baldwin Jr. and Julien Binford Jr.

P. F. Pinkerton acquired from the Atlantic Realty Company an apartment building located at 468 Boulevard, N. E. This is a two-story brick veneer building, consisting of 20 three-room apartments, and is located on a lot 66x158 feet. Mr. Pinkerton gave as part consideration a two-story, four-family apartment, located at 336 Fifth street, N. E. This exchange was negotiated by L. C. Pitts.

William S. Woods, vice president of the Trust Company of Georgia, bought from Mrs. Lucile C. Glober a very attractive two-story home, located at 3303 Habersham road. This home has four bedrooms and two baths, and is located on a lot 100x360. They plan to move into their new home in the near future. Sale was handled by Boyd F. White.

Baltimore Homes Corporation sold to John L. Howard 295 Whitefoord avenue, N. E., this sale being handled by W. D. Hilley.

Home Owners' Loan Corporation properties sold through approved brokers were: To R. R. Stansell, 168 Huntington road, through Chapman-Baldwin Company; to James C. Mewborn, 379 Orleans street, S. E., through Babb & Nolan; to Roscoe Crawl, 607 Parsons street, S. W., also through Babb & Nolan.

ATLANTANS VIEW GLASS PRODUCTS

Businessmen Visit Libbey-Owens-Ford Company

TOLEDO, Ohio, May 27.—(Special)—New glass products and uses expected to have far-reaching effects on the nation's building industry and in decoration trends were previewed at a meeting of all major distributors of Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company products which began here Thursday by the following from Atlanta, Ga.: Harold Cooledge and C. B. Crenshaw, of F. J. Cooledge & Sons; R. E. Scott, of the Atlanta Glass Company, and John N. Causey, of the Warren Company.

Tours through two of the Libbey-Owens-Ford plants here, and a series of dinners and entertainments were arranged.

Demonstrations of new and improved flat glass products featured the two-day session, and the year's advertising and merchandising activities were laid out. Among the latest product developments is glastone, a new form of structural glass which is expected to provide a major impetus for the building

Former Atlanta French Teacher Wins in 'Man of Conquest' Contest

Four-to-One Decision of Five-Judge Tribunal Awards New York World Fair Trip to Miss Helene Ramsey; Others Receive Tickets.

By LILLIE MAY ROBINSON.

The conquest of the "Man of Conquest" contest was made by a young lady!

Long, conscientiously and hard the judges pored over the stacks of entries, but when notes of the fives judges were compared, four of them had marked as number one that submitted by Miss Helene Ramsey, of 840 North avenue, N. E. And she came second in the opinion of the fifth.

Miss Ramsey, formerly a French teacher, has been unemployed for sometime, while recuperating from a serious accident.

The Constitution's trip to the New York World's Fair will be made by Miss Ramsey with the Georgia party on a special train leaving Atlanta June 12, returning June 18. A body of girls from G. S. C. W. will be in the party.

There will be five hours in Washington for an escorted trip around the points of interest with stops at the National Museum.

Two days will be spent at the World's Fair. There will be a harbor cruise exploring waters around New York, including a trip north along the famous Riverside drive, under the Georgia Washington bridge, past the berths of the great ocean liners, then down again for a magnificent view of the skyline of lower New York, close-ups of the Statue of Liberty, Ellis Island, and under seven great bridges.

A choice is offered of a tour through the NBC broadcasting studios or Rockefeller Center observation roof. Miss Ramsey's home for the time in New York will be the New Yorker hotel.

Guest tickets to see "Man of Conquest," with Gail Patrick, Richard Dix and the galaxy of other film notables, have been awarded by Billy Pratt, manager of the Paramount, to Miss Susan Pearce, Box 295, Emory University; W. E. Butler Jr., 3525 Parkwood drive, N. W.; Walter Andrews, 1087 Glenwood avenue, S. E.; Mrs. Luanna Rhodes, 423 Clairmont avenue, Decatur; Bill Malone, 733 Dill avenue; Mrs. L. G. Turner, 336 Hopkins street, S. W.; Maxwell L. Shatzen Jr., 1076 Boulevard, N. E.; Mrs. Audrey Taylor, 945 Drewry street, N. E.; Robert L. Patrick, Hogansville, Ga.; Mrs. Neil Glass, 105 Harwell avenue, LaGrange, Ga.; Herbert Johnson, 614 East Ballinger street, Rockmart, Ga.; Grace Carroll, 523 Clairmont avenue, Decatur; Miss Sara Logan, 14 Rome road Lindale, Ga.; Mrs. Byron Mathews, 946 Virginia avenue, N. E.; Robert J. Mann, 700 Penn avenue, N. E.; Mrs. Carroll Cook, 301 Adams, 1734 St. Augustine place; Mrs. H. M. Mann, 809 Pulliam street, S. W.; Jack Russell, Young Harris College; William H. Fletcher, 101 King street, Carrollton, Ga.; Mrs. W. N. Tumlin Jr., 616 Amsterdam avenue, N. E.; Mrs. W. Dawsie Tucker, 1351 Berwick avenue, N. E.; Lou Emma Hames, Clarkesville, Ga.; Mrs. Bert Wilkins, 1519 Olympian way, S. W., and Mrs. Harry Gee, 624 Linwood avenue, N. E.

Judge Jesse M. Wood, of the criminal court of Fulton county, will be principal speaker at a meeting of the Order of Pilots at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. George Allen Maddox, first vice president, will preside.

Center Hill Baptist church will open a vacation Bible school at 9 o'clock. tomorrow. Classes will be held from 9 to 12 o'clock each day and children between the ages of four and 16 are invited. The school will continue until June 11.

Lieutenant Colonel Barrington L. Flanigen, Athens, will be relieved from detail with the Organized Reserve in Minneapolis and assigned to duty at Fort Monroe, Va., fourth corps area headquarters reported yesterday.

First Lieutenant Augustine P. Little, of Louisville, Ga., is one of several army officers selected to study at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Little is now on duty at Fort Benning.

VOL. LXXI., No. 350. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 28, 1939. M SECTION

Miss Alice McCraw And Alton Sadler Announce Plans

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., May 27. Of social interest today is the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Alice Evans McCraw, of Milledgeville, and Alton G. Sadler, of Atlanta, the marriage to be solemnized June 3 at 8:30 o'clock at St. Stephens Episcopal church, here.

The bride-elect will be given in marriage by Jon W. Hutchinson, of this city, and the groom-elect's best man will be Thomas M. Roberts Jr., of Sylacauga, Ala.

Rev. F. H. Harding will perform the marriage ceremony, and Mrs. M. H. Bland, organist, and Mrs. L. P. Longino, vocalist, will present a musical program.

Miss Virginia McCraw will be her sister's maid-of-honor and only attendant.

Ushers will be Maurice Duttera, Gordon W. Curtiss Jr., both of Atlanta; Jere N. Moore and Ernest Armistead, of this city.

After the ceremony, Miss Virginia McCraw will entertain at a reception honoring the bride and groom, guests to include members of the wedding party, relatives and close friends.

Andrews-Maddox Plans Announced

ROME, Ga., May 27.—Miss Billie Kyle Andrews and William Towers Maddox, son of the late G. Ed Maddox, have selected the evening of June 21 as the date for their marriage. The ceremony will take place in the First Methodist church, the pastor, Dr. E. Nash Broyles, officiating.

The bride will be given in marriage by her father, Dr. Russell E. Andrews, and Mrs. W. O. Tarpley, organist, and James W. Bryson Jr. cellist, will present a program of wedding music.

The bride's maid of honor will be Miss Helen Goodwin, of Rome, and her bridesmaids will include Misses Lila Bowie Osborne, Sarah Chidsey, Mary Norton Maddox, sister of the groom, and Mrs. John W. Maddox, of Rome; Misses Virginia Simmerville, of Rockmart, and Martha Webster, of Greensboro, N. C.

Ushers will include J. Berrien Chidsey, Judge James Maddox, William E. Wimberly and Hoit S. Brown.

John W. Maddox will serve as his brother's best man and groomsmen will be Nevin Patton Jr., Russell Andrews Jr., brother of the bride, Daniel Hanks, Dean Covington, Gordon Lee Sullivan, of Rome, and Roger Lawson, of Hawkinsville, Ga.

The bride's parents will give a reception at their home on River avenue after the ceremony, guests being limited to members of the bridal party, relatives and out-of-town wedding guests.

Miss Eleanor Smith Weds Hammett Paris.

ODESSADALE, Ga., May 27.—The marriage of Miss Eleanor Smith and Hammett Cecil Paris, of Hiram, was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clifford Smith at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of May 20, in the presence of relatives and friends.

Elder Rees Prather, of Hogansville, who solemnized the marriage of the bride's parents 33 years ago, performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Lillie Mae Worthy sang, accompanied by Mrs. D. Hill Harman.

Miss Olivet Smith, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and the bride's only attendant. She wore aqua crepe with a japonica girdle, and a natural colored hat trimmed with japonica ribbon and veil. Her flowers were sweetheart roses.

Arthur Clifford Smith Jr., of Hogansville, brother of the bride, was the groom's best man.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Arthur Clifford Smith, wore a redingote navy crepe featuring wide white embroidered lapels on the coat and white etching around the V-neck of the dress. Completing the ensemble was a navy straw hat trimmed with white gardenias and a navy veil and navy and white accessories. Her flowers were valley lilies and gardenias, and she carried a white lace handkerchief loaned by Mrs. Harman.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith entertained at a reception for the bridal party and the wedding guests after the ceremony.

Miss Mildred Dunwoody kept the bride's book. Serving punch were Misses Mary Campbell, Iva Smith, Betty Mattox and Libba Harman.

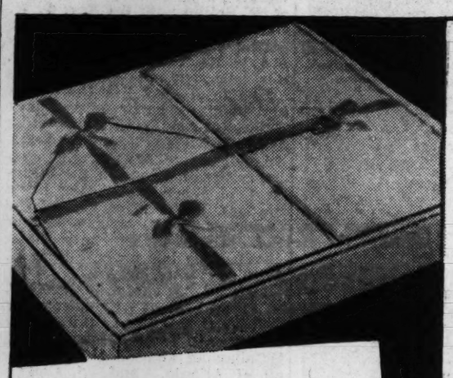

Miss Dobson Weds Harry T. Faulkner.

Diamond Rings and Vacation Trips Predominate in Graduation Gifts

By Sally Forth.

DIAMOND RINGS and vacation trips vied for popularity in the array of gifts presented Washington Seminary graduates, with the former capturing top honors. The graduation exercises were held last Wednesday evening at the Woman's Club, when parents and friends of the dignified seniors assembled for the impressive program.

Sally Cobb Johnson is among graduates who will "take to the high seas" on a European voyage this summer. The popular belle's trip is a graduation present from her aunt, Mrs. Stewart Hill Jones, for whom she is named. Another exciting gift received by Sally Cobb was an exquisite square cut diamond ring presented her by her aunt in memory of her beloved paternal grandmother, the late Mrs. L. D. McDonald.

The attractive sub-deb, accompanied by Mrs. Jones, sails on June 21 from New York aboard the steamer Queen Mary. She will meet friends in Paris, with whom she will travel, while her attractive aunt sojourns at Europe's fashionable spas. In the late summer, Sally Cobb II will rejoin Mrs. Jones for a hurried voyage home, to prepare for her enrollment at Finch School in New York this fall.

Pretty Carroll See, another seminary graduate, and her vivacious younger sister, Ann, are anticipating an exciting June week in Annapolis at the United State Naval Academy. The sisters will be accompanied to Maryland by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willard See, who will later escort them to the World's Fair in New York city.

Mary Jane Campbell will receive her graduation gift at an early date when she departs with her mother, Mrs. William Campbell Jr., for the World's Fair in the metropolis.

Corribel Mason will "have her cake and eat it too," for she received both a diamond ring and a trip upon the occasion of her graduation from the seminary. Corribel and her mother, Mrs. Fred Mason, are seaside fans, and will leave on June 6 for Sea Island Beach, where they have engage a cottage for the month of June.

On July 1 the popular beach sprite will continue her journey southward to visit her former classmates, Marjorie Branch and Jane Dorman, in Orlando, Fla. Corribel's vacation will be happily climaxed in August by a journey to the fair in New York, where, as the guest of her uncle, William H. Mason, she will spend a month.

A sparkling zircon ring, surrounded by diamonds, was presented Jeannette Estes upon the eve of her graduation last Wednesday. Early next month the attractive sub-deb, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. H. G. Estes, and her sister, Bootsie, will motor to St. Simons Island. Jeannette's graduation gifts, you see, included a sojourn at the favorite Georgia resort.

May Queen, Caroline Yundt, received a diamond ring, flanked by baguette and marquis diamonds. The ring was a gift from her parents, the George Yundts, the stone having been set in Mrs. Yundt's engagement ring!

Another graduate who received a diamond ring for her graduation gift is Betty DuBose, attractive daughter of the Beverly DuBoses. The jewel was bequeathed the belle by her late maternal grandfather, Sam D. Jones, and is set in platinum and surrounded by smaller diamonds.

Frances Cundell received with her diploma a handsome diamond ring from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cundell. An heirloom brooch of exquisite design was also presented the sub-deb graduate by her fond grandmother, Mrs. Joseph Cundell. Sally predicts that the ornament will always be among the belle's most prized possessions.

A TRIP TO EUROPEAN capitals is in prospect for Marie Pappenheimer, who finished North Fulton High school last week with honors. Marie has been selecting all manner of exciting looking clothes for her trip, and she is also making plans for sojourning at various spots in Europe which bear historical musical interest, for this young belle is already an accomplished singer and Sally hears that her ambition is to become a concert soprano. Sally recalls that her sister, Ann, was awarded a European trip as her graduation present from North Fulton High school in 1938.

SALLY'S Sea Island Beach scout relates the good times being experienced at that popular resort by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thornton, of this city. As guests of their lifelong friend, Mrs. Edwin F. Johnson, who maintains a handsome residence at Sea Island, the Thorntons are being lavishly enertained by members of the beach colony.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Jones were listed among hosts honoring the Atlanta pair, their guests including Mrs. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Healey, Mrs. William Healey, Mrs. Whitman McGonigal and her guest, Miss Nan duBignon. The Jones party was followed by a dinner at which Mrs. McGonigal was hostess at her Sea Island home. For the dinner table's beautiful centerpiece Mrs. McGonigal chose a plateau of gardenias culled from her garden. Each guest's place was marked by a cluster of these flagrant blooms, which Sally hears is Mrs. McGonigal's favorite flower.

After dinner the hostess and her guests attended the dance in the patio of the Cloister hotel, where Mrs. Edwin Johnson gave an exhibition dance with Peter Gibbons, a well-known terpischorean artist of the Arthur Murray school. So perfectly did she execute the intricate steps that Mrs. Johnson was acclaimed as one of the fashionable resort's most graceful dancers. Another Atlantan sojourning at Sea Island who is frequently sought after by Mr. Gibbons for his dance partner is Mrs. Dargan Cole, the former Lucile Willis. Sally is informed that the shag number danced by Mrs. Cole and Mr. Gibbons never fails to bring rounds of applause from the guests.

YOUTHFUL social circles were in full swing Saturday as future belles made merry in celebration of Douglass Paine Saffarrans' eleventh birthday anniversary. Incidentally, it was the first time in her very brief life that Douglass has ever had a birthday party in Atlanta.

Douglass, you know, is an army daughter, and was born in Panama with Bill and Douglass Paine Saffarrans as her parents. For the past three years she has lived in Hawaii and her birthday parties have been given amid tropical settings.

But Saturday's party was all-American, even to wieners and hamburgers being included in the menu served the young guests at the home of Douglass' grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, on Peachtree Battle avenue.

All manner of exciting looking presents were piled around Douglass' birthday cake. Later the youngsters attended a movie with their hostess.

Miss Mary Morris Will Honor Visitor

An interesting social affair of today will be the cocktail party at which Miss Mary Morris will entertain from 5 to 7 o'clock at her home on Peachtree road. The party will honor Miss Catherine Cheatham, of Miami Beach, Fla., who is the guest of Mrs. L. W. Gray at her home in Druid Hills.

The hostess will be assisted in entertaining by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Morris, and by her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Morris.

The home will be beautified with a profusion of spring flowers, and guests will include 40 friends of the hostess and honor guest.

Miss Smith To Wed Francis R. Iler.

LAGRANGE, Ga., May 27.—Centering unusual interest is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Smith, of Fort Deposit, Ala., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Nan Smith, to Francis Robertson Iler, of LaGrange, formerly of Greenville, S. C., the marriage to be solemnized in September at the Methodist church in Fort Deposit.

Miss Smith is the only daughter of her parents and is a graduate of Bessie Tift College in Forsyth. She also attended the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, Tenn. During the past school year she has been a member of the faculty of the Southwest LaGrange school.

Mr. Iler is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Iler, of Greenville, S. C. He is a graduate of Clemson College in Clemson, S. C., where he received a degree in textile engineering. For the past several years he has been a valued employe of Callaway Mills, of LaGrange.

Agnes Scott College Announces Program for 50th Anniversary

Interest centers in the announcement of the forthcoming social events attendant upon the 50th commencement of Agnes Scott College. The program will include entertainments from Friday through June 6.

Inaugurating the social events will be the annual children's party given by the Decatur Agnes Scott Alumnae Club. The affair will assemble children of Atlanta, Decatur and visiting alumnae, and will be held Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock on Agnes Scott campus.

On Saturday and annual trustees' luncheon will be held in the Rebekah Scott dining hall. George Winship, chairman of the board of trustees, will preside and will introduce Miss Mary Lamar Knight, former Atlantan, now residing in New York city and a member of the graduating class of 1922.

The luncheon will honor the alumnae, the faculty of the college and members of the graduating class.

Seated at the speakers' table with Mr. Winship and Miss Knight will be Dr. J. R. McCain, president of Agnes Scott; Mrs. Murdock Equen, president of the general alumnae association; Miss Carrie Scandrett, dean of students; Mrs. D. B. Donaldson, executive secretary of the alumnae association, and Miss Nelle Chamlee, assistant secretary.

Many Arrangements Feature Contest Of Planters' Club

At the Planters' Garden Club flower arrangement contest Thursday afternoon the prize for the best large arrangement, a dainty pair of cachepots, was won by Mrs. Hal Davison. The flowers were delphiniums, Easter lilies and Dainty Bess roses, arranged in a white Italian pierced bowl tinted with the colors of the flowers used. It was placed upon an English Georgian bowfront chest, over which hung a gilt Chippendale mirror.

A green English bowl, the prize for the best medium arrangement, was awarded to Mrs. Edward F. Daniel, the newly elected president of the Planters' club. Her arrangement featured delphiniums and red cornflowers, displayed in an oval pierced bowl, white and gold with delicate red lines. It was display ' on a Louis XVI chest with a dark marble top, ormulu mounted.

The prize for the best small arrangement, an antique framed fan, went to Mrs. Neil Conrad. Exquisite long-stemmed pansies were displayed in a pair of old Berlin jars of white and gold with painted scenes. The table contained a painted oval tray. Above it hung a Louis XVI portrait of a lady.

Attracting attention was the interesting display of framed antique fans, loaned for the occasion by Mrs. William Lamar, Mrs. William Healey Jr., Mrs. Bolling Jones, Miss May Haverty, Mrs. J. L. Riley, Mrs. Samuel Porter and Mrs. Edith Hills. Judges of the contest were Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun and Mrs. Jesse Draper.

The club met recently with Mrs. Thomas Paine at her home on Peachtree Battle avenue. Charles Jones spoke on "Flower Culture" and show exhibited slides of famous Atlanta gardens.

Miss Angela Goepper To Wed Joseph White Hale on June 17

Miss Angela Goepper has selected June 17 as the date of her marriage to Joseph White Hale. The ceremony will take place at a nuptial mass at Sacred Heart church, when Rev. Joseph G. Cassidy, of the diocese Savannah-Atlanta, will officiate.

Vincent Hurley, organist, will present a selection of nuptial music.

The bride-elect's sister, Mrs. J. D. Thompson, will be her only attendant. She will be given in marriage by her father, Dan Goepper.

Mr. Hale has chosen his brother, Bacon Hale, for his best man.

Ushers will be J. D. Thompson and W. A. Peacock.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Goepper will entertain at a reception at their home on High Point drive for relatives and close friends of this popular young couple. They will be assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Hale, parents of the groom-elect. Miss Ruth Hardell and Mrs. R. S. Peacock will preside at the punch bowl, and Mrs D. F. Cheek, sister of the bride-elect, will keep the bride's book.

Miss Goepper was honor guest at a recent party given by Mrs. J. E. Spurlock. Luncheon was served on small tables centered with silver vases containing rosebuds. The color scheme of pink and white was artistically carried out in the individual baskets at each place.

Several other affairs have been planned for Miss Goeppér, including a kitchen shower to be given June 2 by Miss Sarah Hopkins and Mrs. Frank A. Traber.

Miss Helen Cole, of Newnan, Weds Sidney P. Jones at Quiet Ceremony

NEWNAN, Ga., May 27.—Miss Helen Cole, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Cole, became the bride of Sidney Pope Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Jones at a quiet ceremony solemnized on Wednesday morning. Rev. C. C. Thomas, pastor of the First Baptist church, performed the ceremony in his study at the parsonage, with only members of the immediate families attending.

The bride presented a charming figure, wearing a twin print redingote ensemble of copen blue. She wore a small navy blue hat with a copen veil and accessories of navy. Her flowers were Pernet roses and swansonia.

The bride is one of Newnan's most attractive and popular young ladies. She is the youngest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Cole, her sisters being Mrs. William Davis and Mrs. May Cole Davis, of Newnan, and her brothers, Dr. Ray Cole and Dr. Malcolm Henry Cole, of Newnan; Dr. Sam G. Cole, of Atlanta, and Mr. Thomas Cole Jr., of Madison, Kan.

Her maternal grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Goldsmith, of Atlanta, and her paternal grandparents are the late Dr. and Mrs. William Cole, of Newnan. She was graduated from the Newnan schools and completed her education at the University of Georgia.

Mr. Jones is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Jones and the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Pope Jones, of Newnan, and the late Mr. and Mrs. William Sidney Fleming, of Albany. His sisters are Mrs. Wellborn Hill and Miss Mary Jones, and his only brother is Fleming Jones, all of Newnan. He is the nephew of Mrs. Willis Jones and the late Dr. Willis Jones, of Atlanta, and of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Jones, of Birmingham; of Mr. and Mrs. Strother C. Fleming, of Atlanta, and of Mrs. A. L. Scarbrough, of Anniston, Ala.

The groom attended the Newnan schools and Georgia University at Athens. He is engaged in business in Newnan.

Following their wedding trip to Sea Island Beach, Mr. Jones and his bride will reside with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Jones, on Greenville street.

Miss Helen Marsh Becomes Bride Of Lieut. Merrill at Post Chapel

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 27.—The post chapel formed the setting for the wedding of Miss Helen Cora Marsh, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Raymond Marsh, of Fort Benning, and Lieutenant John Wentworth Merrill, which was solemnized Friday at 6:30 o'clock.

The flower-decked altar on which white tapers burned in cathedral candelabra, was flanked with the company guidons of the 29th Infantry, the groom's regiment, and with the regimental flag and the flag of the United States.

Groomsmen were Lieutenants Herbert H. Andrae, Frederick W. Coleman III, John B. Richardson Jr., George H. Bishop Jr., James A. Bassett and Howard M. Snyder.

Misses Whitney Strayer, Lorraine Wheeler, Ruth McCrary, and Beryl Summers were bridesmaids. The maid of honor was Miss Barbara Thompson, daughter of Brigadier General and Mrs. Charles F. Thompson, of Washington, D. C.

The radiant bride entered with her father, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Lieutenant Thomas A. McCrary. Her patrician beauty was enhanced by her wedding dress of white starched chiffon fashioned princess style and featuring a ruffled train. Her finger-tip veil of tulle fell from a bandeau of orange blossoms and tulle, and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and valley lilies.

The bride and groom left the church passing through an aisle formed by the crossed sabers of the groomsmen, and mounted the decorated escort wagon for their drive to the Officers' Club, where Colonel and Mrs. Marsh entertained at a brilliant reception and dance.

Receiving with Colonel and Mrs. Marsh were Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Merrill, of Utica, N. Y., parents of the groom; Mrs. Vincent Marsh and Mrs. Simmons Parran, of Hagerstown, Md., grandmothers of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley V. Miss Armstrong Becomes Bride of Mr. Hutchens at Newnan Rites

NEWNAN, Ga., May 27.—The marriage of Miss Winford Elizabeth Armstrong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Powers, to James Hardaway Hutchens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hutchens, both of Newnan, took place at a late afternoon ceremony here today at the residence of the bride's parents, with Rev. J. E. Hannah officiating.

A program of music was rendered by Miss Ann Sutton, of Woodbury, pianist, and Miss Emily Stanley, of Lafayette, soloist.

The vows were spoken before an improvised altar of fern and lilies flanked by tall cathedral candelabra holding lighted tapers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Jesse Amstrong, of Savannah, presented a charming figure in a modish costume of navy blue sheer crepe. She wore navy accessories and a cluster of talisman roses.

Mrs. Jesse Armstrong, as matron or honor, was becomingly gowned in a powder blue crepe costume, with a spray of sweetheart roses. Little Miss Wynn Armstrong, niece of the bride, was the flower girl and was dressed in powder blue taffeta. She carried a nosegay of sweetheart roses. Little Miss Betty Ann Bass, of Lanett, Ala., dressed in pink organdy and Master Johnnie De Loach, of Lafayette, in a white suit, lighted the cathedral candles. Mrs. Dal Bass, of Lanett, kept the bride's register. Harvey Walthall acted as best man for Mr. Hutchens.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Powers entertained at a reception in honor of the bridal party and wedding guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Powers were assisted in entertaining by Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hutchens, parents of the groom, and Miss Lucile Hall, of Elton, Ky. Miss Madell Lowe, of Lafayette, Ala., Miss Thelma Millians, of Newnan and Miss Mildred Prichard, of Shawmut, Ala.

Mrs. Hutchens is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Powers and the sister of Jesse Armstrong, of Savannah. Her maternal grandparents were the late Dr. and Mrs. Jesse F. Jones, of Hogansville, and her paternal grandparents the late Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Armstrong, of Hogansville. She attended the Hogansville school and Georgia University at Athens, and for the past several years has taught in the Lafayette school.

Mrs. Marcus M. Emmert, treasurer, and Mrs. F. B. Coggins, recording secretary, were re-elected to serve another year.

Retiring officers were Mrs. Charles J. Curry, president; Mrs. Walter E. Dupre, vice president; Mrs. Ralph Ragan, corresponding secretary.

A picnic luncheon was served by the hostesses, Mrs. E. S. Lewis and Mrs. E. W. Romberger. Dr. Baker, of Emory University, spoke of the various plants, shrubs and trees found at Fernbank.

Miss Grace Teasley To Wed Mr. Sandlin In Hartwell, Ga.

HARTWELL, Ga., May 27.—Of interest to friends throughout the south is the announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Grace Benson Teasley, of Hartwell, and Hiram Walter Sandlin, of Charleston, and Anderson, S. C., the marriage to be solemnized in July.

The bride-elect is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Loyd Teasley, of Hartwell. She is the sister of Mrs. Julius Nelson, of Anderson, the former Miss Elizabeth Teasley, and Mrs. Fred Ledbetter, also of Anderson, the former Miss Alice Teasley.

Miss Teasley is a graduate of Wesleyan College, at Macon. She also attended Lucy Cobb Institute, at Athens, from which her mother, the former Miss Grace Benson, was graduated.

Mr. Sandlin is a son of Mrs. S. L. Gardner and the late John LaFayette Sandlin. His brothers are the Rev. John L. Sandlin, of Hendersonville, S. C.; Malcolm Gardner and Joseph Gardner, of Charleston.

Mr. Sadlin is a graduate of the College of Charleston, and is a member of the faculty of the Boys' High school of Anderson.

Miss Gantt, Fiance Honored at Supper

Miss Sarah Jenkins entertained last evening at a buffet supper at her home on Tuxedo road honoring Miss Cora Gantt and her fiance, Rosser Little. Following the supper the guests were entertained at a preview motion picture show.

The hostess was assisted in entertaining by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William K. Jenkins, and her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Collett Munger.

The buffet table was overlaid with a venetian lace cloth centered with a graceful arrangement of pastel-colored garden flowers.

Brenau College News of Interest.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 27.—The Brenau College annual, "Bubbles," edited by Miss Ida Lightman, of Pittsfield, Mass., contains photographs of student celebrities, as selected by George B. Petty, nationally known artist. Pictured are Misses Sara Wilson, first, and Helen Nolan, Mary Emma McBrayer, Anna Pearl Hurt, Peggy Pleune and Mary Jane Sundstrom, also Louise Holcomb, Joyce Sweeney, Martha Binion, Juel Sellers, Mena Hilty and Dorothy Kattenhorn.

The senior personalities, chosen by the student body as the six outstanding students on the campus are Misses Juanda Bonck, Sarah Frances Crosby, Ida Lightman, Margo Reid, Virginia Myers and Anice Wismer. The theme of the annual is informal, featuring modern layouts and action shots, and the book has been entered for "All-American" competition in the National Scholastic Press Critical Yearbook Service.

The Brenau Cotillion Club has elected the following new officers: Misses Peggy Pleune, president; Lovy Nebo, vice president; Virginia Porterfield, secretary, and Vera Edwards, treasurer. Misses Leila Williams, Margaret May, Lois Snyder, Lucille Crosby, Elizabeth McCurry, India Bond, Lovy Nebo, Estalee Sherrod and Merryl McConnell will represent the Brenau Y. W. C. A. at the southern student conference at Blue Ridge, N. C., June 8-17.

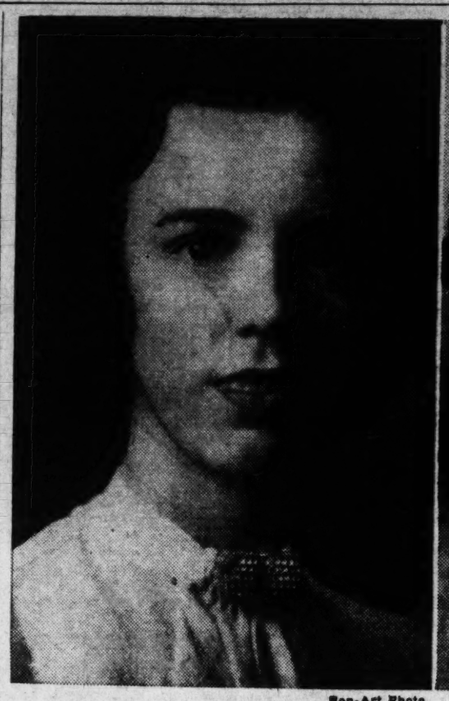

Ex-Governor John Slaton, of Georgia, was a recent visitor, viewing the Virginia Dare stones in Brenau museum. The inscription on one of the Dare stones recently deposited at the college has been deciphered by a student of the academy, according to President H. J. Pearce, who offered a prize to anyone reading it correctly. It is written in an archaic style of spelling and states as follows: "Five lie here, murdered by Indians." Dr. Pearce renewed his offer of $500 for the stone mentioned in the first discovery containing 17 names.

Sigma Phi Alpha, honorary languages fraternity, recently elected the following new officers: Misses Vera Edwards, president; Lucy Dickinson, vice president; Lovy Nebro, secretary; Bette Brigham, treasurer. Charter members added to the original honorary members are Misses Bette Brigham, Roberta Costin, Frances Couvillon, Nell Hanson Cox, Ramsey Crebbin, Lucy Dickinson, Marion Dinsmore, Dell Foscue, Emily Hankins, Ruth Heal, Jean Kidd, Martha Jane Mendenhall, Evangeline Morris, Mary Mullin, Lovy Nebo, Anne Green Porterfield, Margaret Roper, Marion Schuenemann, Lulu Tankersley and Vera Edwards.

Miss Elsie Pelton, president of Alpha Chi Omega sorority, has been chosen to assist in the receiving line when Dr. and Mrs. M. L. Brittain entertain the Georgia Tech seniors June 1 at an annual reception.

Miss Lisabeth Oates will entertain a group of Brenau students at a house party at Sunnyside, near Panama City, Fla., July 4. Miss Sarah Frances Crosby will spend the summer at Rice Theater school, Martha's Vineyard Island, Mass., with Miss Lois Gregg Secor, where she will study dramatics.

Miss Smith's engagement to Jacob Duke Croxton, of Atlanta, is announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George T. Smith Sr., of Sharpsburg. The marriage will be solemnized in June. Miss Hargrove, whose engagement to James Calvin Ferguson, of Miami, was announced recently, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hargrove, of Miami. The marriage will be solemnized on June 18 at Central Baptist church in Miami. Miss McLean will wed Tom R. Wilcox, of Dublin, on July 7 at First Presbyterian church in Eastman. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell L. McLean, of Eastman. Miss Cromley, of Brooklet, whose engagement to Glenn Roscoe Harper, of Douglas, was announced recently, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Cromley, of Brooklet. The marriage of Miss Cromley to Mr. Harper will be solemnized in June.

Miss Battle and James Whitner Wed at Peachtree Road Church

The Peachtree Road Presbyterian church formed the setting for the marriage ceremony at which Miss Margaret Baker Battle became the bride of James Tichenor Whitner last evening at 6 o'clock. Rev. Eugene T. Wilson performed the ceremony which was witnessed by a company of friends and relatives of the bridal couple.

Joseph Ragan, organist, presented a musical program while the wedding guests assembled, choosing as his selections: "Wedding Song," by Ware-Rogers; "Vorspiel" from "Lohengrin," by Wagner; "Chant de May," by Jongen; "Bouree et Musette," by Karg-Elert; "Harmonies du Soir" by Karg-Elert, and "Dreams," by Stoughton.

A background of palms, starred with many-branched candelabra holding tall white tapers, formed the decorations within the church. Massed against the rear of the pulpit were tall palms, which were centered with a sloping candelabrum holding 22 candles. In front of this arrangement on a lower level was a similar candelabrum holding 11 tapers, and on a still lower level was a graceful white wicker floor basket filled with white gladioli, white larkspur and Easter lilies. The altar was adorned with a mound of similar white flowers, and the pews reserved for members of the bridal families were marked with sheaves of Easter lilies.

Bridal Personnel.

Miss Helen Amoret Battle, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Mrs. James V. Calhoun and Miss Anna Baum were the bridesmaids. Miss Battle wore for the ceremony a becoming gown of chartreuse green net, over taffeta, which featured a bolero of chartreuse green lace and panels of lace let into the bouffant skirt. Her crownless wide-brimmed hat of matching green net featured green velvet streamers which fell to the waistline. Matching accessories and a cascade bouquet of pastel tinted garden flowers completed the effective costume.

Mrs. Calhoun and Miss Baum wore similarly styled gowns of wild violet blue net, with matching wide-brimmed net hats, and they carried cascade bouquets of deep purple sweet peas.

Little Miss Kate Denny, six-year-old niece of the bride, was a dainty figure wearing a pale pink net frock and hat made exactly like those worn by the other attendants, and her flowers were a miniature cascade of pink sweet peas.

The bride chose for the ceremony a white marquisette gown posed over crisp white taffeta and featuring as the only trimming scallops outlined by self-covered cords in the puffed sleeves and the full, floor-length skirt. Her hat was a smart white turban, fashioned with the crown open in the back and with white velvet streamers that fell to the floor. The bridal bouquet was a cascade of white roses and valley lilies.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Edwin H. Denny, of Dallas, Texas, and the groom's brother, Dr. Thomas C. Whitner Jr., of Elizabeth, N. J., served as best man. The groomsmen were John Charles Whitner, Spann W. Milner, Thomas M. Stubbs, and James V. Calhoun.

Reception At Home.

Following the wedding service at the church, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Denny, of Dallas, Texas, and Miss Helen Battle, brother and sisters of the bride, entertained at a reception given at the latter's home on East Shadowlawn avenue, which assembled the wedding party, and guests from a distance.

The home was decorated for the reception with quantities of roses, snapdragons, daisies and sweet peas, all in white. The table in the dining room was covered with a cloth of Italian cut-work and centered with a beautiful three-tired wedding cake, topped with a graceful basket made of frosting and filled with valley lilies. Silver candlesticks holding white tapers flanked the centerpiece.

Receiving the guests with the hosts and the bridal couple was the groom's mother, Mrs. Thomas C. Whitner, who was gowned in violet chiffon with a hat to match. Her flowers were pink rosebuds. Mrs. Denny's costume was of Dubonnet net over Dubonnet taffeta and worn with a brief white moire jacket and a small white hat. Her flowers were a shoulder cluster of gardenias. Mrs. Thomas C. Whitner Jr., of Elizabeth, N. J., was an attractive figure wearing cyclamen pink chiffon with a hat to match, and a shoulder cluster of gardenias.

Assisting in entertaining were Misses Mary Burt, Mary Meixell, Betty Brown, Mary Plumb, Gwendolyn Altman and Aileen Ligon.

Mr. Whitner and his bride left for a wedding trip to New York. On their return they will reside at 108 Fifth street. Mrs. Whitner traveled in a smart bolero suit of black crepe with a blouse printed in many brilliant colors. A small black hat of felt and ribbon, and a black top coat completed her ensemble.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Denny, Kate and Edwin Battle Denny, of Dallas, Texas; Mrs. J. S. Dill, of Greenville, S. C.; Miss Annie Kate Barnes, of Opelika, Ala.; Miss Belle Walker, Mrs. John W. Walker, Miss Caroline S. Brown, Mrs. Fannie Brown and Miss Mary Lou Barwick, all of Augusta.

Miss Townes Weds Denny Cummings.

ARAGON, Ga., May 27.—The marriage of Miss Louise Townes and Denny Cummings was solemnized Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Townes here.

Rev. J. C. Smith officiated while a program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. David Young Jr., of Dry Branch, and Mrs. Henderson Lanham, of Rome.

The bride wore navy featuring dusty pink collar and cuffs, with matching accessories and shoulder spray of sweetheart roses and valley lilies.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Townes entertained at an informal reception, assisted by Miss Daisy Allen and Miss Kathryn Townes, of Rome; Mesdames Ed Randall, Hugh Gaston, W. F. Barron, of Atlanta, and Miss Carolyn Townes.

Miss Martha Townes kept the bride's book.

Miss Colquitt To Wed June 14

MISS HARRIETT ELYZABETH COLQUITT, OF DALLAS.

DALLAS, Ga., May 27.—Announcement is made today by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Olin Colquitt of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Harriett Elyzabeth Colquitt, to John Julius Floyd, of LaGrange. The marriage will be quietly solemnized at the Emory University theological chapel on June 14, the wedding anniversary of the bride's parents.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mrs. Myrtle Colquitt Colquitt, of Decatur, and the late William Alfred Colquitt. She is a descendant of the late Alfred H. Colquitt, Governor of Georgia and United States senator. Her mother is the former Harriett Elyzabeth Stevens, daughter of Mrs. Caroline Nail Stevens, of Carrollton, and the late J. M. Stevens, pioneer residents of Carroll county. She is the sister of Dr. A. O. Colquitt Jr., of Spartanburg, S. C., and Hugh Colquitt, student at the University of Georgia, and Misses Patsy and Hilda Colquitt, of Dallas.

Miss Colquitt attended LaGrange College and graduated from Bowdon, where she has taught since receiving her degree. While at LaGrange College she served as editor of The Scroll, college publication, and president of the Curtain Raisers, dramatic club.

Mr. Floyd, youngest son of Linton Eugene Floyd, of LaGrange, and the late Mrs. Geraldine Worrill Floyd, is a descendant of prominent Georgia families. His paternal grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. Captain John Colbert Floyd, of Covington, and his maternal grandparents the late Mr. and Mrs. John Raymond Worrill, of Americus. He is the brother of Rev. Arva Floyd, instructor at Emory Theological Seminary, who will officiate at the marriage; L. E. Jr., of Orlando, Fla.; Edmund H., of Macon; William W., of Chipley; and Carl M., of Atlanta; Mrs. D. Leon Wilson, of Macon, and Mrs. Fred C. Williamson, of Gadsden, Ala.

The groom-elect formerly resided in Chipley, in Harris county, and received his education at Chipley High school and at Emory University, where he was a member of the Sigma Chi social fraternity. He is now associated in business with his father at the Security warehouse, in LaGrange, and is prominently identified with the civic, religious and social activities of that city. He is a member of the Lions' Club, of the LaGrange Junior Chamber of Commerce, which he serves as secretary, and of the Methodist church, where he is a steward, serving also as head of the district division of Methodist Young People's work.

Judge Hathcock Addresses Meet Of Fourth District W. C. T. U.

By Mrs. Mary Harris Armour, of Atlanta, Editor, Georgia W. C. T. U.

The meeting of the fourth district W. C. T. U., Mrs. T. E. Patterson, president; held at Manchester, was of unusual interest. Three state officers and two other state workers were present. Judge T. O. Hathcock, of Atlanta municipal court, was an honored guest. He spoke concerning present conditions in Georgia. His speech was appreciated, and enlightened his hearers on many questions. Mrs. R. H. McDougall spoke on the membership campaign. She congrateulated the women on the progress made and urged them to make a strenuous effort to go over the top by June 1 and lead the nation.

Mrs. DeYo, leader of the national membership campaign, reports that since it started the union has gained 3,000 members per month, and Georgia is nobly doing her part. Mrs. Wilbur Brown talked on stewardship, and pleaded with her hearers to hold not only money, but brain and personality, as a sacred trust from God. Mrs. George Bondurant, State L. T. L. secretary, pleaded for the organization of L. T. L.'s everywhere that the children may be trained in the principles of purity and total abstinence. Miss Estelle Bozeman, by special invitation, spoke to the high school. She was praised by her hearers, and the chemistry teachers were so impressed that they declared their intention to set up an exhibit for the school showing the nature and effects of alcohol.

Mrs. Mary Scott Russell gave a stirring message—a trumpet call for the whole line to advance. She also outlined practical methods for work to that end. Her hearers were greatly moved and one union affirmed their determination to canvass their city, block by block, take literature into every home, and invite every woman to join the ranks.

The presence of Miss Margaret Cook, of Newnan, who spent so many years in missionary work in Japan, was greatly appreciated. Her presence was a benediction and her Bible reading and words of wisdom were a benediction and a lasting inspiration.

The Manchester union and the ministers of the city, Dr. W. G. Venable, pastor of the First Methodist church, and Rev. Mr. Figge, of the Nazarene church, did much for the interest and comfort of the guests and added greatly to the spiritual atmosphere of the meeting. The lunch at the hotel and the social hour following were fully enjoyed.

Mrs. H. H. Word, press and publicity director for the Carrollton W. C. T. U., sends the following interesting communication: "Rev. J. F. Davis held the regular Mother's Day services for the prisoners at the county barracks in Carrollton on May 14. Such a service is sponsored by the Carrollton union each year. The union buys Mother's Day cards for all the prisoners whose mothers are living and has these cards mailed before Mother's Day. The union has also bought songbooks for the men. Each Mother's Day baskets of white and red roses are carried out before the services. Each prisoner—white and colored—is given a white or a red rose as needed. Members of the Carrollton union accompany Mr. Davis each Mother's Day and assist him with the services. This year he was assisted by Mrs. J. F. Davis and Mrs. Hugh Word. Professor Claxton, of the West Georgia College faculty, made the principal address. Mr. Davis, assisted by the Carrollton union, is doing a splendid work for these prisoners. The work has been strongly indorsed by the grand jury for several years and so written in their recommendations. The prisoners themselves also appreciate Mr. Davis and his work. A week or so ago a card of appreciation signed by every prisoner was published in all the county papers."

Woodlawn, Augusta, has one of the most active L. T. L.'s in the state. Last week they had a fine meeting at Woodlawn Methodist church. The children gave a Mother goose temperance playlet and sang songs, after which Dr. Magee spoke to them on "Health Habits." When the meeting was over the children took bouquets, each tied with a white ribbon holding a flower mission text card, to friends in the hospital—especially remembering the sick children.

Griffin Marriages.

GRIFFIN, May 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Walter McCord, of Griffin, announce the marriage of their daughter, Tinnie, to Hugh M. Setzer, the ceremony having been performed on May 20 by Judge Steve Wallace, ordinary of Spalding county, at his home here. Mr. Setzer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Setzer, of Griffin, formerly of McDonough.

Miss Kathryn Atkinson and Lewis Albert Powers, both of Griffin, were married on Saturday, Rev. L. W. Blackwelder, rector of St. George's Episcopal church, officiating. Mrs. Powers is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Atkinson, of Punta Gorda, Fla., and Mr. Powers is the son of Mrs. Nellie Powers, of Griffin, where he and his bride will reside.

Miss Rena Agatha Crawford and Harold Wilson Kelley, both of Griffin, were married on Saturday here, Judge Steve Wallace officiating. The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Collins Crawford, of Spalding county, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Kate Kelley and the late Boyd Kelley, of Griffin. The couple will reside here.

Brookhaven Club Terrace Opens Today With Informal Concert

Announcement is made that the informal summer opening of Brookhaven, the Capital City Country Club, takes place at the concert scheduled for this evening from 8 to 10 o'clock on the club terrace. Each Sunday evening throughout the summer season concerts will be presented at the club between these hours.

The initial alfresco dance for this season is scheduled for next Thursday evening at Brookhaven Club. Another dance will be given in the club terrace on June 8 and after that date the management announces that dances will alternate each Thursday with those planned at the Capital City club roof.

Throughout the warm months society will enjoy dining and dancing on the Brookhaven Club terrace overlooking the picturesque lake, where members and friends will enjoy daily swims and sun baths on the adjoining beach.

Emory University Offers Twelve Scholarships to Clubwomen

By MRS. J. C. ROGERS,
Of Dahlonega, State Education Chairman.

Again Emory University renews the generous offer made for two consecutive years of 12 scholarships to prospective forum leaders in Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. These scholarships are given for the summer quarter which opens Monday, June 12, and closes the first term July 19.

The benefit covers the tuition for one course in the department of public affairs, with a choice of courses in public opinion, journalism, fundamentals of spoken English, political science and government of Georgia.

At this time of world conflict between nations in open warfare, an undeclared war is being waged in our country between the evil and moral forces of ideologies carried on by propaganda. At such a time, public forums assume a new significance and may become great forces for the protection of democracy and for the preservation of Americanism. Our great federation of women's clubs with its democratic reach into every section of these United States has a unique opportunity of wielding a powerful influence for enlightened public opinion and better citizenship.

The means for improving this opportunity has been afforded us in the generous offer of Emory University: one tuition scholarship to each of the 10 club districts of Georgia, and two scholarships to members of the state federation at large. This is an opportunity for preparedness—preparedness of an informed mind, tolerant intelligent judgment and courageous thinking.

Members of the class of 1937 formed themselves into a club which now functions actively as a per capita paying group of 17 members, known as the Emory University Forum Leadership Group of Georgia. The president is Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, who was the originator of the class at Emory. At a recent meeting of the group it was decided to meet July 10, on Emory campus, and invite members of this year's class to be guests of the founders.

As chairman of the State Department of Education and of the Forum Leadership committee of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, I am deeply grateful for this contribution to the education of forum leaders, and I hope every district will avail itself of the privilege by sending a representative to Emory who will return home to share her new knowledge and enlarged vision with her section. Will each district chairman of education assume this responsibility promptly and send in to me as early as possible the name of the representative accepted for this scholarship, as I have been requested to send a list of the 12 forum students to Dr. Goodrich White, of Emory University by June 6. The time is short, so act quickly.

DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Regent, Mrs. Harrison Hightower, Thomaston; first vice regent, Mrs Thomas Coke Meil, Atlanta; second vice regent Mrs Stewart Colley, Grantville; chaplain, Mrs I J Stapington Eastman, recording secretary, Mis E Blount Freeman, Dublin; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mark Smith Thomaston; treasurer Mrs J D Wadsworth 1003 Benning Boulevard, Columbus; auditor Mrs. Ober Warthen, Vidalia; consulting organizing secretary Mrs. Y. Harris Yarbrough Milledgeville, librarian, Mrs J M Simmons, Bainbridge; historian, Mrs. D Boardman, Griffin; consulting registrar, Mrs. H B. Earthman Decatur; curator, Mrs. R. H. Sergeant Newton Chapter Hostess To Distinguished D.A.R. Leaders

By Mrs. J. Harold Nicholson, of Madison, Assistant Editor Georgia D. A. R.

Sergeant Newton chapter met recently, at the Covington library. Hostesses were Miss Charles Porter, Mesdames W. D. Travis, R. F. Harwell and L. D. Bolton. The regent, Mrs. T. C. Swann, presided. Mrs. Swann presented Mrs. Peter Walton Godfrey, a former member of the chapter and past state regent of the Georgia Society D. A. R. Accompanying Mrs. Godfrey from Atlanta were five distinguished Georgia women, including Mesdames W. G. Bradley, of Hazelhurst, Woman's Club leader; Howard H. McCall, past state regent and ex-vice president general N. S. D. A. R.; Mrs. Mark Cooper Pope, vice regent of Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., and active in patriotic work, and Mrs. George Robert Argo, of Augusta, a prominent worker and life member of the D. A. R.

Mrs. McCall told the chapter that the beginning of her public work was when Mrs. Godfrey, as state regent, appointed her state recording secretary. She stated that Mrs. Godfrey had helped make possible the Berry school for mountain boys and girls in north Georgia. "Many years ago," Mrs. McCall said, "Miss Martha Berry spoke here in Covington, saying that unless she could raise $1,200, she would be obliged to close her school. It was Mrs. Godfrey, who went out and raised that $1,200."

Mrs. Pope has been famous since her earliest girlhood for her wonderful negro stories. She told the story of "How Honey Got Lost" and "How You Got To Know How to Pray."

Mrs. Godfrey spoke on "The Negro in Georgia," and reviewed the new and outstanding book, "To Save Their Souls," introducing the author, Miss Bessie Lewis, of Darien, Ga. Miss Lewis explained the theme of the book and spoke of her indignation over the hyprocrisy of the slave traders and later of the carpet baggers who excused their crimes by saying that it was in order "to save their souls." It was this burning indignation which impelled her to write her book.

Professor Eady, of Oxford, introduced a quartet of young men, Harry Hutchins, Frank Rountree, Jason Shirah and Buddy Irwin, who sang, "I Know de Lawd Laid His Han' on Me," and "Seen Listening." They gave a very sympathetic and soul-stirring interpretation of old negro songs.

Other guests were Miss Hattie Warren, of Tampa, Fla.; Mrs. H. H. Stone, Mrs. Vonnelle Stone, Mrs. Eady, Mrs. Nat Turner and Mrs. Charles Candler, of Madison.

LaGrange Chapter D. A. R. met at the colonial country home of Mrs. A. E. Mallory on Big Springs road, with Mesdames James M. Handley and W. M. Fincher as co-hostesses. New chapter officers elected for 1939-40 were Mesdames R. A. Malone, re-elected regent; Barrington J. King, vice regent; A. E. Mallory, recording secretary; T. G. Polhill, corresponding secretary; George Sargent, treasurer; John Favor, registrar; Neil Glass, chaplain; R. H. Park, historian; B. J. Mayer, parliamentarian; D. E. Morgan, auditor; K. R. McCall, librarian.

Miss Emily Rowe, a page at the national congress in Washington, gave an interesting report. A declamation was given by B. J. Mayer Jr., winner of the district contest sponsored by the School of the Air. George S. Johnson, introduced by Mrs. T. G. Polhill, spoke on American heroes.

Thomasville chapter met at the home of the regent, Mrs. P. I. Dixon.

The last meeting before adjourning for the summer months officers and committee chairman made reports of work done during the year.

At the request of the state regent, Mrs. W. H. Hightower, a district meeting will be held in Thomasville in October, with Mrs. Hightower presiding.

Mrs. P. I. Dixon was re-elected to serve another year as regent with Mrs. F. C. Jones, vice regent.

In the passing of Mrs. Albert E. Douglas, (Annie Fitzpatrick) the Henry Walton Chapter D. A. R. and Madison has sustained the loss of a beloved Christian woman, a native citizen and one prominently identified with the social, civic and patriotic life of the community in which she had spent her life. Coming from a long line of distinguished Colonial, Revolutionary and Confederate ancestry, she was the lineal descendant of Benjamin Fitzpatrick, Morgan county's pioneer citizen, a Revolutionary soldier whose grave has been marked by the Henry Walton Chapter D. A. R. and is the daughter of the late Captain William Benjamin Fitzpatrick of the Panola Guards, C. S. A.

Her two daughters, Mrs. Carter Shepherd, a former regent and corresponding secretary of the local chapter D. A. R., and Mrs. Leonard Wallace, ex-regent and ex-director of the Benjamin Fitzpatrick C. A. R. of the local patriotic societies, is also state president of the Georgia Society Children of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Smith Speaks At Gainesville Club.

Mrs. Sidney O. Smith spoke at the meeting of the Gainesville Study Club held recently at the home of Mrs. Clinton Johnson, and gave an excellent review of Thornton Wilder's play "Our Town."

The speaker, introduced by Mrs. John F. Blodgett, program chairman, presented the story in a realistic manner. The play, the 1938 Pulitzer prize winner, deals with stages of life at Grover's Corners, N. H., a town comparable to the average community.

Mrs. Jesse Meeks, president, was in the chair. Reports were heard from Mrs. P. D. Horkan, chairman of the Girl Scout troop project, and Mrs. Johnson, chairman of the yearbook committee.

Others present were Mesdames Arthur Roper, C. A. Rudolph, Charles Strong, A. S. Hardy, E. E. Kimbrough Jr., Pinckney Whelchel, Campbell Brown Jr., Peter LaFleur, Harold Castleberry, Roy Newman, E. B. Michaelis, Miss Ann Eliza Brewer, Marshall Stone, Claude Williams, U. R. Waterman, W. H. Fischer, Dr. Katharine Dozier, Misses Ruby Falls, Ann Eliza Brewer and Mrs. Lester Bush, of Boston.

Macon Club Officers Recently Installed By Mrs. Waxelbaum

Installation of officers and yearly reports of chairmen featured May luncheon meeting of Macon Woman's Club held at Christ church parish house. Mrs. Lewis Waxelbaum, past president, presided at the installation ceremony and stressed the fact that "willing service develops a power all its own." Mrs. Leonard R. Booth was re-elected president and other officers are Mrs. L. A. Shirley, first vice president; Mrs. Spencer Holdcroft, second vice president; Mrs. W. J. Cousins, recording secretary; Mrs. James Knott, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harold W. Cotton, treasurer; Mrs. A. S. Grinalds, parliamentarian; Mrs. Herbert Greenwald, historian; Mrs. Carl Sullivan, auditor.

Detailed report of the year's accomplishments was given by Mrs. Booth, who mentioned among the major projects sponsored, a Girls' Scout troop; two toy matinees and outdoor illumination at Christmas; 12 weeks' class in interior decorating; annual kiddie revue and annual cooking school. Mrs. John B. Clark, first vice president and membership chairman reported 19 new members. As second vice president, Mrs. Dice R. Anderson stated that the yearbook was her report. Mrs. Cousins reported for Mrs. Frank Tuttle 21 books reviewed.

Mrs. Guyton Abney, radio chairman, told of the weekly broadcasts on Thursdays, and Mrs. Josiah Crudup told of the success of the club center room established this year at the Union Dry Goods store. As chairman for Tallulah Falls school, Mrs. Waxelbaum said that $165 was realized on the annual Macon tag day to raise the Woman's Club contribution to the school. Other chairmen brought interesting reports showing progress along all lines.

Preceding the luncheon, Mrs. James Knott rendered piano selections. Mrs. Max Samuels was introduced as the guest of Mrs. Waxelbaum and Mrs. Hugh Gratz and Miss Laura Cardwell, of Louisville, Ky., as guests of Mrs. Brooks Geoghegan. A former member welcomed was Mrs. Jerome Herman, of Florida.

Radio Programs To Be Presented

Radio interpretations of the government exhibits at the New York World's Fair are being presented in a new weekly coast-to-coast broadcast titled "Democracy in Action." The series is on the air every Sunday, 2 to 2:30 E. S. T., over Columbia Broadcasting System.

The purpose of the series is to promote wider understanding of democratic processes and functions as revealed by the ways in which our American government operates, and to extend the values of the federal exhibits at the fair.

Included in the series are descriptions of more than 100 federal agencies at work. "On Land and Sea" (Transportation) was the first broadcast; next, "Wings for Words" (Communication). Today will be heard "Mouths to Feed" (Food), and on June 4, "Homes for the People" (Shelter).

Educators look upon the fair and its exhibits as a great educational effort designed to develop appreciation of the kind of world a free people have built for today and can build for tomorrow. The weekly broadcasts, paralleling the exhibits of government at work will dramatize the democratic process by which our nation faces its needs and makes progress for the welfare of all.

Meansville Club Holds Recent Meeting.

Meansville Woman's Club met recently at the school and Mrs. Mary Lena Clark presented definite plans for the WPA library. Subscriptions have been made to take care of the cash with which to buy new books each month.

The club paid $5 to the Boy Scouts to help with their summer camping expenses, and the Girl Scouts will be helped with their organization. Miss Margaret Howard arranged the following program: Scripture reading, by Mrs. W. M. Hartley; piano solo, Miss Marion Evans; reading, Mrs. Tom Middlebrooks. Mrs. R. B. Plymate, member of Bessie Tift College faculty, talked on "Georgia Literature." Hostesses were Mesdames Charlie Slade, Tom Middlebrooks, Tom Lifsey, F. C. Stamey and Miss Effie Long.

Mrs. Richardson Heads Philomathic Club.

When the Philomathic Club of Augusta resumes activities in October, the following officers will be in charge: Mrs. W. R. Richardson, president; Mrs. W. R. Eve, first vice president; Mrs. A. N. Catrevas, second vice president; Mrs. Adrian Cohen, secretary; Mrs. Robert Greenblatt, treasurer; Miss Annie Moore, librarian. Composing the literary committee are Mesdames George Sumerau, Everett Sanderson and Peter E. Traub.

A series of programs on "Women and the Arts" have been completed and from October until next June "Facts and Fiction" will be discussed under intriguing subheads. Previous programs demonstrate the great cultural value of this group to the members and to the community.

Under the Cherokee Rose

By Rose Marie

From the redwood forests, Boulder dam and the painted desert, traveling officers of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs have sent cards telling of their leisurely homeward journey, but when they stated that they thought Salt Lake City, the most beautiful city they had visited, they got their pictures in the paper. Mrs. Albert Hill and Mrs. Ralph Butler were guests of Mrs. Mary Stewart Hair in Salt Lake City, and were given wonderful opportunity to make a sightseeing trip under Mrs. Hair's guidance. Next week's club page will carry the highlights of the San Francisco meeting.

In the passing of Mrs. W. L. Hunnicutt, of Atlanta, clubwomen have lost a faithful co-worker and a valued friend. She was recently re-elected to the presidency of Kirkwood Civic League, an office she held for a part of two terms. Gentle and capable, Mrs. Hunnicutt will be greatly missed and to her bereaved family Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs extends sympathy.

Officers elected to serve Augusto Woman's Club for 1939-1940 are: President, Mrs. T. A. Maxwell, 2163 Kings way; first vice president, Mrs. John B. Moore; second vice president, Mrs. Jack Hunter; third vice president, Mrs. W. C. Moran; recording secretary, Mrs. Dan O'Connor; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. H. Corley; auditor, Mrs. P. F. McAnally.

May meeting of Luella Woman's Club honored "mothers." Devotional was the "Story of Hannah," and the "Origin and Meaning of Mother's Day." with appropriate music were program numbers. Garden study was continued under the topics, "The Herb Garden" and "Harmony in the Garden." Mrs. Helen Everett was program chairman, assisted by Mesdames R. W. Strickland, W. H. Bailey and C. L. Barham.

As leader of the May program of Douglas Woman's Club, Mrs. L. H. Battle's theme was the patriot's boast that "Wher'er We Roam, His First Best Country Ever is at Home." Wonders of the nation's capital "Washington" were told by Miss Willie Pearl Davis, and Antoinette Sapp gave a patriotic reading. Mrs. John Gibson and Mrs. D. J. Hathaway were pages, and hostesses were Mesdames W. T. Cottingham, L. C. McDonald, Hoke Davis and John Bankston.

A feature of Georgia's exhibit at the New York World's Fair is the health display, illustrating, in Neon lights, the wonderful record that has been made in the control of infectious and contagious diseases. Georgia's Day at the fair is June 14, and great preparations are being made for a large representation from the state.

The State Board of Health consists of 15 members, all of whom serve without salary. Dr. W. P. Harbin, of Rome, and Dr. C. L. Ridley, of Macon, have recently been added to the board, other members being E. D. Rivers, Governor of Georgia; Robert F. Maddox, chairman; Drs. Cleveland Thompson, C. K. Sharp, H. W. Clements, L. C. Allen, D. N. Thompson, J. A. Corry, J. G. Williams, Paul McGee, W. T. Edmunds, H. M. Hodges, R. C. Ellis. Georgia Public Health Association will hold its annual meeting in Atlanta, June 8 to 10.

Toccoa Junior Woman's Club has as new officers Miss Emily Busha, president; Miss Mozelle Green, first vice president; Miss Fay Martin, second vice president; Miss Carolyn Graves, secretary; Miss Emily Sisk, treasurer.

We of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs enshrine in memory our departed friend, Mrs. W. E. Mansfield, of Atlanta. She was faithful in all things, but she was outstanding in her work for Travelers' Aid and in loyalty to the West End Study Class, a group in which she was greatly beloved. Deepest sympathy is extended to her bereaved husband and family.

Mrs. Perryman, Officers Re-elected To Serve Talbotton Woman's Club

Mrs. W. L. Perryman was reinstated as president of the Talbotton Woman's Club at the May meeting held at Straus-Levert Memorial hall. Other officers reinstated were Mrs. Brooks Culpepper, first vice president; Mrs. E. Hinton McGehee, second vice president; Mrs. Carter Matthews, recording secretary; Mrs. W. C. Thomas, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. C. Watts, parliamentarian. Miss Mary Slade was made treasurer to succeed Mrs. R. E. Slade and Miss Fannie Mahone auditor to succeed Miss Mary Slade.

Departmental chairmen named for the ensuing year are: Foundations and endowments, Mrs. G. R. Jacob; garden circle, Mrs. W. C. Thomas and Miss Mary Matthews; international relations, Mrs. W. R. Smith; public welfare, Mrs. B. G. Jordan; American home, Miss Virginia Persons; citizenship, Mrs. T. H. Mahone; education, Mrs. H. E. Hutcheson; fine arts, Mrs. J. A. Smith; legislation, Mrs. G. L. Hobbs.

An interesting program under the leadership of Mrs. H. P. Weston was presented by the American citizenship department. Mrs. J. C. Watts, in a discussion on an alien's idea of citizenship into an adopted world, told the meaning of citizenship to each newcomer. She emphasized outstanding facts of wealth, health, freedom, loyalty and hospitality of the American people. She concluded with reading the poem, "America's Making."

George Graham, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Graham, sang "God Bless America." Mrs. Marvin Graham and Mrs. E. L. Bardwell rendered a piano duet. Current events were discussed by Miss Jessie Robins, Mrs. F. R. Harrod and Mrs. J. B. Wimberly.

Guests presented were Mesdames Lynda Bryan, Maude Abbott, Lillian Brown, of Atlanta; Mesdames Leon Watkins, A. P. Persons Jr., George Graham and Ida McDowell, of Talbotton.

Clubroom was beautiful with its decorations of garden flowers in pastel shades and during the social hour a plate was served by the hostesses: Mesdames C. M. Calhoun, A. P. Persons, Harry Baldwin, H. E. Hutcheson, W. K. Couch Jr., S. C. Ingram, C. E. Keller, R. H. McRae, Bessie H. Pew and R. E. Flanagan. The next meeting will be held in September.

Monroe Clubwomen Visit Tallulah School.

An all-day pilgrimage was recently made to Tallulah Falls school by 22 members of Monroe Woman's Club, and the May meeting was held at Glenbrook hotel. Election of officers featured the business session and the following will serve for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. R. V. Morgan; vice president, Mrs. Richard Carpenter; recording secretary, Mrs. J. W. Summerour; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. P. Shippey; treasurer, Mrs. Ernest Thompson; parliamentarian, Mrs. Lena F. Lewis; historian, Mrs. E. L. Almond; auditor, Mrs. Preston Adams.

After luncheon at the hotel, the group viewed Tallulah gorge and then went to visit Tallulah Falls school, where they were welcomed by Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, resident trustee, and conducted through the buildings.

In the words of Mrs. Lena F. Lewis who is chairman of Tallulah in the tenth district, "eyes were certainly opened by this visit. Members had no idea what the school was until they really saw with their own eyes. They were astonished at the size of the school plant and at the fine work the children are doing. I believe it will be an easy matter for Monroe to send $1 per capita next year."

Boston Club Elects New Officer Roster.

Officers of the Twentieth Century Club, of Boston, were recently elected for the next year as follows: Mrs. C. W. Groover, president; Mrs. L. L. Lundy, first vice president; Mrs. Harry Vann, second vice president; Mrs. Manly Bradshaw, recording secretary; Mrs. Harvey Carson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. G. Norton, treasurer; Mrs. John Leak, auditor; Mrs. J. A. Horn, parliamentarian.

Committee chairmen are: American Home and Garden, Mrs. Pasco Stanaland; American citizenship and international relations, Mrs. John Wimberly; public welfare, Mrs. John Leak; fine arts, Mrs. W. B. Moody; library service, Mrs. Manly Bradshaw; hospitality and courtesy, Mrs. H. M. Groover; calendar and program, Mrs. Harry Vann; finance, Mrs. H. G. Norton; membership, Mrs. L. L. Lundy.

The program was directed by Mrs. R. P. Stanaland and the subject was "Our Library." In answer to roll call, members named a book in the library. Mrs. L. L. Lundy told the history of the Boston library, and a group of musical selections were given.

Atalanta Club.

Members of Atalanta Club will be honored at a tea from 4 to 6 o'clock, at which Misses Alice Berry and Carletta Babb will be hostesses at the home of Miss Babb on East Ontario avenue.

Assisting in entertaining will be Mrs. Louise Respess, president of the club; Misses Elizabeth Ivey, Peggy Osborne and Mrs. Mabel Terry.

Dr. Burney Discusses Important Health Subjects at Meeting

"Social Diseases" was the subject of a talk given by Dr. J. W. Burney, of the State Department of Health, at the May meeting of Royston Woman's Club. Dr. Burney discussed the symptoms, causes and cures of social diseases and emphasized the importance of education of youth along this line.

Mrs. J. C. Doyle presided at this last meeting for the club year before turning the gavel over to the incoming president, Mrs. H. H. Dyar. Members sang "Georgia Land," Mrs. E. G. Moore led the pledge to the flag, and Mrs. Lillie McGarity offered the club prayer.

Mrs. Doyle expressed appreciation of the co-operation shown by members during her administration, and thanked those who helped in making Franklin County Federation meeting such a success. Her wish was that "as we find the three levels of life—the dead level, the life level, and the aspiring level—that we, as clubwomen, try ever to be on the aspiring level."

In assuming office, Mrs. H. H. Dyar pledged her best efforts for leadership and co-operation. Superintendent L. H. Pursells explained a petition to be circulated for the purpose of calling an election to vote on a school maintenance tax. He announced plans for organizing a Boy Scout troop.

Mrs. F. K. Harbin, as chairman of public health, presented Dr. Burney as speaker, and Livingstone Lee sang several songs. Social period was enjoyed with the following hostesses: Mesdames G. N. Nelms, Lee Fitts, Lady Veal, Uel Johnson, Allen Brown, C. W. Henderson, W. B. Higginbotham, Wesley Adams and Frank Brooks.

Mrs. Ruth Dyal Heads Baxley Club

Baxley Woman's Club closed a very successful year with the May meeting held at the clubroom. In observance of National Music Week three high school girls, Misses Dorothy Dyal, Reba Dubberly and Gloria McDonald gave a musical program, presented by Mrs. H. Owens, the chairman.

Mrs. Belle Minchew, retiring president, reported as the outstanding achievement of the year a gift of $2,000 to aid in building the municipal auditorium and gymnasium that is being erected in Baxley.

Treasurers' report showed that, in addition to this, the club has paid district, state and General Federation obligations. It has paid $36.75 to the Ella F. White Endowment Fund, thus completing the requirements and putting the club on the honor roll. It paid $10 a month to the library and gave $25 to Boy Scouts.

Mrs. Minchew introduced Mrs. Ruth Dyal, the new president, who named the committees for the coming year. Mrs. Dyal will be assisted by Mrs. J. H. Highsmith, first vice president; Mrs. Frank Lowe, second vice president; Mrs. R. L. Lewis, secretary; Mrs. T. J. Barnes, treasurer; Mrs. J. B. Moore, parliamentarian; Miss Bill Pace, auditor, and Mrs. Eugene Campbell, pianist.

During the social hour Mrs. Ed Jarman presented Mrs. Minchew with a crystal console set as a token of love and appreciation from the club. Hostesses were Mesdames Hall Jarman, W. R. Strozier, John Lewis, Ed Foy, M. Y. Hendrichs, T. J. Williams, R. L. Lewis and Miss Grace Overstreet.

Canon Clubwomen Elect New Officers.

At a recent meeting of Canon Woman's Club officers elected to serve for the coming year were: Mrs. L. E. Bannister, president; Mrs. M. T. Keaton, first vice president; Mrs. C. H. Bowers, second vice president; Mrs. T. G. Phillips, recording secretary; Mrs. E. P. Burton, treasurer; Rev. Nellie Mann Opdale, parliamentarian and historian; Mrs. J. C. Bowers, reporter.

Annual reports were given by officers and chairmen, one of special interest being the historian's report given by Mrs. Opdale. It was stated that the accomplishment of the year was incorporating the club and purchasing a clubhouse. About $100 was paid at time of purchase and the balance will be met in annual installments. First annual payment was made in six months rendered possible by the faithful and willing efforts of the members. This was not a sacrifice but a labor of love, and where love abounds, service is always a joy.

Vidalia Clubwomen Hear Musical Program

Vidalia Woman's Club met recently in the school auditorium and in celebration of National Music Week the fine arts committee, Mrs. W. C. Somers, the chairman, presented Miss Ora Hollis, soprano, and Miss Dorothy Rountree, pianist. Accompanist was Miss Christine Lewis. These young artists were pupils of the Wesleyan College Conservatory in Macon and showed much talent in their interpretation of numbers.

Meeting adjourned to the community house where hostesses serving were Mesdames V. P. Wright, C. E. Adams, J. C. Whatley, C. W. Findley, C. C. Price, W. M. Lewis, Fred Wilson, C. O. Vann, J. A. Bland, Misses Ila McLemore and Sarah Murchison.

Mrs. John Whitehurst Will Lead Federation Institute on July 6-7

In presenting Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, as leader of the club institute to be held in Athens on July 5 and 7, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs and the institute committee are doing so with belief that aggressive and well-trained women are needed to direct and inspire clubwomen to become better fitted for meeting the challenge of the new day.

Possessing inherent executive ability, Mrs. Whitehurst has the added attraction of being an excellent speaker. She has a superior knowledge of parliamentary procedure, and a personality that insures co-operation. These qualifications make her admirably fitted for the important office of first vice president that she holds in the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

At the recent council meeting of General Federation in San Francisco, the president, Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, urged the 2,000 delegates to strive for adjustment of democracy for human welfare and peace, and declared "We continue to face the same needs within the fields of human welfare, world peace, and spiritual rearmament as a year ago—but their solution is even more imperative today." When she then queried the assemblage whether or not the members cared enough "to press on toward a better analysis of each problem, the adoption of new methods and techniques, and the interpretation of our efforts to the American public," extended applause indicated agreement.

Mrs. Whitehurst will develop the same theme at club institute through panel discussions on democracy and human welfare, urging greater co-operation to the end of developing leadership "in the home" for public affairs. Each American problem is tied into this year's federation program for "adjusting democracy to human welfare."

Back of every worth-while undertaking are creative minds, and members of the institute committee are balancing the program with plenty of play along with the work. Were you there last year? If not, you just cannot know what it did mean and will mean again to live in the dormitory like school girls, run up and down the halls yelling "hey" and "goodnight," though sleeping little—well, it just makes one feel young again, and it reveals that chummy spirit of someone perhaps casually known before. Make reservations through Mrs. E. D. Pusey for one or two nights on July 6 and 7, in Athens.

GEORGIA DIVISION Daughters of the Confederacy

Sale of Jefferson Davis' Book To Feature U. D. C. Activities

By Miss Mary Lizzie Wright, of Elberton, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

June is the birth month of Jefferson Davis, only president of the Confederate States, and could be observed in no better way than by the completion of the sale of the reprint of Mr. Davis' book, "The Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government." Mrs. Frank A. Dennis, general chairman, writes, "Arrangements have been made with the publishers of the memorial edition of 'The Rise and Fall of the Confederate States' to continue the sale of the sets for the price of $4.00.

"The reprinting of these invaluable volumes, making them available for every home as well as school and public library, is one of the outstanding accomplishments of the organization. If each chapter in every division will purchase only two more sets, the sale will be completed during the administration of Mrs. W. D. Lamar, whose dream has been to pay signal honor to Mr. Davis. Orders should be sent direct to Garrett and Massie, Publishers, Richmond, Va., enclosing money."

Another way in which honor is paid to the memory of President Davis, is the completion of the quota to the Jefferson Davis Monument to be erected in Montgomery, first capital of the Confederacy. Each daughter has been asked to give as much as 50 cents during the past three years. Let each chapter treasurer check on the amounts sent division treasurer, and not be satisfied until the full amount is sent, and then send a love gift, over and above, so that the project may be completed and not allowed to drag. A good way to secure this money is a birthday party in June.

Continued interest is manifested in the district rallies which are being held over the state, under the direction of the division president, Mrs. Clyde F. Hunt. The next to be held will be at Cedartown on June 8, with all chapters in the seventh district represented. Following will be those of the ninth district at Toccoa on June 28 and the fifth at Roswell on July 7.

New officers were elected at recent meeting of the Charles D. Anderson chapter, Fort Valley, as follows: Mrs. C. N. Rountree, president; Miss Wilma Orr, first vice president; Mrs. A. M. Lamar, second vice president; Mrs. W. A. Wood, third vice president; Mrs. J. E. Hollingsworth, secretary; Mrs. J. E. Bledsoe, registrar; and Miss Mattie Luck, historian. A program on noted Georgians has been arranged for each meeting. Recently the lives of Generals Robert Toombs, John B. Gordon, L. Q. C. Lamar and Charles D. Anderson, for whom the chapter was named, has been studied. Miss Orr assisted Mrs. Jack Duke in entertaining. Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, past division president, was Memorial Day speaker, when appropriate exercises were held.

Longstreet chapter, Gainesville, heard Miss Mary Lou White read reminiscenses of the siege of Vicksburg, written by her father, the late N. C. White Sr., captain in Wheeler's Calvary, Eighth Volunteers from Tennessee. Miss White also gave a discussion of the city and its surroundings. The chapter sponsored Memorial Day exercises, with Dr. J. G. Hand, pastor of First Presbyterian church, as speaker. A handsome Confederate flag was raised for the first time over the cemetery as the salute was fired. The president, Mrs. Fletcher Johnson, welcomed Miss Fleta Canning, of Washington, D. C., as a member. Hostesses were Mrs. W. M. Johnson, Mrs. W. J. Ramsay and Mrs. Carrie Dunnegan.

Prizes of books of Southern Poems were awarded the winners from the five schools entering the essay contest by the Habersham chapter, Clarkesville, Mrs. Ben I. Thornton, president. A memorial service was conducted for two deceased members, Mrs. J. D. Lambert and Mrs. E. D. Reeves, tributes being paid their memory by Mrs. B. H. Graves and Mrs. R. A. Seegars.

Ida Evans Eve chapter, Thomson, welcomed Mrs. E. C. Echols as a new member at the recent meeting, when 31 members and visitors attended, and Mesdames J. E. Wilkerson, R. L. Hadaway, L. F. Stephens, K. Houston, Hugh S. Norris, J. G. Stovall and A. H. Thrasher were hostesses. 375 essays on "Stonewall Jackson" were reported written in the schools of McDuffie county. Miss Mary Hall, winner of first prize, read her essay, "Savannah, Past and Present," featured the program.

A talk on Andersonville prison by Dr. R. C. Pendergrass, featured the May meeting of the Americus chapter, when the Allene Walker Harrold chapter, C. of C., were guests. Mrs. J. H. Randall, director, presented the program, which included a talk on Jefferson Davis by George Marshall Jr., president of the C. of C., and musical selections by Margaret Ann Turner. The president, Mrs. F. C. Randall, presented little Martha Ansley, mascot of the chapter. Winners in the essay contest were announced and medals were awarded to Ben Worthy for first place and Dorothy Greene for second.

Covington chapter, Mrs. C. B. Childs, president, features an outstanding speaker on each program. Recent guest speakers were Dr. Sidney Gates, who spoke on Charleston, and Mrs. L. K. Rushing, president of Georgia League of Postmasters, who spoke on "The Siege of Vicksburg." Hostesses were Mesdames Ola Malone, E. B. Nelson, D. L. Bolton, C. B. Childs and Misses Della Robertson and Mellie Pitts.

Mrs. High Elected By Brunswick Club.

Mrs. Phil Ringel, president of the Eighth District Federation of Clubs, presided at a recent meeting of Brunswick Woman's Club and named the following officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. S. L. High; first vice president, Mrs. Hubert Lang; second vice president, Mrs. Phil Ringel; recording secretary, Mrs. W. F. Crandall; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. E. Hight; treasurer, Mrs. C. H. Ellis Jr.; parliamentarian, Mrs. G. V. Cate; custodian, Mrs. Bertha Nathan.

Composing the board of directors are Mesdames C. H. Leavy, Norman Way, J. B. Avers, C. L. Van Diviere, J. M. Wooten. Plans were discussed for a large tea to be given in May when the program will be in charge of Mrs. Norman Way and the social features directed by Mrs. W. F. Crandall.

Atlanta Council P.-T. A. Outlines Plans for Vacation Reading

Mrs. R. W. Alger outlines in the following letter plans for vacation reading clubs:

"The time has come again to plan for the summer vacation reading program as conducted by the co-operation of the principals and teachers and as sponsored by the Atlanta Council of Parents and Teachers through the home education chairman:

"'It is not difficult to interest Miss Mary Frances Cox of the boys and girls department of the library, she says:

"It is not difficult to interest children in books during the summer time if, in advance of the vacation season, teachers, principals, librarians, and parents plan to make attractive books accessible. Each year the boys' and girls' department of the library compiles special lists of the books to be read by each grade. A book which is read for credit must be chosen from these lists or must be a substitute suggested by the librarian. As soon as school is out, the boys' and girls' room at the main library and all the branch libraries will begin registration for the Vacation Reading Club. All children who wish to join thereafter must register before the end of the first week in July. Awards will be made as soon as possible after school opens in September.

"'If a child's reading ability is below average, well-directed summer reading will help him to catch up with his class and, if he already reads well, he will be forming a habit which will prove of the greatest help and pleasure to him in the future.'

"In order that all group leaders mothers, and any others interested in the operation of this program may receive complete information regarding it, special meetings have been scheduled for 10:30 o'clock at the different branch libraries as follows:

"Inman Park, Stewart Avenue, and South branches on Wednesday, May 17; Anne Wallace and English Avenue branches on Thursday, May 18; and Uncle Remus and Oakland City branches combined at Uncle Remus on Friday, May 19.

"If further information is desired, call the boys' and girls' department of the Carnegie Library or Mrs. R. W. Alger, home education chairman of the Atlanta Council of Parents and Teachers."

MISS JOSEPHINE WILLIAMS.

SWAINSBORO, Ga., May 27.—Enlisting the sincere interest of a host of friends is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Stephen G. Williams, of this city, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Josephine Williams, to George Barton Bowling, of Atlanta.

Saturday, July 1, has been chosen by Miss Williams and Mr. Bowling for their marriage, the ceremony to take place at an afternoon service at 3 o'clock at the First Methodist church here. Mrs. George Thomas King Jr., of Lancaster, S. C., sister of the brideelect, will render the nuptial music.

Miss Celestine Williams will be maid of honor to her sister and the bridesmaids will be Mrs. John H. O'Brion, of Richmond,; Mrs. Darwin W. Clanton, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Robert J. Love, of Panama City, Fla, sister of the groomelect.

Acting as groomsmen will be Wink Taylor, of Atlanta; Tom Fickett, of Atlanta, and Steve Williams Jr., brother of the brideelect.

Miss Williams will enter with her brother, Palmer Williams, of Jacksonville, Fla., who will give her in marriage, and Bill Seckinger, of Columbus, will act as best man.

After the ceremony the parents of the bride will entertain the bridal couple at a reception at their home here.

Dr. and Mrs. Barnett Honor Bridal Pair

Dr. and Mrs. Crawford Barnett entertained at a dinner party last evening at their home on Myrtle street honoring Miss Edith Harrison and her fiance, James Henderson.

The hosts were assisted in entertaining by their mother, Mrs. Elijah Brown and their sister, Mrs. Joseph Brown.

The thirty guests invited for the affair were seated at individual tables centered with crystal bowls filled with pansies. The dining room table was overlaid with a handsome cut work Chinese cloth centered with a silver bowl containing pink roses and blue delphinium. Mrs. Elijah Brown served coffee from a silver service placed at one end of the table.

Morningside P.-T. A. Honors Teachers.

A tea honoring Mrs. R. A. Radford, retiring president of the Morningside P.-T. A., and Miss Josephine Williams, and Miss Patricia madden, two of the Morningside teachers who are brideelects of the early summer, was given at the home of Mrs. Cora Elyea, 1031 Reeder circle, Wednesday by officers of the P.-T. A.

Mrs. Radford was presented a silver flower holder by Mrs. Harold Thomason, while Mrs. Wilmer Smith presented gifts of bonbon dishes to Miss Williams and Miss Madden in the name of the Morningside P.-T. A.

The Mothers' Chorus rendered two numbers with Mrs. Elyea at the piano and Mrs. D. C. Meredith accompanying on the violin.

Mrs. Byron Mathews Honored by P.-T. A.

Mrs. Byron Mathews, retiring president of Girls' High School P.-T. A., was honored by the faculty and local unit Wednesday for her 21 years of service to child welfare. In behalf of the association Mrs. A. A. Watson presented Mrs. Mathews with a silver comport.

The executive committee gave Mrs. Mathews a vase of 21 red roses. Mrs. J. Elmer Slider in making the presentation paid tribute to Mrs. Mathews as a leader, and for her loyal and unselfish service to the P.-T. A. movement. The gift from the faculty was a blue pottery bowl and the presentation was made by Mrs. Margaret Belle Isle Clegg.

Girls' High Glee Club sang several numbers. New officers were installed by Mrs. P. A. Rich, president of Atlanta Council. They are: Mrs. J. T. Cagle, president; Mrs W. P. Dillin, vice president; Mrs. C. D. Hancock, secretary; Mrs. H. H. Allen, treasurer; Mrs. R. V. Davis, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. Elmer Slider, parliamentarian; Mrs. W. E. McKamey, historian, and Mrs. M. W. Stalling, auditor.

Decatur Council Reviews Projects

All eight Parent-Teacher Associations were well represented at the meeting of the Decatur council on May 24, at Decatur Girls' High school, Mrs. W. R. Williamson presiding.

The six council chairmen gave yearly reports, which enumerated many worthwhile projects.

Highlights in the local association's work were given. They showed that the needs of their schools had been supplied. An outstanding effort of the elementary P.-T. Associations has been the forming of Boy Scout Cub Packs. These result in good character training for the younger boys. All the associations continue in their work of beautifying the school grounds, and adding books to the libraries.

The resolutions in regard to the state schools' financial condition and paying of teachers were indorsed.

The following officers for 1939-40 were installed: Mrs. A. B. Burrus, president; Miss Daisy Frances Smith, first vice president; Mrs. C. N. Kell, second vice president; Mrs. W. F. Tabor, secretary; Mrs. C. E. Flowers, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Robert McCurdy, treasurer; Mrs. J. E. Nunnally, parliamentarian; Mrs. Walter Dowman, historian.

As a means of making a college study more universally appealing, girls in the physical education department's folk dancing class at the Georgia State Woman's College in Valdosta, write natives of foreign lands seeking information about their dances and customs. The information obtained, they dress dolls in native costumes to maintain atmosphere. From left to right, above, Ruth Dixon, of Baxley; Mary Wendall Williams, of Fitzgerald, and Frances Williams, of Cordele, show the dolls they have dressed.

World Touring on a Dance

By LEE ROGERS.

Joe College and his best girl, Jane, have the unfailing habit of regarding all studies as being dull, uninteresting and a waste of time—unnecessary evils that always bob up to spoil the fun which could have been had at the campus emporiums of sweet drinks and sweeter sundaes.

Occasionally some bespectacled Phi Beta Kappa will find energy to clean the book worms from the dusty volumes on the little used library shelves, and of course there are those teaching genii so endowed with that marvelous ability which keeps the lowest I. Q.'d moron from going to sleep in class.

The make-believe world that is Hollywood, once or twice a year pops up with some screwball idea of college that gives the uninitiated a slant on campus activties and classrooms, but it is difficult to imagine even the imaginative mind of filmland thinking of teaching geography, political science, economics and other college brain twisters at a dance.

Such is what has happened this spring at the Georgia State Woman's College in Valdosta. (That is one of the University System of Georgia's four-year colleges.)

Girls at the Valdosta institution of higher learning are "touring the world on a dance."

It began simple enough. Each spring the college offers a course in physical education which is officially known as Folk Dancing. Purpose of the study is to teach the dances native to the many nations of the world.

But this spring the course took an unexpected twist. And now these industrious misses are learning with their dancing all about the philosophy of Yogi, the surgery in the Dutch East Indies, engineering in Denmark, journalism in China, commerce in the Philippine Islands, text books of Iraq, and recent automobile inventions in Switzerland.

Folk dancing is still the main aim of the course, but these extra-curricula studies are what really has made Jane and her friends forget Joe and his chums and begin paying attentoin to studies.

Seeking additional and more up-to-the-minute information about the dances native to the countries of the world, Miss Elizabeth McRee, director of the physical education department, had her students write to people in foreign nations for the desired data about dancing.

Dancing wasn't all the foreign correspondents wrote about in their letters of reply. Strangest reply of all perhaps was one Miss Viva McGeachy, of Ousley, Ga., received from Rene E. Louwers, of Brussels, Belgium.

"I am very sorry to advise you," Rene wrote, "that I cannot correspond regularly with girls of your group. I have not at all the American political point of view and I am afraid it would be not welcomed in your country to express Fascist opinions."

Regardless of political opinions, it seems hard to believe any normal young man, at home or abroad, would refuse the correspondence of a group of beautiful Georgia peaches.

Viva sought to straighten the young man out and to explain the American idea regarding the freedom of speech and opinion but Rene's letters stopped whn he seemed to find entirely incomprehensible the American point of view.

In much lighter vein was a letter from a young Canadian who readily joined the group of foreign instructors. A portion of the first lesson from him follows:

"We (Canadians) are quite Americanized, though we have some difficulty explaining to Englishmen that we are not exactly Americans and to Americans that we are not exactly English. . . . I guess we are just mongrels. We chew gum but we choose our flavours (not flavors) carefully; we play football but we call it rugby, and true to the British principles we do not permit interference in our rugby rules; we drink coffee but do not object to tea at 4 o'clock once in a while; eastern gentlemen wear English derbies and spats in the winter, but the well-dressed woman likes to know that her styles come from Fifth avenue, New York."

Miss Patsy Brewster, of Valdosta, recipient of the letter, admitted Mr. Canada had her stumped on replying to this letter in kind.

The letters which sought dancing information have brought back college educations of the kind students take in large, subconscious doses. The replies are from men and women in widely scattered occupations and in odd corners of the world.

The Valdosta students don't always know they are pronouncing their foreign instructor's name correctly, but regardless of the pronunciation, if they spell the names correctly they think "teacher" should have no complaint.

Take Abdul Hamid Kadhim, whose home is Baghdad, Iraq. Kadhim is one of the letter-writing instructors of these Georgia girls. His profession is writing textbooks for the schools of Iraq.

Then there is a Krishnalal J. Shridharani, of Kathiavad, India, a pupil of Mahatma Gandhi, a student of the Yogi philosophy and and author of books on Indian and her problems.

The majority of these new "faculty" members laud the college girls for beginning this project of seeking information by direct mail. They believe it will make for better understanding and international good-will.

Henrietta Tillman, G. S. W. C. freshman from Register, Ga., has received many letters from Benito H. Lopez, of Manila, who always finds a paragraph to express the opinion that "with the totalitarian nations such as Italy, Germany and Japan grabbing anything they can get hold of, it is about time that the American army and navy show these nations the good old dollar can still build an armament equal to any nation."

Charles Rinhold, of Geneva, Switzerland, who invented the oil gun used for lubricating cars, has sent the girls snapshots and newspapers from his homeland.

From Kowloon, across the bay from Hongkong, Great Britain's Chinese city, Lester H. Lai, a newspaper reporter, writes about Chinese dances and the Sino-Japanese war.

Lopez, the Fillipino who advocated American matching the arms of the foreign powers, described himself as president of: Lopez Enterprises Co., Inc.; Laong Laan Tennis Club; Philippine Society for Chamber Music, and University of Michigan Alumni Club.

Other corresponding instructors write from France, Germany, Australia, England and Norway.

Where were the names and addresses obtained? Miss MaRee, the instructor, got them while she was a resident of the International House in New York city.

Snapshots, samples of cotton and tobacco, newspapers and magazine, and even clothes, have been exchanged by the college girls and their foreign teachers. With the aid of the pictures and illustrated folders and books, the G. S. W. C. girls have dressed dolls in the dancing costumes of the various countries and use them as models in mapping dancing programs.

Of course the information has been of value in the dancing class. But the final examination did not put an end to this study. The girls are still corresponding with their instructors who are now close and fast friends, they hope.

Miss College has found a study that is "exciting."

Dr. Frank R. Reade, president of the South Georgia College, is tickled "pink" over the success of this folk dancing course. So are the Board of Regents, and it a safe bet this is one course the new students will look forward to next year.

After all, Phi Beta Kappas are not the only ones who learn something at college. And the sundae parlors and the juke joints are not the only rooms that our jitterbugging college girls and boys find entertaining. G. S. W. C.'s dancers have proven that.

At the annual G. S. W. C. May Day festival in Valdosta, students have an opportunity to demonstrate their knowledge of folk dancing in the winding of the May poles, done in accordance with the old English folk tradition.

Georgians Discover Georgia

By JONATHAN DANIELS.

The author of "A Southerner Discovers the South" describes the remarkable fact-finding movement through which a quarter million Georgians in their everyday Main street organizations, are examining the seamy side of their state's civic, cultural and economic life. By the wide distribution of their findings they are tryng to make Georgia a better place for all its people to live in—and, besides, they are providing an example of democracy revitalized for other communities which are complacent about, or prone to detour around, their Tobacco Roads. The following article is reprinted from a recent issue of "Survey Graphic."

In Georgia the most important thing may be happening since Sherman marched through. For Georgia itself is preparing to march. The stimulus is a citizens' fact-finding committee which, in a year and a half, has turned Georgia squarely face to face with Georgia problems. Beyond that, less directly perhaps, this unique agency has served with presidential assistance to bring the south face to face with the problems of the south. As a result of this work Chancellor Philip Weltner, of the University System of Georgia, believes the state may even "quit her dull, halfwit ways for public intelligence and good will." And such a result from such an effort might also be achieved in other states in the south—even in other sections of the country.

With complacency, Georgians had long sung the slogan, "It's Great to be a Georgian." But complacency feeds few children and eradicates no hookworms. Away from the great houses of the well-to-do on Pace's Ferry road in Atlanta, Georgia, fell off quickly to slums in the city and a wide encircling rural poverty—a poverty too full of ignorance and disease, of economic exploitation and political folly, a poverty in which the stronger robbed the weaker and the weaker cheated the stronger because there was not enough for both of them in a land which with wisdom might produce plenty for all.

The south is not the only region where pride has been quick and patriotism sensitive and problems as often denied as faced. But I think that Georgia in its citizens' fact-finding movement has developed the wisest and most promisng technique yet disclosed among us sensitive southerners for making us aware of the sad and disturbing as well as the good and beautiful in our lives.

The formula of this stirring procedure in an almost rigidly traditional state is disarmingly simple: It is, first, that Georgians will take the facts about themselves more readily from those who are native participants in their civilization than from itinerant reformers whose intentions may be excellent but whose own sense of superiority is at least equal to their good will; and second, that among Georgians, the facts about Georgia will be taken with more credence and less fuss from the great conservative middle class of Georgians. It is that group which makes up the membership of the 16 sponsoring organizations of men and women which in separation (too often in utter and self-satisfied separation) exist in every American state and in almost every American community, but which in awakened co-operation are the body and strength of the Georgia fact-finding movement. Rotarians have learned that they are not merely Rotarians but concerned Georgians; and federated women in the movement act in awareness of facts which ladies too long were expected to ignore. In Georgia I suspect a revolutionary phenomenon; a conspiracy of the comfortable for the community.

The faith behind the movement is simple, also, but significant. It is belief in the ultimate wisdom of informed self-government. A study issued by the committee began with the sentence: "Education does not work in a vacuum." Neither does the citizens' fact-finding committee. It works in Georgia, among Georgia people. In the midst of Georgia prejudices which sometimes and so terribly have been stirred into Georgia anger. And to definite goals for Georgia. This does not mean that the committee is a conventional pressure group pushing a fixed program. But neither is the committee coldly scientific in its attitude. Its authorities have not hesitated to point out what they believe to be the difference between a promise and a plague. And gradually under their pointing, thousands of Georgians are discovering that promise is not served by refusing to admit plague's existence. No one state holds all the need for that discovery.

And today I have a suspicion that Arthur Heyman II of 1271 Oxford road, N. E., Atlanta, is not only the important Georgia mind but the mind also in which lies the hope of Georgia—and beyond Georgia of the south. I do not know Arthur. I don't know his age. I do know that last year he was in the sixth grade in the Atlanta public schools though by now he may have been promoted, as he undoubtedly deserved to be, to the seventh. But I am sure that his is the receiving mind and that what is going into his head may remake the south.

Long before Arthur was born, Atlantans like himself, proud of the big city which sprawled out along Peachtree street in the direction of the metropolis, had been reading the patriot-warming advertisements which the Georgia Power Company spread across the state, "The Empire State of the South," and the proud boast, "It's Great to Be a Georgian." Politicians echoed these slogans in all the 159 counties where 159 sets of officeholders were sure of it. And children in poor schools for whom teachers had begged copies of the power company's posters wrote it into themes. But Arthur Heyman II is the child of change. And it was as a disturbed Georgian that Arthur wrote last year to the citizens' fact-finding movement:

"I was in a debate at school last Friday, the subject of which was, 'Resolved: That Georgia offers more to the home seeker than any state in the Union.' I was on the negative side. I really thought Georgia was the best state and was very surprised when I read the information from the papers prepared by your committee. I just wanted to let you know that these were very helpful to me. Incidentally our side won. . . ."

And I suspect it was not a victory easily accepted even by those who won it. Georgia is not the only state, nor the south the only region which has devoted itself almost exclusively to viewing the pleasanter aspects of its life. But as one such state in one such region, Georgia needed this movement which Georgians have brought into being.

In a sense the Citizens' Fact Finding Movement began at a dinner in the Ansley hotel in Atlanta on August 6, 1937, to which came the heads of 16 state-wide organizations to face the strange, but in the south not unfamiliar, paradox of great poverty beside great resources, of carelessness beside vast pride. But the facts which afterwards they began to report had been long growing. And fortunately beside the disturbing facts below the pleasant surface of Georgia life there had been growing also,

Skating Through Their Business

By BILL MUNDAY.

Everyone who attained the age of ratiocination is thoroughly cognizant with the fact that it requires electricity and a plethora of paraphernalia, including human beings, to transmit and receive telegrams. But few, perhaps, realize that in their speedy journeys hither and yon roller skates are required.

Yes sir, it's a fact. With the idea paramount that the "wire message must go through" with not a split second lost, lads and lassies on rollers are dispatched scampering from one end of the operating room to the other, darting, weaving and speeding with the agility of a Red Grange or a Buck Flowers.

Quite a position! Pounding on the tiny wheels for pay and not on exhibition tours, either—whereas others less fortunate are compelled to shell out coin of the realm for what generally is known as sport.

Per example, consider an Atlanta operating room, third largest distribution point in the world, surpassed only by New York and Chicago in one-two order and leading such cities many times larger, such as Los Angeles, St. Louis, London, Rome and Berlin. Here an average of 2,250,000 telegrams are channelled on an average monthly.

And with such celerity that a greenhorn, on inspection, found himself amazed, dumbfounded.

"Yes," Paul Norris, assistant to the traffic manager, explains, "we operate on a split-second basis. To us a split-second is far more valuable than to a track man seeking a world's record.

But our operating room is so enormous and ingoing and outgoing telegrams must be transferred from one department to another with the most negligible loss of time, runners would not be fast enough. So, several years ago we conceived the idea of the roller skaters.

"You see, when messages to be sent are received over pneumatic tubes from our main and 18 outlying offices they are removed and placed on a slow-moving belt that passes in front of several route clerks. They determine the proper routing for each particular telegram and place it on a fast belt, moving to a drop located in the most strategic spot in the operating room nearest the wire over which it will be electro-pigeoned to its destination.

"There the skater's duties begin. Being familiar with all circuits, he or she snatches it and races to the proper wire where it is put in front of the sending operator.

"In the case of telegrams received for delivery here, the reverse order is true with exceptions. An incoming message is pasted on the blank by the operator, stamped for time and then laid on a fast-traveling triangular belt, passing along the top of the operating table. Through a system of automatic relays, it eventually reaches a slow-moving belt that passes the skaters and they shoot it by tube or wire to the branch office nearest the address on the telegram."

On one occasion the greenhorn observed that the procedure was not being followed. He noticed certain epistles were picked up by the skating ensemble without being put on the belts, and they seemed to be scuttling much faster than usual.

Puzzled, he inquired why.

"Oh," declared Mr. Norris, "they are handling what we call class messages, urgent, so to speak—death or news pertaining to perishable goods or fluctuating stocks—which sometimes I imagine are a deal more perishable."

"Strange thing about our skaters," N. W. Hendrix, superintendent of the local, laughs, "one would think that riding on their feet eight hours a day would suffice. But—listen—recently a new rink was opened here and the proprietor asked me to invite them out to the opening. 'Well,' I surmised, 'I don't think they desire to be placed in the category of a postman taking a walk on his holiday.' The matter was dropped forthwith.

"Huh," and he chuckled, "Some of our folks attended the premiere and to a man and girl there enjoying actively all the fun were everyone of my skating crew not on duty."

Fascinating—a tour through the third largest telegraph plant on this globe. Especially to a greenhorn, whose only knowledge of electricity was confined to a degree in law at the University of Georgia, which was framed in the archives and has never been used.

For one thing, he learned that electricity grows fatigued sometimes just as does a boy who runs around the corner.

"In a relay race," Mr. Norris points out, "one man will run a quarter of a mile, then hand the baton to another who follows the same routine and then to another, ad infinitum. Each at the end of his 440 dash is tired. So it is with electricity. After so long a jaunt it shows wear and tear and needs aid. So we have a repeater, a "new man," who enters the race.

Now the repeater is a small instrument—but Mr. Norris or some other electrical expert should be called on for an explanation of its ramifications.

Then there is the ohm device, the ohm being the resistance of passage of electricity by a conductor. Through this system should a break occur on the line between two points, right here in Atlanta it could be discovered within a few poles. For example, the resistance between Atlanta and Macon was 100 ohms and suddenly it would be ascertained that it was only 50. Then technicians here would know that trouble occurred midway between the two cities and the nearest line force—these are stationed in near-by towns throughout the country—would be notified.

Now these multiplex machines are unique. Because of their almost human intelligence—certainly more infallible in their everyday life—four messages can be sent and four received over one wire at the same time.

How? They work with such rapidity that one operator either way could not manipulate them.

"All by signal," Mr. Norris says, "Operator A here, to illustrate, is sending to Operator A in St. Louis while Operator A there is wiring to Operator A here; Operators B, C and D, in the respective cities, are following the same course.

"Well, words going each way are dispatched alternately and the messages to all eight are gathered in without interference with each other.

"The telegram must go through!" While the telegraph company utilizes power furnished by the Georgia Power Company it is prepared to meet any emergency in case some act of Providence or other cause should momentarily disrupt the company's service. It has in reserve its own plant, which could be turned on effectively instantaneously in the case of unforeseen interruption.

Direct trunk circuits connect Atlanta with 69 commercial centers in the United States and in addition there are 271 other direct wires with towns and cities in the southeast. Nearly 1,000 persons are employed here with a pay roll annual of $1,238,900.

The building here is erected on the exact spot where 50 years ago stood the Georgia state capitol, and incidentally the company pays the state $41,790 a year in taxes.

Despite the fact that all the employes are kept so busy, they still find time for a laugh or a tear. Strange messages come through often.

The other day one read, "Isasiah 9:6." Baffled, the recipient telephoned the company for elucidation.

"Checking our Bible," Mr. Hendrix said, "we translated the wire as follows: 'For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given.'"

"I expect many an irate father has waxed angrily as did the pater in this one," he smiles. "The wire read, 'No mon, no fun, send som, your son.' The terse reply, 'Dear lad, too bad, so sad, your dad.'"

Skating for pay and not for fun. Misses Virginia Banks and Joyce Beard scurry through the telegraph operating room with messages that must go through without the loss of a split second.

even if more slowly, a discontent with the complacency about them among people somewhere nearer the top.

A dozen years before the dinner at the Ansley, the legislators of Georgia when they went to inspect the plant of the University of Georgia were met not with obsequious wheedling for a little larger appropriation but with banners flaunted by pretty young Georgians which carried the disturbing legend: "Georgians: First in Pride, Last in Performance." If the incident was a shock to the statesmen the result was no immediate revolution in Georgia life wrought by electrified Georgia legislators. Such a revolution (if possible in a body in which representation is based on a multitude of counties scarcely able to support their officeholders, not to speak of their school-teachers), is still in the future. But look back over a year and a half and see what has been done.

It is only necessary to count the organizations represented at that first dinner, arranged by young, vigorous Josephine Wilkins, president of the Georgia League of Women Voters, at the request of the others present, to recognize that nothing radical was contemplated by that company. They came from such men's luncheon clubs as have sometimes seemed the small town citadels of the status quo, the Lions, the Civitans, the Rotarians, the Kiwanians, the Exchange, and their new feminine counterparts, the Pilots. Beside them sat the ladies representing the organized respectability of the Georgia Parents and Teachers, the Federated Church Women, the Library Association, the Federation of Women's Clubs, the Association of University Women, the Home Demonstration Council, and the Business and Professional Women. There were gentlemen from the Georgia Press Association and the Georgia Education Association. Among those present was W. C. Henson, lawyer of Cartersville, who had long been interested in the idea which the dinner was to make a movement. Nearly half of them came from little towns. That dinner was only the first of a continuing series held every month. Alternately in Atlanta and Macon, gathered the heads of the organizations which made the group from which came the reports, carefully prepared from the first and better written as the work proceeded. So they began to stir thinking about Georgia, on the basis of incontrovertible facts about Georgia, in the heads of Arthur Heyman II and thousands of older Georgians from the capitol in Atlanta to the county seats, to people as often puzzled as pathetic in the towns and on the land of a state in which pride buttered few corn pones.

In September the process of telling Georgia about itself began quietly enough. Emily Woodward, whose "Empire" has seemed to Georgians an answer to Erskine Caldwell's "Tobacco Road," presented the diverse details of Georgia's past and present. Then the late Dr. Charles Herty directed the assembling of the facts on the state's natural resources. But by the time the report on agriculture, prepared under the direction of Dean Paul W. Chapman, of the State College of Agriculture, had been spread across Georgia in November, the idea must have been growing that there was plenty for Georgians to think about short of perfect pride in Georgia. The state was given credit for predominance in peanuts (in many other things also), but it was also given reason to be disturbed about people caught in a process like the erosion of the land. The reports continued on industry and commerce, on health, on education, on public welfare. And not only Arthur Heyman II began to wonder whether Georgia was the undoubted best state in the Union.

One country editor grumbled that the fact finders must be talking about Georgia in the Caucasus, not the Georgia of his home and his delight. But grumbling was not the general reaction. Beyond the copies of the report which went to the five thousand local units of the 16 sponsoring groups for dissemination and discussion of the facts among their 250,000 members, there came in over 7,000 other requests for the reports. Georgia may have been disturbed to hear, but definitely Georgia was not disinclined to listen. Indeed, by the time the movement came to make its report on the Georgia penal system, a subject which book and movie about Georgia chain gangs had once charged with emotion, increased demand made it cheaper to print than mimeograph the able and enlightened report of Tarleton Collier, columnist on the Atlanta Georgian, and the others which followed it. Printed as neat pamphlets, the reports advanced in quality as well as in appearance and in circulation. Beyond the bare facts of the first reports, Georgians learned in successive inventories, which avoided no explosive possibilities in the facts, about their taxes, their political system, about their relationship to the federal government and about the religious, civic and social forces in their state. To this hour no professional patriot or professional politician has attacked either the truth or the good intention of this most amazing experiment in adult education which may profoundly alter the "dull, half-wit ways" of a once uninformed, even uninterested, democracy.

The last of the 12 reports on the various aspects of Georgia life was published in August, 1938. That meant completion of the task of the inventory determined upon at the dinner in August, 1937. But it definitely did not mean completion of the movement's activities. There was time to hear from the people, and the people clearly indicated they wanted more. Deliberately the representatives of the sponsoring organizations after these months of inactivity—or really several quiet months of planning—determined to continue its fact finding using a series of reports on a subject which has been controversial throughout the south. Directly so far as Georgia is concerned, it means to face the by-now-famous Economic Problem No. 1. Arrangements have already been made to secure 15,000 copies of the report of the National Emergency Council on the Economic Conditions of the South. These copies will come to the Citizens' Fact Finding Committee in the 15 separate sections of that report and not in the complete, now familiar, yellow pamphlet. And each month four sections will be sent out, adequately annotated from the earlier Fact Finding reports to show the situation in Georgia alone in regard to the general problem presented in the report for the whole south.

Such a course may bring the national report around full circle from a beginning in Georgia to an end in the service of Georgia people. There is a story hard to verify but also hard to escape, that the President's famous letter in which he described the south as Economic Problem No. 1 and called for the report upon its situation was itself a result of the Georgia Fact Finding Movement. At its best, the story goes that a young representative of the Department of Agriculture traveling through Georgia was amazed, when he talked to ordinary folk in the Georgia fields, at the clarity and the understanding of their answers to his questions about Georgia agricultural conditions. He had never heard of the Georgia Fact Finding Movement but he recognized some influence which was carrying facts to the people. He asked about it. And the people who repeated its information were not sure about the movement themselves. They stood beyond the printed and mimeographed reports in the realm of the oral dissemination of the information in them. They only knew that there was some kind of a fact finding committee working in the state.

The traveler from Washington investigated. He found out about the monthly dinners in Atlanta and Macon, where at a table decorated in dramatization of the subject of the monthly report, the authority chosen earlier by the same group presents his report to it. He discovered how the reports themselves are sent out to each of the local units of the 16 organizations, the Lions Club in Valdosta, the Woman's Missionary Society in Alapaha, the Women's Club in Gainesville, to a Home Demonstration Club in Gwinnett county, to like organizations in towns little and big and in rural communities throughout the state. And in such local meetings the written report becomes the material for the spoken report and from the meeting, from the members by word of mouth as far as talk goes in Georgia, the facts flow out to the people and wide among them. The mechanics of the business and the spirit of the business excited him. And like a good field man he carried his excitement to his superiors in Washington. Beyond that story the certain fact is that Assistant Secretary of Agriculture M. L. Wilson asked that a representative come to Washington to speak on the Georgia Fact Finding Movement in connection with a series of conferences for members of the staff of the department in Washington. The ideal representative of the movement went. Josephine Wilkins is, as she insists, only one of the heads of the 16 organizations which have made the movement the effective force which it is. The strength of the movement lies in the fact that no one person, no one organization, is responsible for its success. Indeed, that success is probably due to the fact that many have made it and not one or a few. But since the days when, as a banker's daughter who, while she danced at the University of Georgia with the boys who were to be the masters of Georgia, was stirred with the importance to all Georgians of the welfare of the masses of Georgia, Josephine Wilkins has labored in the faith that if Georgians knew about their state they would make Georgia the better state it ought to be. Furthermore, at the outset of the movement the organization she heads agreed to house and handle the reports which the group secured and sponsored.

So it was Josephine Wilkins who went to Washington. Miss Wilkins greatly interested the staff of the Department of Agriculture to whom she spoke. But just as the information of the movement had been going down to the ordinary people of Georgia, information about it had been going up to the important people in Washington. So far the story is clear but there is a gap here, unpassable. Nobody can count all the influences that shape a President's mind. But it was little more than two months after the work of the movement, the necessity for its work, and the facts which it was discovering and disseminating about Georgia were described in Washington that the President called from the White House for similar information about the state of the south.

It is certainly not necessary to go into all the details of the reception in the south of the report which the President and the country received in answer to his request for the facts about Economic Problem No. 1. But it is pertient to say that the Fact Finding Movement in Georgia has certain definite advantages in carrying facts about Georgia problems to Georgians over any national effort to carry facts basic to the problems of a region from Washington to that region. Certainly this is true so far as the south is concerned. Some distrust undoubtedly was stirred in 1938. Even a Democratic President with a home for his health in Georgia apparently aroused as much resentment as agreement when, seeking "liberal" southern senators to support his New Deal program, he told Georgians how he hoped they would vote in nominating a United States senator.

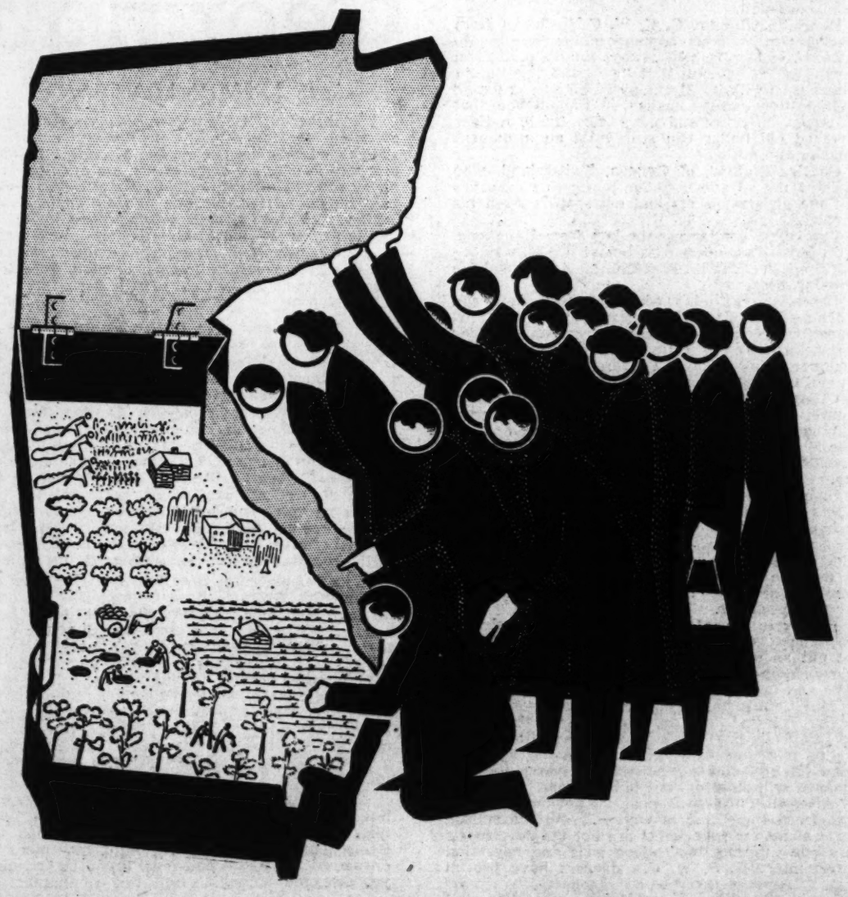

"We Georgians," a tobacco farmer in south Georgia told me in the midst of the senatorial campaign in which the President intervened in the summer of 1938, "are Georgian as hell."

And so, fortunately, is the Georgia Fact Finding Movement. And not only native; its sponsoring organizations are composed of respectable, conservative—and to use a phrase which does not exist in Georgia—middle class folk. They are the people Georgians think of when they think of Georgia. They are the people who believe in God and Georgia, decency and democracy. Most of them, although they are above deep poverty, have to work hard for a living. But they send their children to school and want better schools for them, better colleges. Their fault has been that, in preoccupation with other things, they have been complacent about problems which menaced them as well as the poorer people around them. Above all they are a people against whom no demagogue could shout, "Red," without being laughed out of office if not out of the state. For it is important to the results of what they are doing, that so far as power exists in the democratic state of Georgia, they are this power. Two hundred and fifty thousand of them belong to the organizations which are the Fact Finding Movement. And when Georgia Democrats went to the polls in aroused partisanship—also in freshly stirred sectionalism and bitter intolerance, perhaps—in the senatorial primary in last September, 321,311 voted for all the candidates seeking the senatorial nomination. When, in 1936, they voted for the President whom they later refused to allow to tell them how to vote for senator, all the voting Democrats and Republicans in Georgia totaled 292,006. Certainly not quickly will a Fact Finding Movement or any other power in Georgia eliminate the violence over personalities in superheated Georgia elections. But in dealing with the problems of Georgia, there are possibilities in an informed electorate which are just beginning to be explored. It is not inconceivable that the time might come when a Georgia legislature elected by a people who know the facts might come to Atlanta to deal with problems on the basis of the facts. It would be a different Georgia which would emerge from such a dealing.

The Georgia Fact Finding Movement has every equipment for furthering this faith that informed Georgians will make a better Georgia, except one: Money. It began on a shoestring; it continues on one. Preston Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company, contributed for his company $1,000 to letting Georgians know that there might be some faults in Georgia greatness. Harrison Jones for the Coca-Cola Company, gave $1,000. Then the contributions reported for the first year's activity (less than a dozen others) fell off to $100 to $25 to $1 and $2. Only by the interesting method of counting extended credit for printing as an asset could the receipts for work of the whole impressive activity of the first year be added up to $4,758.18. So much accomplishment with so little money was, of course, possible only because so many gave so much in time and labor. All the heads of all the organizations have attended the monthly meetings in Atlanta and Macon at their own expense. Each sponsoring organization has borne the cost of distributing the report to its own members. The authorities who prepared the reports and those who have circulated them have done so as labor of love in the service of Georgia.

But love and $5,000 will not carry on the work that needs to be done. The movement could use $30,000 very nicely during the next 14 months; $10,000 in grants from foundations for Georgia's submerged group; $10,000 in goods and services from Georgians who need about all they get; and $10,000 in cash from wealthy Georgians interested in the welfare of Georgia. With this and continued labors for love, and the continued assistance of some NYA and WPA workers, the movement could go on in increasing effectiveness. The information is going to the people; they want it. But a little more generous giving on the part of more wealthy Georgians might indicate a greater interest in the welfare of the state, at the top of the state. The co-ordinating committee, made up of the representatives of all the sponsoring organizations, adopted a plan for the coming year which could be carried out with grants of $10,000 from foundations matched by gifts from within the state to a like amount. Here is a southern fact from the experience of the Fact Finding Movement: A budget based on less than one cent for each person in the state of Georgia, for a program which has as its objective the raising of the people's income 100 per cent in order to bring it up to the national average, must seek half of its financial support outside the state to be served.

The understanding of the facts about our living in the south, as in Georgia, needs—and desperately—to be spread up as well as down. There is stark want at the bottom and remoteness from it at the top. It is the task of the great rank-and-file between to bring all together in the service of the south. That, I think the Fact Finding Movement may do in Georgia; but the rich must help as well as the poor learn, if those in the middle are to succeed in their task.

CITIZENS' FACT FINDING

Here Are Some of the Facts Which the Committee Collected and Broadcast for the Consideration of Georgia Citizens:

About Education.

Georgia spends less per pupil than any state in the Union except Arkansas: $30.96.

Georgia teachers are underpaid.

School attendance is poor—nearly 15 per cent of the state's school-age children are not enrolled at all.

Georgia schools discriminate against negro children. Seventy per cent of the negro children attend one-room schools, only 19 per cent of the white children; teachers in white schools receive nearly twice the pay of teachers in negro schools; the school year is shorter for negro children.

About Religious, Civic and Social Forces.

Georgia stands among the top states in church membership.

Preachers' salaries and the value of church property in Georgia average about half the national figure.

Most rural preachers, white and negro, are absentees.

Many Georgia churches are open only once or twice a month for an hour of preaching.

Few rural churches are community centers.

Half the white and three-quarters of the negro schools have no Parent-Teacher Association.

Among the organizations having large memberships and broad programs in Georgia are the Federation of Women's Clubs (20,000 members in 350 clubs) and Georgia Federation of Colored Women's Clubs (225 clubs with "a few thousand" members); State Education Association, American Association of University Women (12 branches and 7,688 members); men's civic clubs ("nearly 8,000 members"); chambers of commerce (35 associations).

About Agriculture.

Georgia tops the list of states for production of watermelons, peanuts, pimiento peppers; stands second in peaches.

Nearly 60 per cent of the landless tenants move every year.

Of 35,000 farm homes in 18 counties, 93 per cent were one-story only; they averaged 4.4 rooms for 5.7 persons; only 24 per cent had living rooms; water was carried by hand an average of 171 feet.

Georgia ranks third among the states in farm population, second in farm tenancy, thirty-ninth in gross income per farm.

"We produce less than 1 per cent of the mules used on Georgia farms."

"Georgia has probably spent less for agricultural research than any state in the nation."

Climate and Population.

Georgia has eight of the nine climates of the United States—all except the semi-tropical climate of southern Florida.

The growing season ranges from 179 days in the Blue Ridge to 270 days in the coastal region.

Compared to the state's vast area, the population is sparse.

With 2.37 per cent of the population of the country, Georgia in 1935 received 1.4 per cent of the national income.

Two-thirds of the population is rural. Forty per cent live in families with an annual income of $403 or less.

In one decade it is estimated that 400,000 young, able-bodied Georgians left the state in search of opportunity elsewhere.

"Gone With the Wind" extras on Atlanta set, sketched by Wilbur G. Kurtz.

A Cow Is Found—a Very Special Cow —For "Gone With the Wind"

By ANNIE LAURIE FULLER KURTZ.

If I have failed to tell you anything about Mammy before this, it isn't because she is not an important person—no indeed—for in the picture, "Gone With the Wind," she is the same high-stepping, dominating character she is in the book—bossy, fussy, contemptuous of "po' white trash" and "fiel' han's"—but lovable withall.

Mammy knew what genteel manners and customs were; she knew what was proper and fitting for a young southern girl to do, and so made herself the custodian of Scarlett's conscience. When I saw her on the stage express herself by the one word, "Humph!" at the impropriety of Rhett's calling on Scarlett so soon after her husband, Frank Kennedy's death; when I watched her assert herself and win out in her argument with Scarlett over the question of her going to Atlanta unchaperoned, I felt that here was not just another actress but one with real feeling and ability.

Mammy, whose name is Hattie McDaniel, knowing I was from Atlanta, asked me if I knew Miss Mitchell, and when I told her that I did, her eyes just shone. Mammy says her father and mother were born in the south and that she is proud of the fact that she is a southerner. I am glad to have known Hattie McDaniel, for she is a real person and reminds me so much of our old mammy cook, Liza-Cal, whom we had when I was a child, that I always enjoy seeing her and talking with her.

One of the high lights of the book is when Scarlett shoots the Yankee cavalryman. We have been doing this scene this week and it is all one can ask in dramatic appeal. While watching the rehearsals I was reminded of an incident that happened back home some time ago. It was at a luncheon at the Atlanta Woman's Club shortly after the book, "Gone With the Wind," came out and everybody was talking about it—indeed they talked of little else at that time. A lady whom I knew but slightly, spoke to me of the instance of Scarlett shooting the Yankee and said that there was an occurrence of an almost similar nature in the history of her family. She said that her mother's home was on Marietta street during 1864, that the men were away at war and her mother and her aunts, then young girls, were at home alone, except for a few family servants. One day one of the negroes came running breathlessly upstairs with the startling announcement that there were three dead Yankees in the cellar.

This lady said that her mother, greatly frightened, went half-way down the cellar stairs and peeped around the corner where she saw, sprawled upon the floor, the three Yankees, not dead as described by the scared servant, but dead drunk! Realizing they would not remain in that comotose condition long, she went into the back yard, where she picked up the chop ax and again descended the cellar stairs.

Just at this point of the story, a friend came up and took the lady away, leaving me aghast! I did not remember her name and I did not know how to reach her to ask what happened and I was jittery with curiosity. It was not till two months later that I heard the outcome. I was at a wedding reception and when I saw this lady come in, I went to her at once and said, "Please tell me—did your mother chop the Yankee's heads off?"

"Oh!" she laughed, "of course she didn't—she couldn't—she dropped the ax when she saw one of them move, ran upstairs to her bedroom where she locked herself, her sisters and the servants in. There they stayed until they saw the Yankees ambling out of the yard, their voices attuned in drunken hilarity."

One night recently I gave Jack O'Conner, of the property department, a list of all the things Scarlett and Melanie found on the Yankee after Scarlett had killed him. The next day Jack was in our office with every single one of them, even to the little gold embroidery scissors and the hardtack.

"How and where in the world did you get all this, Jack?" I asked.

"Oh," said Jack with his wide Irish grin, "I just do it with mirrors."

You should see the California gourd Jack has given me as a memento. It is painted in gay colored stripes and hangs on the wall above my desk, in between the two pictures of little Nell Fuller Fambrough, my grandbaby.

"Doc" Stone, the medico on the set, is a busy man this week. He, with several qualified assistants, are dressing with bandages some 400 "deads" in preperation for the big shot down on Forty Aces next Thursday. There are about 400 wounded soldiers also who will have to be bandaged that morning. Besides the regular cast and crew, there will be 1,600 extras at work that day. It is going to be a real occasion—one of the biggest shots of the picture so far. The scene is as of September 1, 1864, when Scarlett finally reaches the car-shed and finds Dr. Meade—pleads with him to go to Melanie, but is told that he can't leave the sick and dying at the car-shed.

Mr. Fleming is back with us after a two-week rest—he is conducting the location unit while Mr. Wood is directing the one on the stage.

Mr. Gable has returned after a short absence. I have not talked with him yet, but he waved greetings to me across the set, and I don't need to be told how he spent the brief respite from studio work here, for I am sure he had a perfectly grand time working on his ranch.

One of the bit parts in the production is taken by a cow. This cow would be more conspicuous if she were eliminated from the cast, but her presence cannot but round out the picture in a highly satisfactory manner. This was the creature Scarlett picked up over Prissy's protests, during the journey to Tara from Atlanta in the old wagon.

Just any cow would not do; she had to be cast for the part, and to do this, a special inspection tour of bovine talent was necessary. This was within the province of Bill Clark, who looks after the four-legged props. Wilbur Kurtz, technical director, went with Bill as assistant talent scout. Suffice it to say, the cow was found. It had an appealing moo, and was remarkable for graces other than mere avoirdupois.

But while looking over the field, Mr. Kurtz got a side glimpse into the curious livestock industry that has grown up because of the cinema's demand for same. Some miles out, near Burbank, they visited a ranch populated by creatures that mooed, barked, quacked, baaed, crowed, gobbled, brayed and meowed! The paddock was infested by nearly every kind of canine that wags a tail. The dealer displayed his wares with a sales-talk that would have melted the hardest heart in the industry.

"This is the cow," he proclaimed, "that kicked over Mrs. O'Leary's lamp," pointing to a handsome creature ruminating in the brief twilight—"these two roosters will crow on cue—I just pop my fingers and they flap their wings and do their stunt right in the camera!—this harmless skunk has been in all the old-time comedies; too bad they don't use 'em any more—played out, I guess—this trick donkey," pointing to a sleek gray beast with trim legs and an introspective look in its eyes, "will do anything—you can even make a zebra of it!" This latter remark conjured up the spectacle of a couple of unimpressionistic paint-shop helpers at the studio "laying in" a complete set of stripes upon the bristly coat of the bewildered beast.

I suspect I have unthinkingly fallen into the way of talking in movie technique, which is not always clear to one not familiar with certain terms and expressions. On the evening that Mr. Kurtz was not with Bill Clark on the excursion mentioned above, I dropped in at a neighborhood drug store for a sandwich. The young druggist inquired politely where my husband was.

"He has gone out to look at a cow," I replied.

"A cow," he asked incredulously.

"Yes, a cow, a very special cow, a Georgia cow, a red one," I told him.

"What?" he asked again.

"You see," I tried to explain, "we are leaving early in the morning, at 3 o'clock—going out in the country 30 miles to Mesa Agoura, where the shooting begins at sunrise."

"Oh!" he said, swallowing hard, but just then some customers came in and I never had the chance to tell him any more about our sunrise location, and I am sure he thinks that we went way out in the country somewhere and shot a poor cow at sunrise, and he must be still wondering why!

Last Sunday we spent the day with Virginia Woolley in her lovely little studio home at Laguna Beach. Virginia, who was born and reared in Atlanta, has just returned from a visit to the home town and was full of news which naturally was of interest to us who have been away so long. Virginia and I went through high school together, and later she and Mr. Kurtz were classmates in Chicago at the Art Institute.

There is quite an art colony at Laguna and one can well understand why artists would choose such a spot in which to live and work, for the natural setting is both unique and charming. Their little homes, nestling in the hills, and facing the sea, bespeak an individuality of design that is intriguing to an ordinary person like myself. From every window one looks out upon small flower gardens, velvety lawns, rock walls and winding paths.

Our hostess had several friends in to meet us at luncheon, and we had a merry time talking of everything from high school days to the latest flair in fashions caused by "Gone With the Wind." We all predicted that when the picture comes out, every woman will want a corn-shuck bonnet and every man, a ruffled shirt.

Tuesday I had the whole day off and I spent it doing just the thing I've wanted to do ever since coming to California. I went to Santa Catalina Island! Of course, every sojourner to the west coast does the same thing, so there are many of you who will share my enthusiasm in the attractions of this rocky island which, at a distance, looks cold and forbidding, but upon close inspection, unfolds a rare loveliness.

The mountains look on Avalon and Avalon looks on the sea—to substitute in the well-known Byronic lines, the magic name of the ancient Arthurian stronghold. The poetic unities are not lost thereby, for the little port could not have been better named—neither could the haunting lilt of its musical namesake seem out of place, on its emerald waters and glittering strand.

Southern cooking is a much talked of subject out here now and as a consequence, I have been asked to assist in the preparation of a "Gone With the Wind" dinner which is to be given at the home of my friend, Helen Moore, in Westwood. There are a number of us involved, so let us hope the broth will not be spoiled.

Japs Are "Wearing Out," Chinese Visitor Believes

By GEORGE MacNABB.

Although still pounding away with superior equipment at the great solid hulk of China, the Japanese military machine is gradually "wearing out," believes Mrs. Lee Ting Chen, Wesleyan graduate now visiting a son and daughter who are in school in Georgia.

Wife of Lee Chen, secretary to the Chinese prime minister, Mrs. Chen believes the ready supply of food and men in China will serve to vanquish the advance of the Japanese before many more months.

A woman of rare charm and radiant personality, who speaks unhurried but perfect English, Mrs. Chen is visiting Miss Clara Parks, retired missionary to China, at Sandersville, where her young daughter is attending the public schools.

She arrived in this country a few weeks ago from Germany, where she spent about eight months with an invalid son at a hospital near the Black Forest. A keen observer and a student of people, Mrs. Chen, when asked about the reported extent of persecution in Nazi-land, said firmly, "It is all true what you hear about Germany."

"I could see nothing but fear in the faces of the German people," she declared. "They are all afraid of the government."

"Did you talk with anyone about Hitler?" she was asked.

"No one. They are not allowed to speak of the government at any time. I heard nothing said against Hitler in Germany, but I could see it and feel it everywhere."

Scarcity of food was the outstanding item noticed by the Chinese gentlewoman on her visit to Germany. "When I wanted to buy something," she said, "usually no one had it."

The purchase of food is limited by the government, Mrs. Chen said. Only a quarter-pound of butter per week is allowed any one person, and one is permitted to have only two or three eggs a week. "The food is exceedingly poor in quality, too," she said. "Apples which in China we would throw away, they sell at high prices in Germany."

She recalled the war scare during the trouble with Czecho-Slovakia last September. At the hint of war, the food supply was almost entirely cut off, and although she had money to buy it she was faced with actual want because food could not be secured.

"However," the Chinese woman said, "I do not believe Germany will have war in the near future, because they cannot stand a war. They are not ready. And the people do not want it. They are still trying to get over the World War."

In the trip to America, during which she was forced to ride third-class because of the overcrowded condition of the ship bearing Jewish refugees from the Nazis, Mrs. Chen talked with a once-wealthy Jewish gentlewoman who had been stripped of every possession. At one time mistress of great estates, the Jewess was reduced to rags, and hopes of finding something in America.

Mrs. Lee Ting Chen, wife of secretary to the Chinese Prime Minister, visiting Georgia, gives views on international situation.

She described the birth of a Jewish baby on board the ship. The baby was born a few hours out of New York, and the Jews gathered to praise God because the baby could then become an American citizen.

"That tells the story of Germany in a word," Mrs. Chen said. "There were those people, born in Germany, speaking only German, rejoicing because a baby had been born into American citizenship."

Interviewed at Oxford while visiting her son, who is a student at Emory at Oxford, Mrs. Chen was accompanied by a friend of the family, Jay Chao Dunn, a graduate student at Emory University in Atlanta.

Mr. Dunn, who is studying political science at Emory, is preparing a thesis on "The Open Door," covering American-Chinese relations. He concurred with Mrs. Chen's belief that the Japanese are gradually weakening, and mentioned a letter which he had received from Mr. Chen in China expressing the same opinion.

Asked what he intended to do on his return to China, the 33-year-old student smiled broadly and said, "I shall go back and kill the bull in the American way among my people." His questioner was puzzled until Mr. Dunn referred to the American college student's love of "bullology." It was then clear Mr. Dunn intended to "shoot the bull" in the good old American way.

"Your fried chicken," she beamed, "it is wonderful!"

She expressed a great love for Georgia and her people. "I feel at home here in Georgia more than anywhere in the world except in China," she smiled. "Your people are so nice to me. Everywhere I am treated with the utmost courtesy. I love being in Georgia."

Reminded of another Wesleyan student, Madam Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the warlord of China, Mrs. Chen said, "Oh, yes, Madam Chiang is a close personal friend. I was at school with her in China. She is a wonderful woman."

Mrs. Chen believes Mrs. Chiang is largely responsible for the immense success of General Chiang, because the Wesleyan graduate, who converted her husband to Christianity, is constantly pushing him ahead. In this belief Mr. Dunn also concurred.

"China owes an everlasting debt of gratitude to Georgia and Wesleyan College," the Emory student declared, "because Mrs. Chiang has helped to make the general the greatest military leader China has had in 500 years.

"It is funny," he smiled, "that Japan attacked China in order to prevent our people from organizing into a strong united front. Yet that is exactly what General Chiang is now able to do, because the war has brought it about. The Japanese are helping to accomplish exactly what they tried to prevent."

Mrs. Chen will remain in Georgia for several months, awaiting the recovery of her son in Germany, so that he, too, may come to Georgia to attend school. Now in Sandersville, she plans to attend the commencement of Wesleyan College on May 28.

Afield With a Naturalist

By GEORGE DORSEY.

Nature in the Summer Camp

For several weeks I intend to include some material on nature study in the summer camp, which I hope will be of value to those who are planning camp programs. I believe that the organized summer camp constitutes an important field of education, and I am delighted to see the movement growing the way it is, particularly in the south.

I believe that the nature study counselor has at once one of the most pleasant and difficult jobs in the camping program. His is an important position. The very word "camp" calls a picture to one's mind of hillsides covered with trees, of woodland streams and a lake fringed with rushes—a place in which to enjoy one's self to the utmost. Such a place is inhabited by numbers of birds, mammals, insects, fish, wild flowers, and other living things that offer a wonderful opportunity for cultural education.

If we can get a child to love the beauty of the out-of-doors, to want to learn the names of the things found there, and to understand the greatness and minuteness of all creation, we shall have given him an outlook on life through which he can enjoy life on the earth to a much fuller extent, and he shall have come away from camp refreshed in body, mind and soul.

There are so many things in nature to be learned that the new instructor will probably feel rather helpless about it all. But it need not be so hard to do. One need not try to handle an elaborate nature study program in camp, for a simple one is far better. Learn but ten common trees, and you will be able to teach them to your pupils. It is not how much you know that counts as well as how you go about teaching what you do know. Put yourself in the pupil's place and try to see things from his point of view. Once you have gained his interest, the rest will be easy. Do not be afraid to tell him, "I don't know that." Try to identify it with him, and so you will both learn together.

There are a few points that it would be well to consider: Explain things in clear, simple words that your pupils can easily understand. Avoid scientific terms whenever possible. Try to find something they are familiar with to compare to new ideas. Avoid too much explanation at one time. Five or ten trees can be learned on one walk, while twenty or thirty will only cause bewilderment. Avoid giving more than one common name for any one thing.

Be enthusiastic, but don't be overpoetic, or "mushy," particularly with boys. Let them find out much of the beauty for themselves—they will! Impart to everything a strong, everyday, practical interest. Try to find novelty whenever you can. Let the pupils find things and bring them to you, and always show interest, no matter how insignificant the object may be.

If you have the ability to teach, and a real interest in children, you will succeed. And you will know what it means to be young again.

I have just returned from a week in one of Atlanta's school camps, at Camp Rutledge on Hard Labor creek. It was a most pleasant experience. These camps are a new thing for the public schools, and are a very good addition to their programs. Atlanta's school system has taken a forward step in adding them to its curricula.

This was the third of these one-week camps that I have attended. I had the honor of being included on the staff of leaders of the very first one they conducted, in October, 1937. My friend, Mrs. Thelma Coley, was camp director for the first one I attended, and Miss Emma Wesley was in charge of my second one, in October, 1938. Mrs. Coley directed this last one, which ran from the 15th to the 20th of May, ending a week ago. Both of these ladies proved themselves to be able leaders, and did splendid jobs.

This last camp was a co-operative enterprise between five schols: East Lake, Faith, Gordon, Kirkwood and Whitefoord schools being represented. Eighty-six children came from these schools, filling the camp almost to capacity. Mrs. Coley had a staff of twelve leaders, eleven of whom I observed to be very able, enthusiastic, quite hard-working, and successful in every way. The twelfth one—who had the honor of being nature study instructor—was myself, and he will have to be judged by someone else, since I would not hazard so precarious an undertaking.

Enough to say that I found these children very responsive in the nature walks we took about over the camp. We found 40 species of birds, 31 species of wild flowers, 43 species of trees and shrubs, 5 species of lizards, and two king snakes.

I believe that the lizards took first place in the affections of the boys and girls, since they were carried about on shirts and blouses, and cared for tenderly during the time we had them under observation, although I doubt if they understood any of the love that was lavished on them!

The program as a whole was well-rounded and good. It included arts and crafts, dramatics, dancing, camp newspaper work, music, games of several classifications, swimming, first aid, and many other worth-while activities. The children were given experiences that should have a high educational value.

Organized camping for children has been heralded as America's greatest contribution to the field of education. High ideals have been established for conducting camping programs. I fully believe that these school camps which I have attended have measured up to these ideals as much as they possibly could have. I look forward to what Atlanta's school camp program is going to accomplish. I am confident that it will have far-reaching results.

BOOKS - - - - - - AND THEIR AUTHORS

Month by the Sea.

MISS MINERVA'S VACATION. By Emma Speed Sampson. Reilly & Lee, Chicago. 333 pp. $1.

Miss Minerva and William Green Hill was first introduced to the young folks in 1909 and more than 400,000 copies of the first book in this delightful series have been sold. There are now 11 books on Miss Minerva's shelf. Number 11, the new member of the fun-filled books, is "Miss Minerva's Vacation."

Billy and the Major with all of the lovable characters, so well known to the readers of the earlier books, are to be found again in this new volume. A vacation of a month at the seashore with Billy, the Major, Miss Minerva and Josephine, along with their friends, is almost as good as having a vacation yourself. Many pranks and funny things are done by our young friends on this adventure, one of which is a trip to a haunted house.

The legion of Minerva fans are sure to be grateful for "Miss Minerva's Vacation." They are certain to smile continuously and laugh every little while when they hop aboard the Estes family's motor procession en route to the Rappahannock—and a glorious month by the sea.

JESSE R. PETTY.

Tale of the Dust Bowl.

THE GRAPES OF WRATH. By John Steinbeck. The Viking Press, New York. 619 pp. $2.75.

It is always a pleasure to quote Mr. Steinbeck:

"The people come with nets to fish for potatoes in the river, and the guards hold them back; they come in rattling cars to get the dumped oranges, but the kerosene is sprayed. And they stand still and watch the potatoes float by, listen to the screaming pigs being killed in a ditch and covered with quicklime, watch the mountains of oranges slop down to a putrefying ooze, and in the eyes of the people there is the failure, and in the eyes of the hungry there is a growing wrath. In the souls of the people the grapes of wrath are filling and growing heavy, growing heavy for the vintage."

The people who watch are refugees, driven by the dust out of that region that used to be known, within the memory of many now living, as "the Great American Desert." It is turning back into desert. Already it cannot produce reasonable crops, and the pioneers and their descendants are losing their farms to the banks, to mortgage companies, to "the interests." Small farms are going out, larger and ever larger holdings, operated on a factory basis, are driving them out. The farmers load their entire belongings on wagons and take them into town, selling them for what they will bring; they buy second-hand cars, for whatever they have to pay. They're going to California.

They rattle and wheeze their way across the prairies, over the mountains, across the Mojave desert, on into California. It is not an adventurous trek, like that of the forty-niners; these people do not hope for much, and what little hope they have is doomed to disappointment. It is a terrifying picture that Mr. Steinbeck has painted, and it is painted with genius: in colors that, whether vivid or drab, are carefully chosen; it is endowed with truth and with beauty. "The Grapes of Wrath" is a great novel.

But Mr. Steinbeck, perhaps he alone among contemporary American authors, could write a better one. He moralizes too much; it weakens his thesis. He is not a subtle, nor a consistent, economist—there is much that is superficial in his analysis of economic force. In dealing with human destinies he is superb; as a creator of grass-roots characters he knows no peer. He writes passages of great beauty, such, for instance, as the account of the blind, instinctive, irresistible march of the land turtle—a magnificent piece of symbolical writing. But—there is too much "behind-the-barn" language among all this beauty. Some of it, perhaps, there has to be, but a little goes a long way. We must grant that a spade ought to be called a spade; that it is wrong to call it an agricultural implement. But it is equally wrong, and for the same reason, to call it a foul, rusty piece of iron. Such language was not deemed necessary by Mr. Steinbeck 's great master, Dostoevsky. And it has not yet become the fashion to say that Dostoevsky is lacking in realism. It has, on the other hand, become the fashion to use obscenity as a means to emphasis. But a literary craftsman of Mr. Steinbeck's stature does not need such means.

With minor faults and blemishes, "The Grapes of Wrath" is still a great novel.

Soong Family of China.

THREE SISTERS. By Cornelia Spencer. John Day Book Co., New York. Illst. 279 pp. $2.

The greatest and most interesting family of modern times is undoubtedly that of the Soongs—sometimes called the Soong Dynasty, or the Soong Six. The brothers are high in the financial control of China, and of the three sisters one is the wife of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who leads the armies and is war-time dictator over the life of the people; one is the wife of the head of the government, Dr. H. H. Kung; and one is the widow of the founder of the Chinese Republic, Sun Yat-sen. The story of these three remarkable sisters is the theme of this book, told in fiction form but wholly based upon facts. While written primarily for young people, the story holds keen interest for adults as well.

Ai-ling, Ching-ling and Mei-ling are still living and playing active parts in the drama of China today. Born in China, they all attended college in the United States, as had their father, Charlie Soong, before them. The wife of General Chiang Kai-shek was once a student at Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga. He had gone back and founded what came to be the largest publishing business in the world. His dream was that his children should do something to change and improve China. He could never have dreamed that they would change it so greatly.

Here you read of their growing up in their Chinese home, of the college years in America when they never forgot that they must learn all that would help them in their future work for their native land. And then of

New Book News

By JOHN DREWRY,
Director Henry W. Grady School of Journalism, University of Georgia

WILLIAM LYON PHELPS.

An unusually large number of distinctive biographies and autobiographies has been published during recent weeks.

Prominent on the list, both in reader appeal and literary quality, is "Autobiography With Letters" (Oxford) by William Lyon Phelps. For years, those who have attended this Yale professor's classes, heard his lectures, or read his articles and books have anticipated his personal memoir, which should more than please them.

Readers of "So Big," "Cimarron," "Show Boat," and her other works will be especially interested in Edna Ferber's "A Peculiar Treasure" (Doubleday, Doran). This new book is enjoying a wide reading and a favorable critical response.

Those who have followed Oswald Garrison Villard as editor of The Nation, or who have read his "Some Newspapers and Newspapermen" and "Prophets, True and False," will be attracted to his life story, "Fighting Years" (Harcourt, Brace), which has been compared to "The Autobiography of Lincoln Steffens."

William Allen White has written a second book on Calvin Coolidge, this one entitled "A Puritan in Babylon" (Macmillan). The Emporia editor, it will be recalled, wrote one of the best of the biographies of Woodrow Wilson—"Woodrow Wilson: The Man, His Times, and His Task."

Another political figure who is the subject of a new biography is Senator Carter Glass. This is written by Rixey Smith, his secretary, and Norman Beasley (Longmans).

Yet other worthwhile recent biographies are "Edwin Arlington Robinson" (Macmillan) by Herman Hagedorn, "Edgar Wallace: The Biography of a Phenomenon" (Doubleday, Doran), by Margaret Lane; "My Day in Court" (Scribner's), by Arthur Train, and "My Memoir" (Bobbs-Merrill), by Edith Bolling Wilson. The last two were serialized in the Saturday Evening Post.

In "My Memoir," which has become a national best-seller, the widow of Woodrow Wilson has provided that intimate personal story of the second term and retirement of the great war President which no one else could pen. Regarding her narrative which has been eagerly awaited by friends and admirers of her husband, as well as by students of history generally, she writes:

"I claim no reader's attention with the idea that I will reveal official secrets; for nothing is further from my thought. But I have revealed the truth concerning personal matters which has often been distorted by the misinformed. And if I take the public into my confidence about these matters, it is because the high office which my husband held robs them of a private character and makes me feel that they belong to history."

As indicated by this statement, the emphasis in this book is on the more personal aspects of Wilson's life. This does not preclude, however, historically significant explanations of the estrangements between Wilson and Colonel House, and between him and his former secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty.

In this day of much talk about a reduced working day and week, this extract, bearing upon how hard Wilson worked, stands out:

"I am told that the longest hours of work observed in the army training camps were those of young officers, where reveille sounded at 5:45 in the morning and the working schedule closed at 9 p. m. . . . If such a schedule were, indeed, too burdensome for healthy men in their 20s and 30s, I think the same observation would apply to the White House war-time routine. There the day began at 5. Before 6 the President was at his desk and often he was there at midnight."

The Woodrow Wilson who emerges from these pages is not the austere, dominating, schoolmaster individual depicted in some cartoons during his administration. Instead, he is a very sensitive, compassionate and human sort of person. A few sentences, chosen here and there in the narrative, illustrating this point, follow:

"Mr. Wilson enjoyed vaudeville and was a regular patron of Keith's theater. No matter how foolish the skit, he said it rested him because it took his mind off responsibilities and refreshed his spirit to see light-hearted people who 'took on no more at their hearts than they could kick off at their heels.' Particularly he enjoyed tap dancing. . . .

"After a long White House reception my husband loved to get upstairs and twist his face about as an actor does in playing character parts. His muscles were so flexible, and he had such control over them, he could make his ears move and elongate his face or broaden it at will in a perfectly ludicrous way. . . .

"He said that he appreciated . . . praise, but that it sobered his spirit to think of what was expected of him. . . . It gave him far more concern than the threats of assassination which he constantly received. . . . The only fear Woodrow Wilson knew was the fear of God should he fail in his own duty. . . .

". . . So kindling up the fire in my room we sat on a big couch and talked until the early hours of the morning. Then my husband read a chapter in the Bible and went to bed. . . ."

More than being an account of an important period in the life of Wilson, "My Memoir" is Mrs. Wilson's own autobiography. A person of excellent background and charm, the narrative of her life before meeting the President is in itself interesting. So are her typically feminine comments on the social life of the White House. For example, in one place she notes that at a cabinet dinner, she and two other wives appeared in similar dresses. "Fortunately," she writes, "the colors were different. . . . Comparing notes we found one had come from Baltimore, one from Boston, and one from New York. All were copies of a Worth gown."

Summertime Calls for Dainty Entertainment Refreshments

By SALLY SAVER.

We are getting along toward that season when it seems that practically everyone we know is getting married, being graduated, going away, returning from somewhere, having a visitor, or something. In other words, the entertainment season definitely is on. There are to be pretty teas and parties for the bride and graduate, bridge luncheons for the woman visitor, outdoor entertainments for the younger boy and girl, and evening get-togethers for a congenial mixed crowd that needs no entertainment other than a chance to sit around and talk.

Whatever kind of party you have, no matter how young or old the guests, don't forget that the refreshments you serve and the way you serve them, make or mar the party. Your guests may be cultured and high-minded, dainty and dieted, but still there's no one who will deny that everyone looks forward to party refreshments, everyone enjoys eating together. The "breaking of bread" together has a friendly, social significance in itself. Among primitive people no man will eat with his enemy, because eating with someone signifies friendship.

No doubt at least a part of the glow one gets from lunching or dining with a friend, and from serving food to one's friends, derives from this fact which seems to be elemental with the race. To be a successful hostess, which is every woman's desire, one does not necessarily have to serve elaborately. Very simple food, if attractively and appropriately served, will be welcomed and enjoyed. More important than anything else is to have the refreshments fit the occasion and the time of day when served. Obviously after-bridge refreshments in the afternoon or evening should not be heavy. On one hand they come too few hours before dinner and on the other too shortly before bedtime. Very dainty tid-bit sandwiches, a salad and drink, or instead of a salad, a dessert, is quite enough to serve for after-bridge.

Of course, if the refreshments are served at mealtime they should be substantial, balanced and should have a filling quality as well as prettiness. A luncheon menu need not be as substantial as a buffet supper menu, and a late supper need not be as hearty as a buffet served at the dinner hour.

Keeping in mind the hour when refreshments are to be served, the type of guests invited, (if young and active more substantial foods acceptable, and if all women, food can be more frivolous, etc.) you can then be as extravagant, elaborate and party-like as you please, not forgetting to take into account how many well-trained servants are available to help serve the menu you have selected.

If you have one servant or none, then your party refreshments should be chosen with an eye to keeping the number of plates, glasses, etc., to a minimum and to serving dishes that can be prepared in advance and served with as little fuss and moving about as possible after guests have arrived.

Here are presented some menu suggestions for different tpyes of entertainments. I hope you will find them helpful as you plan your warm weather entertainments:

A Bridge Luncheon.

Chilled Fruit Juice
Chicken Sandwiches De Luxe
Ripe Olives Stuffed Celery
Orange Mint Tapioca
Ice Tea or Coffee

Here's how to make

Chicken Sandwiches De Luxe.

Ingredients for 10 servings are given.

Diced raw ham, 3 cups; butter, 1-4 cup; diced cooked chicken, 3 cups; cream, 1 1-2 cups; cream sauce, 1 1-2 cups; salt and pepper; egg yolks, 3; toast, 20 slices; American cheese, 1 lb.

Cook the ham in the butter 1 minute. Add diced chicken and cream. Cook very slowly 3 minutes. Add cream sauce and seasonings, and cook slowly again for a minute or two. Add beaten egg yolks. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Cover a slice of toast with the chicken and ham mixture, add a second slice of toast and cover it with a slice of cheese. Place in a very moderate oven or under low broiler heat until cheese is melted. Serve immdiately garnished with curly endive, sections of tomato and stuffed olives.

Orange Mint Tapioca.

One or 2 egg yolks, 4 cups milk, 1-3 cup quick-cooking tapioca, 1-2 cup sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 or 2 egg whites, 1 teaspoon flavoring.

Into a saucepan put egg yolk or yolks with small amount of milk. Add tapioca, sugar, salt and remaining milk. Bring mixture quickly to a full boil over direct heat, stirring constantly. Remove from fire. (Mixture will be thin. Do not overcook.) Beat egg white until just stiff enough to hold shape. Fold hot tapioca mixture gradually into egg white. Cool—mixture thickens as it cools. When slightly cool, stir in flavoring. Chill. When chilled fold in about one cup whipped cream. Pile in sherbet glasses and garnish with sections of orange and sprigs of mint.

Suggested Menu for a Porch Supper.

Tomato Bisque
Veal Loaf Roast (Sliced Cold)
Mixed Vegetable Salad Hot Blueberry Muffins
Strawberry Fluff Coffee or Iced Tea

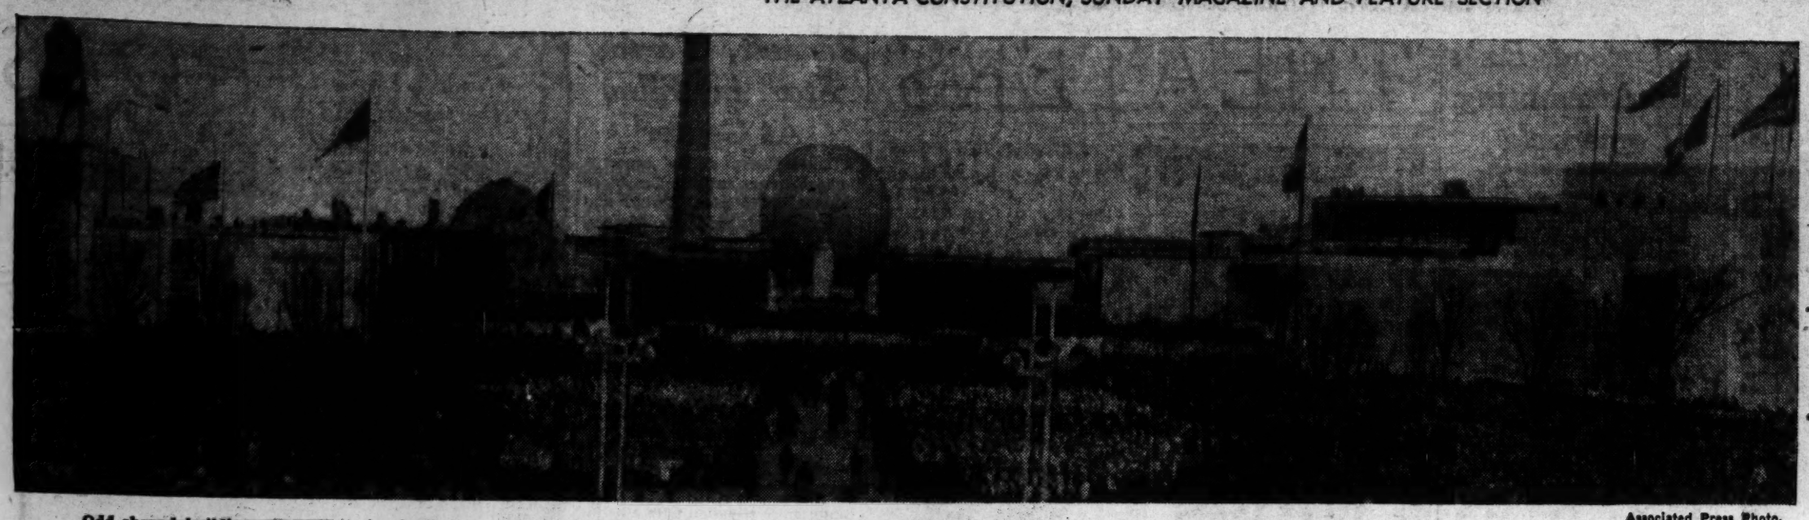

Veal Loaf Roast.

One tablespoon minced onion, 2 teaspoons butter, 1-3 cup quick-cooking tapioca, 2 1-2 teaspoons salt, dash of cayenne, dash of celery salt, 1 lb. veal—ground, 1 lb. pork—ground, 1 cup milk, 3-4 cup hot water, 4 tablespoons margarine or butter.

Brown onions slightly in margarine; combine with tapioca, seasonings, veal, pork and milk. Turn in loaf pan. Bake in hot oven 450 degrees, 15 minutes, then decrease heat to moderate and bake 30 minutes longer, or until done, basting frequently with mixture of water and butter. Chill and slice. Serves 10.

For other menus, recipes or other help in planning your party, phone or write Sally Saver, Food Editor of The Constitution.

June, the month of brides, graduates and visitors, is a month of parties and entertainments. If you want to be one of those happy hostesses who enjoys her own parties, plan the party in advance, choosing the type of entertainment and refreshments suitable to the occasion, and suited to the facilities of your household. Serve out-of-doors in summer, whenever you can. Bottom picture shows an outdoor table laid for an informal luncheon or light supper. A bowl of chicken salad; a tray of relishes, tomato and cucumber slices around edge and an assortment of olives, pickles, stuffed eggs, radishes and mint leaves in the center; cake and iced tea is the menu. Left, above, a fruit salad bowl garnished with curly endive is pretty enough for the most important party. Right, above, shows a simpler, after-bridge serving of grape juice rickey and assorted cakes.

Odd-shaped buildings, flags fluttering in the breeze—that's the World's Fair—with the huge Perishphere and Trylon, Symbol of the fair, in the center of the grounds.

Georgia Officially Goes to the Fair

By ST. JOHN BARNWELL.

"Aspiration and unity—that is the theme of the gigantic World's Fair of New York as graphically symbolized by the Trylon and Perisphere, the spire and ball," said Mrs. John W. Grant, prominent Atlantan, official representative for the state of Georgia at the opening of the fair, April 30.

Recently returned to Atlanta, Mrs. Grant described the fair and gave suggestions for short cuts to greater fair enjoyment. What to see and hear; how to dress, save time and avoid weariness are only some of the secrets for successful fair-going that Mrs. Grant pointed out.

The throbbing scene on the opening day, dominated by vivid color, was vibrant with nearly a million visitors pouring into that vast 1,200 acres recently the flat wastes of Flushing Meadows. Transformed with the magic construction of today into the wonderland of the World of Tomorrow it makes a fair four times as large as any exposition previously attempted.

Square hamburgers were being consumed, stamp collectors were busy sending post cards bearing that precious insignia of the first day, and literally thousands of camera shutters were clicking to record the wonders of the extravaganza.

Grover Whalen, president of the New Yorw World's Fair 1939, Inc., had appointed Mrs. Vincent Astor in charge of all women's work as chairman of the national advisory committee. She was aided by Mrs. Courtlandt D. Barns, regional director for the eastern states. Mrs. Astor and Mr. Whalen appointed one woman as official representative-chairman from each state to choose 100 prominent women to serve on the committee.

For Georgia, Mrs. John K. Ottley was appointed. But on the opening of the world's exposition, the fair, Mrs. Ottley, who had visited these grounds early in April, found it impossible to attend. She appointed Mrs. Grant, one of the hundred, to take her place as the official woman representative for the state.

On the afternoon of the opening day Mrs. Grant personified all Georgia at a tea given Mrs. Vincent Astor in Perylon Hall. Mrs. Grant recalls that luncheon was pleasant in the beige and green rooms of the Woman's Advisory building, open to all of the 100 women chosen from each state. There was also a visit to the advisory board's clubroom in Rockefeller Center, New York city.

"To get to the fair from New York there are many ways," Mrs. Grant pointed out. "You may go by water, taxi, private motor, subway or train. The water way is attractive. The taxi transportation is very satisfactory.

"I preferred the train trip. Leaving from the Pennsylvania Station, Long Island railway at 34th street, it took only 10 minutes for the ride," Mrs. Grant said. "The trains leave continuously and you disembark near the center of the fair grounds in full sight of the Perisphere and Trylon symbols, known as the Theme Center.

"After paying your entrance fee, instead of crossing the bridge and walking into the fair grounds, I would advise walking down the stairs marked, 'To the Bus.' There you may take for 10 cents a smooth-riding bus whose seats are long side-way affairs for easy sight-seeing. This bus ride takes about 35 minutes and covers the entire circuit of the fair grounds," Mrs. Grant explained.

"Now you have an idea of the vastness, the immense size of the fair, and can form an idea of what you would like to see and where it is located!

"Next to the gigantic proportions of the fair, the brilliance of color is impressive. If you observe the color scheme and the order in which the buildings are laid out, this very color will help you find your way around," the official representative said.

"The tremendous palette of color is applied with the greatest care as to tone. The heart of the fair is white, glistening silvery white, from which radiates color—first in pastel shades then terminated at the edge of the fair grounds in strong deep colors. To the right of the symbols is pale aqua deeping into turquoise, back of which is plaster pink graduating into tile red, merging into wine tones and deep violet. To the left front is lemon yellow intensifying in tone at the edge of the fair grounds; back of this is plaster pink shading into orange grown at the entrance into cardinal.

"Along the Avenue of Pioneers to the left the colors change from plaster blue to rich cobalt blue tones faced on the right by deeper blue. In other words the colors will help you blaze your way through this wonderland of strange structures. Remember," Mrs. Grant warned, "when you are among the buildings painted in pastel tones you are near the center of the fair grounds, but standing beside a building of rich deep tones you are near the outside.

"If you lose your sense of direction for a moment look for the Trylon's great tower which is at the center, further end of the principal avenue known as Constitution Mall. As the entire 1,200 acres are perfectly flat ground this great spire may be seen all over the fair grounds," said Mrs. Grant.

Impressed with the Perisphere, the ball part of the symbols, Mrs. Grant showed that it appears to float on a lake as lightly as a water lily on a blue pond. The great gazing ball of the future is approached by a ramp which leads to the top of this symbol of unity. Inside, the visitor sees the World of Tomorrow. There depicted is the life of a million inhabitants which is made vivid to the onlooker by music, voice description and cloud effects.

Mrs. Grant was interested in the unusual architectural forms seen throughout the fair. The absence of windows, increased use of indirect lighting and air conditioning, the lack of stair steps and top of building entrances attracted her attention. Ramps and moving stairs leading to the top of buildings impressed Mrs. Grant as being fatigue-saving and unique.

"One of the most outstanding exhibits is the General Motors building," Mrs. Grant declared. Estimated to have cost over six million dollars, this structure has the enter-from-the-top feature and is approached by a ramp, and you view the exhibit seated. Here is a good place to visit when you are weary."

Mrs. Grant continued, "The chair takes you for a ride over a quarter of a mile long, past streets and roadways of tomorrow to show the means of transportation in 1960. Each chair talks to you by means of a sound track attached to the rails."

Little folks have not been forgotten by this great huge fair. "At the Children's Center there is a large section devoted to their care," Mrs. Grant remarked. "For a small price the children may be parked in fenced portions according to age where they are looked after by trained nursery school teachers. Entertained on the latest playground equipment, short excursions into the fair buildings are made with an instructor to explain the wonders."

The child care is under the sponsorship of the Greater New York Federation of Churches and should prove a joy to parents and children alike.

"When you reach the Lagoon of Nations you are in the foreign building section," Mrs. Grant explained. "The Russian building towers over all the others. A tremendous figure of a worker decorates the top of the structure. Brilliant in red and black marble, the facade is dramatic."

The hexagonal shaped building of Turkey admits a great deal of light; in the Belgium pavilion there is a tapestry dedicated to America which says —"The United States saved Belgium from starvation during the World War."

"Save your endurance to enjoy the exhibits. The boardwalk chairs will be restful. There are also little trains to take about the grounds or a motor chair which holds three and costs $1.00 for 15 minutes.. This is not as pleasant as the boardwalk chair. As the traffic moves no faster than the average person walks the motor chair swiftness endangers your running into people. If you have distance to cover—say go out to the amusement area —you will want to take either a large or small bus.

"Later in the season the Parade of Gardens should be beautiful," Mrs. Grant pointed out. "During my visit the flowers were not in bloom, but the various arrangements of gardens, under the supervision of Mrs. Ervin Prall, have 7 acres planted and with the advancing warm weather should fulfil the lavish expectations."

The state buildings attracted the official representative's attention. Inside the Pennsylvania building, a replica of Independence Hall, it was noticed that two-thirds of an entire wall was made of heavy blocks of Pennsylvania coal.

Visiting the Georgia building, a replica of Tara, there is a display of the famous novel by Margaret Mitchell which shows the different book jackets and copies produced in various lands. Impressive is the featured exhibits of Herty's paper experiments and the cotton displays. "An active and very alive exhibit is the cage of Georgia's wild life which include quail," said Mrs. Grant.

The revived interest in the ancient art of mural work is especially adopted to the vast expanse of windowless walls, Mrs. Grant observed. From serious to comic the murals run. On the exterior of buildings over doors they attract attention and then more murals greet you inside. The Works Progress Administration building had involved the history of the nation's unemployment problems into a dramatic story told by mural art. These wall paintings at the fair enliven the richness of color and add brilliance to a color motif already gay.

"If you would enjoy your visit," Mrs. Grant made the suggestion, "wear shoes in which you will be comfortable all day long. A hat with a slight brim will be eye-shielding against the glare and dark glasses for summer will be needed. But in event of sudden showers it would be best to carry a parasol. Simply dressed, appropriate for town shopping will be correct for the fair," said Mrs. Grant.

"The music offered at the fair will continue to delight the many music lovers," Mrs. Grant emphasized. "Concerts and recitals have nationally important stars performing.

"The opening concert was given by the New York Philharmonic Symphony, John Barbirolli conducting with Josef Hofman, as soloist. In the city of New York, now in a gala mood for company, the concerts, art galleries and theaters are especially fine. But at the fair the concerts have a new splendid building in which to perform. With view unobstructed by supporting pillars and excellent acoustics throughout, the programs will be enjoyed!" said Mrs. Grant.

The Healt' Building is worthy of a visit and is filled with the wonders achieved by medical discoveries; the Railroad Building tells the story of the rails by the combined ability of 26 railroad companies. But then there are so many buildings that must be seen, according to Georgia's official representative.

"Don't be afraid of going hungry at the fair, for there are plenty of restaurants of various types and prices. From sandwich counters to large lovely tea rooms, cafes with nationally prominent entertainers, there is food for every taste and purse," she said.

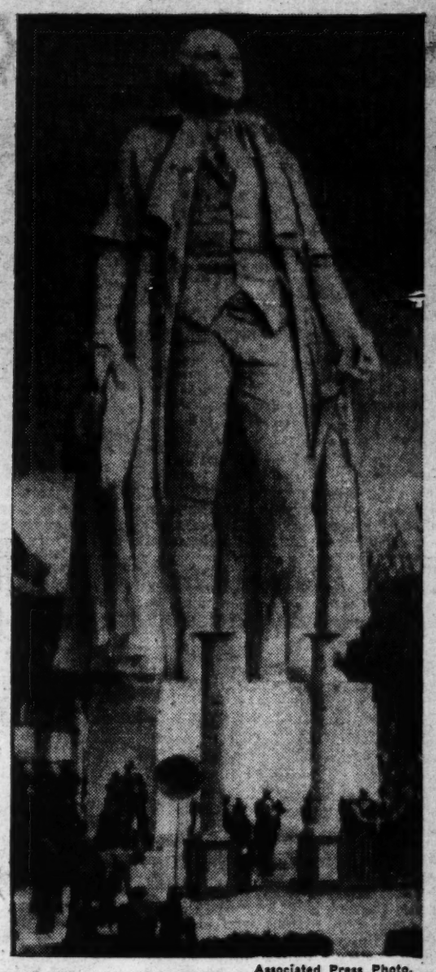

You may suit your menus to your mood. Would you like to have luncheon in England with typical English dishes? In Holland? Italy? Or any other country? "There are cafes specializing in foreign foods to be found on the fair grounds," stated Mrs. Grant.

"The foreign nations were in importance on the opening day. The thrilling ceremony held in the Court of Nations situated at the end of Constitution Hall, the central avenue of the fair. Seats were reserved for about 5.000," Mrs. Grant recalled. "And as the nationalities took their places costumed figures paraded on the top of the rear wall of the open arena and waved flags of the various nations. Rich notes from bands filled the breeze."

The officials speaking terminated in the address made by President Roosevelt whose closing words were: "I hereby dedicate the New York World's Fair of 1939 and declare it open to all mankind."

Television told the story for a radius of 45 miles. Radio and the press shouted it to the world. The opening ceremony of that collection of modern miracles was now a part of history, that same history which holds the first President of the United States in whose honor the fair was dedicated. One hundred and fifty years later at the exact moment that George Washington took office, the great fair was opened.

The Father of Our Country would likely smile with pleasure at the announced intention of the fair: "It is a demonstration of a happier way of American living through a recognization of the interdependence of men of all classes and of all professions, and the building of a better world tomorrow with the tools of today."

Would You Like to Bake a Cake Traveling Sixty Miles an Hour?

By NELL WALTHALL SIMMONS.

Baking cherry pies at 60 miles an hour! That is just part of the job with hundreds of specialized cooks whose dexterity with boiler and broiler make the average home cook feel like amateur night.

They are the chefs, and second, third and fourth cooks on dining cars. Working in undersized kitchens with a free floor space of about 3 feet by 16 feet they often prepare dinner for as many as 150 to 200 people. Not only that, but these days railroads bow to passengers' food whims and needs in ways that are handy to know about if your vacation plans include a trip by train.

Women travelers, dining car stewards here say, often ask to see the kitchens and shake their heads in wonder at the tiny space from which comes such a variety of dishes. It is perhaps because they have been through the rigors (or reasonable facsimiles of same) of cooking for six or eight in the average apartment kitchen that so many of them ask:

"They don't really bake the pies and cakes right on the train, do they? I heard you just had them baked in some town and picked them up along the way."

Pies, and layer cakes too, are baked right on the journey, however, and there is less of the lurching and swaying from flour bin to mixing bowl than you would expect as the train rounds curves. Chefs and their helpers soon become accustomed to the motion.

Of course some dishes are out. You will probably never see a lemon meringue pie on a dining car menu. Please don't ask for custard or jello, either. Those things just won't settle down to business because of the movement of the cars. In general, though, it is the scarcity of elbow room that makes cooking-as-you-ride a job for which experts only need apply, for they are the only ones hired.

On the other hand, at the table of a diner where the gentle vibration only helps things along, even a passenger can stir up a salad dressing, and many of them do. Stewards say that men particularly like to call for the bowl and the several ingredients and mix their own roquefort cheese dressing while the steak is broiling up ahead. If you would like to try it the next time you travel, no one will be surprised. You can go right ahead with a pinch of this and a dash of that as if you were at home instead of out where the telegraph poles keep rushing by.

"Why, Huey Long used to go back in the kitchen, put on the turnip greens and make his own pot-likker," one dining car man reminisced. "He often wired the main office that he would be returning to Washington Monday and would like to have corned beef and cabbage for lunch."

The President is known to railway dining car executives who travel with him as "a good eater."

He is never persnickety about his food," one of them visiting Atlanta on an inspection tour said. "I once asked him what he would like to have for a certain meal. He said, 'Just bring me what you think I ought to have.' That time what he got was just pot luck, you might say—a little Virginia ham, a little breast of chicken . . ."

Although the stewards see some unusual tastes displayed, such as that of the man who wanted olive oil on his watermelon, and of another who poured vinegar on his breakfast eggs, they try to arrange for individual needs.

If you are on a diet they will provide prescribed meals for you, even weighing out a diabetic's food if a copy of the diet is furnished them.

A mother who is going on a long trip with her baby can tell the ticket seller what the baby eats. The information will be relayed to the dining car department and the strained vegetables will be forthcoming. The baby's formula can even be prepared.

If you buy your ticket in advance you can say: "One lower and I would like frogs' legs and strawberry shortcake for dinner." You would get the ticket, and, in due time, the dinner.

For tour parties some roads make special rates for feeding large groups by the day.

All roads have certain dishes which are favorites. The southern roads, of course, make a specialty of traditional ones, cooking their string beans with salt pork and using positively no sugar in the corn bread. One of them reports that while all outsiders coming into the southern states want to try fried chicken (cut into pieces), the most popular dish served is cornmeal battercakes. Nine men out of ten breakfasting on the train order them, with sausage cakes. Women passengers make out with orange juice, toast and coffee.

For persons whose digestive systems are upset by travel, the steward recommends a light lunch or supper such as fricassed chicken and a stewed fruit dessert.

Several of the roads make a specialty of charcoal broiled steak dinners, serving steak selected in New York (it seems the best steaks don't voluntarily come south) for which they pay as much as 58 cents a pound. Exactly one pound of steak is served with each of these dinners. Beginning with shrimp cocktail and ending with apple pie or ice cream, this is the dinner that many salesmen traveling on expense accounts are said to go without lunch to indulge in.

The charcoal broiler, therefore, is an important piece of the kitchen equipment. The big broiler sizzles away next to the bake oven at the end of the kitchen fartherest from the diner. Third in the lineup is the oven for roasting meats, then the range for frying eggs and bacon and other quick cooking, then the vegetable steam table.

The chef who reigns over this compact arrangement is highly paid and is responsible for anything that goes wrong, no matter who actually burned the toast melba. The second cook is sometimes called the fry cook. The third cook manages the steam table. The fourth occupant of the kitchen is the dish washer.

"For two reasons," the steward explained, "they never pinch-hit for each other. One is that if each man did not stay in his own corner and stick to his knitting there would be confusion. The other is that they belong to unions, fall under different wage scales, and are not permitted to do each other's work."

"The chef on this car," he pointed to the grave-faced, rotund colored man, "is Joe Kennedy. This is his twenty-fifth year."

Tuskegee Institute gives a course of training for dining car employes. If anybody has an old diner to give away, the school would be mighty happy to have it for practical use in teaching what seems to be both an art and a science—cooking and serving "the first call to dinner in the dining car."

Sketched by Staff Artist—Whaley.

Stewards say that some men like to call for the bowl and several ingredients and mix their own roquefort cheese dressing while the steak is broiling up ahead.

The Mexicans are driven back into San Jacinto bay in overwhelming defeat as Sam Houston leads his Texans to victory and independence. It is a scene from "Man of Conquest," starring Richard Dix, at the Paramount.

Good Pictures at All Theaters As Summer Season Is Opened

By LEE ROGERS,
Motion Picture Editor.

This fellow Cary Grant is just about the best he-man Hollywood has to offer. His performance in "Gunda Din" was fine and in the Rialto's current "Only Angels Have Wings" he is magnificent. He has a way of putting comedy into his hard-boiledness that makes his roles most human.

The object of his cold-shouldering in this film are Jean Arthur, who is her usual lovely self, and Richard Barthelmess, who makes his first appearance on the screen since 1935, a welcomed comeback.

"The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle" is a love story of the man and woman who popularized the modern dance. In it Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire melt into oblivion and become "The Castles." At the Fox.

"Man of Conquest" is a story of the winning of Texas independence, and, of course, the story of Samuel Houston.

"Calling Dr. Kildare" has a fine cast at the Grand.

"You Can't Get Away With Murder," at the Capitol, stars Humphrey Bogart. Vaudeville on the stage.

"A Trip to Paris," with the Jones Family, is featured at the Roxy. "Lost Patrol" is the companion picture. The Rhodes is playing "Lucky Night," with Robert Taylor.

Cary Grant, Jean Arthur Prove Hits in Rialto Film.

One of the most gripping and spectacular air stories yet filmed is "Only Angels Have Wings," now at the Rialto.

Such words as thrills, suspense, human-interest are overworked, it is true. But in the case of this modern classic, they are words that accurately fit. For Howard Hawks, who both produced and directed, has done a masterful job in all details.

The result is a film that contains everything an audience dreams about seeing on the screen.

The cast is superb. It is headed by Cary Grant and Jean Arthur. Grant is particularly impressive as the hard-boiled manager of a South American aviation line. Other roles are extremely well played by Thomas Mitchell, Noah Beery Jr. and Richard Barthelmess, star of the silent screen, who comes back to films to score a triumph. Rita Hayworth, as his wife, has effective scenes.

Lovely Ginger Rogers, Astaire Dance Again at Fox.

There is a love story playing at the Fox—"The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle."

It is filled with dancing, singing, comedy, flying and pathos. Its story is of the love of a girl and a boy who dance their way into the hearts of the world, setting fashions in clothes and vogues in dancing, introducing the Castle walk, the fox-trot and the tango.

For the first time since they made "Flying Down to Rio," Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire are submerged to the characters they are portraying. They, in this picture, are not Rogers and Astaire, but Vernon and Irene Castle, loving and dancing and making the whole world want to dance. The comedy is supplied by Walter Brennan and Edna Mae Oliver.

The picture opens in 1911 with Vernon, a comedian, chasing after the star of the show. She leads him to a nearby beach to stand him up. He saves a dog from drowning and meets Irene. Courtship follows in 1911 fashion. They dance together—and finally decided to quit comedy for the dance. Hardships follow, but, oh, well, most people have heard the story of the Castles' success and have danced the dances they originated. Then comes the war. Vernon joins the Royal Flying Corps.

There is a sad ending—an airplane crash and Irene attends a private dinner party with herself, stands at the window and listens to the music she and Vernon danced into popularity. The story is tiresome at places, with more emphasis being placed on glorifying the Castles than telling an entertaining story, but it is a picture you will think about more than once after leaving the theater.

'Man of Conquest' Waves Flag Of the Union Over Texas.

Congratulations to Republic pictures for stepping out with better pictures. "Man of Conquest" is the first produced under the new policy and is showing currently at the Paramount theater.

"Man of Conquest" comes under the general heading of the Americanization cycle for it has Andrew Jackson describing the United States as being the "only place in the world where a man can 'cuss the President and all the President can do is 'cuss back—or else go fishing."

The story is that of Sam Houston. For the better part of an hour the film deals slowly with Houston's Indian and war life and his campaigning for the governorship of Tennessee under the direction of Andy Jackson. Then it takes up his courtship of his aristocratic first wife—supplying a fictional reason for her never-explained flight from her husband, a flight which sent Sam on a drunken spree that all but ruined his life.

But once Sam starts for Texas, the film takes on action, moves swiftly and has Indian fighting, Mexican fighting, the fall of the Alamo, and the final defeat of the Mexicans. The technique which made Republic famous "western" producers is in evidence here. Gail Patrick is the second woman in Houston's life and Joan Fontaine plays the first. Richard Dix portrays Houston and Edward Ellis, Andrew Jackson.

Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore Star In Hospital Film at Loew's.

"Calling Dr. Kildare," a sequel to "Young Dr. Kildare," at the Loew's is good entertainment chiefly because of splendid performances by Lew Ayres, who plays the title role, and Lionel Barrymore, the grump old diagnostician who regards Ayres as his protege.

The story is not strong. Ayres becomes involved when he does not report a gunshot wound case and it is up to him to get himself out—which, of course, he does. He is infatuated by the sister (Lana Turner) of the boy who was shot. Lana does not come under that rather vague heading of a nice girl, and she deceives the young doctor.

At the end one gathers the movie people, in the next of the series, will let a beautiful friendship grow up between Ayres and Laraine Day, who plays the part of the nurse. Many girls out in Hollywood have been put in a nurse's uniform, but never has one looked prettier than Laraine.

Warden Lawes' Story on Screen At Capitol; 8 Acts of Vodvil.

"You Can't Get Away With Murder," a prison drama now offered for four more days at the Capitol, is important in that it brings to the screen a story of actual occurances as recorded by Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing prison.

The picture deals with gangsters, life in prison and is excitement from start to finish.

A better than average vaudeville program is offered on the stage with The 3 Gasca Brothers, European circus stars, taking top honors with their difficult globe-rolling act. June Carr and Joe Rollo offer comedy, while Rahn Ormond presents illusions. The Merrill Twins offer snappy dance routines, and Warner and Leigh, singers from "The Student Price," offer not opera, but popular tune hits of the day.

Hollywood Ex's Are Attempting Comebacks

By SHEILAH GRAHAM.
Released by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD, May 27.—"It has been exactly one week since anyone referred to me as the former Mrs. Clark Gable," said Josephine Dillon Gable to your reporter a few days ago. She added, "You don't know what a struggle it has been for me to become a personality in my own name. They never say, 'Josephine Dillon, period'—always 'Josephine Dillon, ex-wife of Clark Gable.' Why don't you write a story," concluded the dramatic coach, "of us poor unfortunates whose apparently sole claim to present attention or fame is a label in the past tense?"

"Ex" Doesn't Hurt.

As a matter of record, I do not think it has hurt Miss Dillon professionally to be labeled "ex-wife of Clark Gable." It has helped. Students have enrolled in her dramatic school as much because she is reputed to have instructed Gable in the first rudiments of film acting as for the fact she is a fine teacher.

Jean Acker, on the other hand, does not mind how often she is called "the former Mrs. Rudolph Valentino"—as long as the publicity results in much-needed work. Miss Acker, who was also a big shot star during her husband's lifetime, is currently playing a microscopic role as a southern lady in an Atlanta ballroom in "Gone With the Wind."

Mack Sennett Another.

Until a few weeks ago, the only occasions in recent years that the name "Mack Sennett" could get into print was when anything newsworthy happened to his alumnae of bathing beauties. Carole Lombard was referred to as an ex-Mack Sennett girl when she married Gable. When Marie Prevost died recently, the name Mack Sennett was somewhere in the copy. Every time the story of Gloria Swanson is told (which is not often nowadays), Mack Sennett is mentioned as the man who discovered her. And so on. Mr. Sennett is currently concerned with trying to bring the fame of his past into line with present bread and butter. He is working as technical adviser and associate producer on Darryl Zanuck's "Falling Stars."

Not all the ex-occupants of the Hollywood hall of fame are middle-aged or old. Take Baby Le Roy. The poor boy is a mere seven years old, but still wears his wornout "baby" tag—when—and it is now seldom—he is referred to.

Fly Fast, Love Hard

Gary Grant and Jean Arthur have leads in the spectacular aviation drama, "Only Angels Have Wings," now at the Rialto.

HEDY IS GARDENER.

Hedy Lamarr is beautifying her gardens on her hilltop estate in Benedict Canyon, by planting slips from Myrna Loy's choicest shrubs.

Lana Turner, you remember her from the first Hardy Family pictures, is the red-headed siren that tempts Lew Ayres in the picture, "Calling Dr. Kildare," now at Loew's.

Jaunts About the Country Provide Relaxation for Hollywood Stars

By SHEILAH GRAHAM.

HOLLYWOOD—"I'm tired. I need a rest," says Spencer Tracy, during each and any picture. "I'm tired and need a rest," says Tyrone Power. Ditto for Alice Faye, Errol Flynn, Bette Davis, and every star who ever made a picture. So you would think they would rest and relax between pictures. But they don't—except a few who are ultra-wise.

George Raft can barely wait for the last foot of film to be "canned" before rushing off to the nearest race meeting, baseball game or fight. He returns to the camera more tired than when he left it.

Errol Flynn's idea of a restful place is a New York night club or a gay party with a group of convivial male friends on his yacht.

Alice Faye was within touching distance of a health collapse when she caught up with a rest after "Rose of Washington Square." But what did she do? Alice went to New York, where she could be with husband Tony Martin. In her early days in Hollywood, Alice spent even more between-picture time in her beloved New York, but in those days it was to see Rudy Vallee and Broadway.

Ty Gets Them Over.

Tyrone Power is making his third picture in a row. "I prefer to get my pictures over—then take a long rest," Ty told me recently. His last "rest" was a hectic month in New York. The "rest" before that was anything but a rest in South America—where fans and photographers dogged his every meeting with Annabella. Tyrone's next "rest" is a personal appearance tour in Australia, which has the earmarks of everything but.

Nelson Eddy's idea of relaxation is a cross-country concert tour, which, to judge by the hectic reports that seep back into Hollywood, would kill off anyone but a lad enjoying Nelson's robust health.

Jimmy Stewart, now making his tenth consecutive picture, is more in need of a rest at this particular moment than anyone else I know. But, instead of relaxing at home after the completion of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Stewart plans to fly himself to South America for some whoop-de-do with Buddy John Swope.

No Rest for Bette.

Bette Davis is extremely unlucky during her so-called rest periods. She seems to make a point of getting into the sun against doctor's orders. The usual result is a touch of sunstroke, which is not the best aid to relaxation.

Richard Greene has been in Hollywood a year and a half. He was allotted his first vacation a few weeks ago. But, instead of resting, Poor Richard had to go into the hospital for a tonsillectomy that nearly took his life.

Maureen O'Sullivan and Nancy Kelly, both ardent Catholics, belong to the small movie group with the right idea about relaxing between pictures—they rest, physically, mentally and spiritually, in near-by convents.

Clark Gable's excellent health is not entirely an accident. He understands the art of rest and change. His in-between-picture periods are given over to hunting, and, now that he has acquired a ranch, to farming his land.

Before her marriage with Franchot Tone ended in divorce, Joan Crawford conserved nerves and energy with sun-bathing and swimming on her Brentwood estate. But her future "rest" periods will be dissipated in travel—until new love slows her back to the proper rest tempo.

Norma Shearer is another actress who used to relax at home between picture chores. But, since the regrettable death of Irving Thalberg, Norma has seemed too restless to "stay put" during vacations. New York, Sun Valley, Mexico, have been visited since Norma completed "Idiot's Delight" and began "The Women."

Bennett, Young Star in Film At Center

"Topper Takes a Trip" concerns the mad, merry antics of Constance Bennett, as Marion Kerby, and Roland Young, as Cosmo Topper, on the sunny sands of the French Riviera, whither Miss Bennett has gone to "do a good deed" and where, instead, she almost upsets the Toppers lives. The supporting cast includes Alexander D'Arcy and Billie Burke. It plays at the Center today and tomorrow.

Tuesday, "His Exciting Night," featuring Charlie Ruggles, Marion Martin and Maxie Rosenbloom, is booked. The story deals with the mis-adventures of a bridegroom virtually kidnaped on his wedding night, and tricked into a compromise situation with a handsome blonde vamp.

"The Charge of the Light Brigade," starring Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland, plays Wednesday. It is the story of two brothers in India, both asking for the hand of a beautiful Scottish girl. The girl is betrothed to the elder, but during his absence, fighting on the frontier, she falls in love with the younger.

Thursday and Friday, "Made for Each Other," features James Stewart and Carole Lombard.

Saturday, Sunday and Monday, "Jesse James," starring Tyrone Power, Nancy Kelly, Henry Fonda and Randolph Scott, will play.

HOPALONG CASSIDY BOOKED THURSDAY

Capitol To Present Three-Day Engagement.

A special three-day program is scheduled to open Thursday at the Capitol at which time "Sunset Trail," latest adventure story of Hopalong Cassidy, starring William Boyd, will be offered on the screen with the Ross Russell road show vaudeville revue "Eye-dears of 1939" on the stage.

This stage and screen program is presented for three days only so that the Capitol may revert to their original policy of opening a new stage and screen show each Sunday, which will be effective Sunday, June 4.

Hopalong Trapped?

Bill Boyd and Charlotte Wynters star in "Sunset Trail," a new Hopalong Cassidy picture, opening Thursday at the Capitol.

RITA STARTS WORK.

Rita Johnson, after a week with a swollen jaw caused by a tooth extraction, checked in at M-G-M for her first scenes with Walter Pidgeon in "6,000 Enemies" yesterday.

Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire, the best known dancers of the current day, revive the famous Castle dances in "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," currently unreeling at the Fox.

Atlanta Dancing Master Recalls Castles as 'Youth Seeking Break'

By YOLANDE GWIN.

Time turned back almost a quarter of a century for Edward S. Hurst this week.

When the Atlantan attended the performance of "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," now showing at the Fox, every scene found an echo in the memory of Hurst, whose friendship with the famous dancing team began back in 1912.

"It was an uncanny feeling to watch Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire play the roles of Vernon and Irene back in those days we lived in New York. Many parts of the picture recalled to me many amusing and interesting incidents of 25 years ago. The roles are played very well by Miss Rogers and Mr. Astaire. They seem to have caught the spirit of the famous dancing team."

It was during his residence in New York before the World War, that Hurst met the Castles before they danced their way to fame and fortune.

"They were just two ambitious youngsters who were pupils of a well-known dancing master in New York. Their so-called 'break' came just at the time when the world needed to dance out of many difficulties. The way the two movie stars portray the two famous dancers is admirable, and is a challenge to every one who dreams of a dancing career, either before the footlights or under the kleig lights in Hollywood."

Hurst described Irene Castle as a tall, slender, graceful woman, full of personality and with a knack of becoming famous as a dancer, as well as an arbiter of certain styles. It was Irene Castle, it is recalled, whose bobbed hair, known as "The Castle Clip," initiated a new era in feminine coiffure.

There was no artificiality in the two, for each were young, full of ambition and anxious to become famous as dancers as well as financially. The current picture of their life is a splendid and notable tribute to the two dancers, according to Hurst.

William Powell, missing the gardens of his former Bel-Air home, has planted his new spring garden in a window box in his Beverly Hills hotel suite.

"You Can't Get Away With Murder" is the action film at the Capitol this week starring Humphrey Bogart, center, and Billy Halop, one of the Dead End Kids, right.

Youth crop of Hollywood, 1939. Each has the opportunity of becoming another Colbert or another Gable because the producers must be ready with new talent to replace disappearing favorites. In making their bids for fan approval, these nine Paramount Studios newcomers have been featured recently in such top flight pictures as "Union Pacific," "Beau Geste," "The Magnificent Fraud," "Million Dollar Legs" and others. From top to bottom, left to right on each row, are Ellen Drew and John Hartley; William Henry and Janice Logan; Joseph Allen and Patricia Morison; Susan Hayward, Robert Preston and Judith Barrett.

YOUNG GOES "WESTERN."

Robert Young, who has become very horse-minded since he opened a riding academy and stables with Allan Jones, gets his first opportunity to "go Western" in motion pictures in "Maisie Was a Lady."

STARS RESUME MATCH.

Johnny Weissmuller and Bing Crosby resumed their progressive golf match at Lakeside when Weissmuller finished work on "Tarzan in Exile."

IN THE SWING.

Now that James Cagney is out of the "Each Dawn I Die" prison he is amusing himself by breaking rock for a walk at his new home. Maybe it's become a habit.

WRONG NUMBER.

Setting up for the big wedding scene in "The Old Maid," Director Edmund Goulding called to the string quartette to play the wedding march. They broke into "The Blue Danube."

'Billy the Kid' Is Hit of New Ballet

By MARK BARRON.

NEW YORK, May 27.—(AP)—Theatrical pilgrims, poking their noses just a block off Broadway, find something a bit more cultural than the sightseeing busses, the chorus girls seeking work and such accustomed sights. Today they find the American theater, which needs perhaps a bit of explaining.

The American Lyric theater is a group that has sponsors both wealthy and with prestige.

First it presented "The Devil and Daniel Webster," which was an operetta about Webster and his particular devil and his particular devil was personal debts. After that came "Susanna, Don't You Cry," a musical romance based on the music of Stephen Foster.

After those two, both lovely, they presented "The Ballet Caravan," a suite on which the composer wrote the best criticism. Bach said that his reason for composing "Caravan" was that the suite would provide a soothing atmosphere for a man suffering with chronic insomnia. Bach, perhaps, was right.

In this are gypsy dancers who shift to the drama of Pocahontas, and Indian Idyll about the time that Pocahontas thought she was in love with Captain John Smith. He had just come from fighting the Turks and he wasn't interested in marriage. A middle aged man then, he was really a tired old man because of the strength that war had taken from him.

The dance sketch that brought the house cheering was one that an historian would never expect; for it is pure history. It is the story of Billy the Kid.

That is the story of the ballet. It is extraordinarily exciting as Eugene Loring dances it. Besides dancing that role he also arranged the choreography.

One complaint. There wasn't an Indian war dance in the Pocahontas scenes and the dancers seemed too much to have been checked out of a Broadway night club only a few minutes previously. Perhaps they were.

Robert Taylor In Comedy At Rhodes

Bringing a new romantic-comedy team to the screen, "Lucky Night," co-starring Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor, is the attraction now playing at the Rhodes theater.

Taylor portrays the role of an out-of-luck playboy who meets Miss Loy on a park bench while both are looking for jobs. Myrna has fled from a fourth engagement to a man she didn't want to marry. The pair panhandle 50 cents from a cop, pyramid it into thousands by lucky playing, hit the night spots, get into tight spots and find, after their wild "lucky night" that they've been married.

In the supporting cast is a picked list of funmakers, among them are Joseph Allen, Henry O'Neill, Douglas Fowley and Bernard Nedell.

The picture presents Taylor in his first comedy role which he handles very good. Miss Loy is right at home in her role which she always plays well.

EXPENSIVE BARGAIN.

John Litel's wife bought an early American dining set at a sale, so Litel has to build an early American house on his Encino ranch.

GRANDPARENTS VISIT.

Freddie Bartholomew's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bartholomew, are en route from England to Hollywood for a visit with their daughter, the noted Aunt Cissie, and their actor grandson.

MAYOR TO MAYOR.

First telegrams of congratulation to Robert Young, upon his election as honorary mayor of Tarzana, came today from fellow-mayors Al Jolson, of Encino, and Andy Devine, of Van Nuys.

Atlanta at Work Added Feature At Fox

How much do you know about your city government?

A good way to test yourself is to see the movie short, "Atlanta At Work," showing currently at the Fox. It takes you behind the scenes of your own city and depicts the intricacies at running a modern metropolis.

Did you know, for example, that Atlanta's water is tested every 30 minutes? Did you know that an average of 10 babies are born at Grady hospital every day? These and many other interesting facts are brought out more vividly in this picture than they could ever be explained in a book.

The movie takes you through every department of Atlanta's government. It shows the sanitary department cleaning the city's several hundred miles of streets while Atlantans sleep. It has scenes of Atlanta's modern airport, hospitals and parks.

Mayor Hartsfield wrote the script. It is well-directed and has several scenes of genuine beauty. A running explanation of the scenes is provided by John Fulton.

Jones Family and 'Lost Patrol' Featured at Roxy.

Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Russell Gleason and other members of the Jones Family team up again at the Roxy this week and take "A Trip to Paris," which is a comedy throughout. The companion feature is "The Lost Patrol," an all-male cast.

It is the companion picture which provides the best entertainment, even though it is a reissue. In it a dozen members of the French Foreign Legion are lost on the desert, attacked by Arabs and forced to fight great odds.

In the cast are Victor McLaglen, Boris Karloff, Wallace Ford, Reginald Denny, J. M. Kerrigan, Billy Bevan. Allan Hale, Brandon Hurst and others.

On the far outpost of civilization during the World War, somewhere in the Mesopotamian wilds, the little cavalry unit loses its sole commissioned officer at the hands of an enemy Arab sniper. Secret orders are lost with him. Their own whereabouts and the whereabouts of their headquarters troop unknown, their water supply and food supply low, and their mounts worn and weary, and for all they know every foot of advance bringing them nearer death from marauding Arabs, they face death in manly fashion.

This is what happens to oomph girls! If things keep up like this, Ann Sheridan is going to be very, very sorry she was named America's oomph girl. The "Dead End Kids," never terribly bashful about lavishing their attentions on the beautiful Ann, have become too "devoted" for the red-haired star's comfort. Suddenly she was set upon by Dead Enders Huntz Hall (left) and Leo Gorcey (he married the Atlantan, Catherine Dittig, last week). Set upon effectively, too, as anyone can see. Such technique! Such masterful domination! And such a whopping kiss from Hall, who's only 19 but a lad with ideas.

Jed Prouty and Spring Byington star in "A Trip to Paris," another Jones family story. The companion picture at the Roxy this week is "The Lost Patrol," with Victor McLaglen.

Glamor Boys and Girls of Filmland Can't Find Time for Honeymoons

HOLLYWOOD, May 27.—Hollywood honeymoons are pretty indefinite. You marry today, and you may not get around to the honeymoon until the little ones are big boys and girls.

The first time Hedy Lamarr was married — to non-Hollywoodite Fritz Mandl—she spent her honeymoon on the Lido, Capri, Lake Como, Biarritz, Cannes, Nice and Paris. With Producer Gene Markey, she said "I do" in Mexico, and came back the same day to the Hollywood home ground. The future honeymoon horizon looks empty, with Hedy to make three pictures in a row at Metro. And Gene tied up solidly at Twentieth Century-Fox.

The first time Clark Gable was a bridegroom—with Josephine Dillon—he was too poor to honeymoon. The second and third weddings—both with his recently divorced Rhea (they married a day too soon and had to repeat)—took place at Santa Ana. He was working in a picture and the couple came back to Hollywood on the afternoon of the second ceremony. They never did get around to a honeymoon. He was again too busy after the next plunge, with Carole Lombard — which puts Carole one honeymoon up on Clark—she went to Honolulu after she married William Powell.

Barbara Twice Loser.

Barbara Stanwyck, whose honeymoon with Robert Taylor is indefinitely postponed because of picture work, didn't get one either with former husband Frank Fay. At the time, Fay was an entertainer in St. Louis, and Barbara spent her honeymoon watching him work.

Margaret Sullavan has done much better than most in the matter of a honeymoon. She has drawn only one blank in three—when she married Henry Fonda and they were both working. But, with William Wyler and Leland Hayward, Maggie got trips to Europe, although with Hayward she had to wait until she was the mother of a couple of bouncing girls before they could go. Wyler, incidentally, could spare second bride, Margaret Tallichet, only a week in Sun Valley.

Barrymore's Wives.

John Barrymore combines fishing and honeymooning—Dolores Costello did hers in grand style aboard John's palatial yacht. Elaine Barrie had to take a rented boat and like it.

When George Brent married Ruth Chatterton, they went to Europe. When he did ditto with Constance Worth, they went to Catalina for a few days.

Catalina was also the background for the post-nuptial cooing of Douglas Fairbanks Jr.'s second bride—but there wasn't much of it because Doug was working in "Ruler of the Seas" and Mary had all the time she wanted to catch up on her knitting (literally).

Joan Crawford also had to wait for her honeymoon with Doug. She married him June, 1928, but didn't make the wedding trip until January, 1929—to France and Italy. At that, Joan did better with Doug than with Franchot Tone. They were married in New York city and spent the honeymoon with Tone's parents in New York state.

FIRST WEDDING GIFT.

The first wedding present received by newlyweds Clark Gable and Carole Lombard was a 10-foot camellia bush from Clark's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer make-up man, Stanley Campbell.

SMITH ELECTIONS CLOSE OLD YEAR

Clubs and Student Body Have New Officers Ready to Take Up Fall Work.

Hoke Smith's cafeteria was the scene of an elaborate banquet given by the Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y Clubs in honor of their parents last week. Ernest Beasley and Sue Reese, presidents of the clubs, acted as toastmaster and toastmistress, respectively, introducing the speakers. Mr. Douglas McRae was the principal speaker at this initial banquet to be given annually.

Election of officers for the coming year of the Hi-Y Club, Tri-Hi-Y Club, marshals' force and Girl Reserves are as follows:

Hi-Y Club: Calvin Bradshaw, president; Roy Heath, first vice president; Frank Priles, second vice president; Arthur Graves, secretary; Nathaniel Andrews, treasurer.

Tri-Hi-Y Club: Martha Anne Hays, president; Matilda Franco, vice president; Joy Lawless, secretary; Anastasia Marinos, treasurer.

Marshal's or traffic officers: James Stone, chief, and Ruth Ellis, assistant chief.

Girl Reserves: Malissa Cox, president; Edith Robertson, vice president; Mary Nell Sammon, secretary; Nell Johnson, program chairman; Georgia Mallas, treasurer; Estelle Biddle, publicity chairman, and Gladys DeWitt, social chairman.

A total of 3,025 girls have taken part in various basketball, bowling, ping-pong, shuffle board and baseball tournaments from gym classes in the school this year.

Secretaries of Hoke Smith gave a tea on Tuesday, May 23, in the school library, inviting many well-known students and teachers of the school.

Results of last week's election were Calvin Bradshaw, president, and Anastasia Marinos, vice president.

CHILDREN AT SPRING ENTERTAIN PARENTS

High 5 pupils are missing Bolling Gay and hope that he will soon be back at school.

Low and High 5 had a picnic Friday afternoon at Grant Park.

High and Low 3 had an interesting exhibit of foreign articles from twenty different countries on World Friendship Day. Among the articles were a piece of stink wood from South Africa and a dress from Paris.

Miss Tripps' children enjoyed having their parents visit them Friday. They showed their parents how interesting a day in school can be.

High 4 children who won reading ribbons are Joe Jackson, Billy Beard, Polly Hutto, Barney Jones, Louise Yarbrough, Joanne Brady, Hamlett Simmons, Suzanne Lennon, Gilvert Gordon, Mary Louise Craig, Sandy West, and Betty Lou Baker.

Low and High 6 enjoyed transplanting their tomato plants from their seed bed.

High and Low 4 will go to Fritz Orr's Club Tuesday afternoon. He is their sponsor and is having them for a swim and picnic.

High 3 have painted some Mexican pictures for Miss Boylston. Mr. Homer Thompson, the sponsor of this class, has invited them to a swim at the Fritz Orr Club Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Young's children had open house for their parents. The parents heard them read and sing and saw them dance and buy and sell at their trading post. This class enjoyed the picnic which their sponsor, Mr. Couper, gave them at Grant Park Saturday. Gary Still, Bob Page, Ann Sosebee, and Walton Fink won prizes in the potato and sack races.

Kate Holmes, of High 6, won the sweepstakes in our Spring Flower Show. Mrs. Park is our garden chairman.

Marie Underwood, Cecile Mozeley, Gene Branson, Jane Hale, Letitia Sharp, Warren Reith, Nancy Gaillard, Eleanor Muse, David Mangham and Madeline Duenas were in Miss Harrison's piano recital in the school auditorium Monday.

JEANNETTE PALMER.

LEE STREET CHILDREN ENJOY CLASS GARDENS

The kindergarten teacher, Miss Heinz, read "Wait for William" over WATL one night on the "Community Lullaby" program.

High 1 children are sorry Billy Gladdis is sick in the hospital. They are planting iris and chrysanthemums in their garden.

High 2 has a new pupil, Lamar McCreary. The children made curtains that portray Mother Goose. They made and painted bookcases.

High 3 is glad to have Barbara McCreary for a new pupil.

Low 3 is glad Edna Perry is out of Piedmont hospital after being sick with pneumonia.

High 4 kept a cocoon in the winter and now it has hatched a moth.

Low 5 spent a lot of time last week planting painted pansies.

High 5 pupils are glad to welcome Bobby Smith from Luckie Street school. They are enjoying poetry, and enjoyed seeing a moving picture while reviewing history. They planted chrysanthemums in their garden.

Low 6 students are getting ready for school to close. They are taking tests.

High 6 pupils are planting flowers in their garden. They were glad to have Lamar Sheats and Jack Oliver go to New York with the patrol boys. They report an interesting and pleasant trip. They were glad to have their sponsor, Mr. D. M. Therrell, visit them Wednesday.

The combination class was glad to have George Spivey win the contest for making the best bird house.

Drug Store Lunches at Fair Street

CREW STREET PUPILS ON GRANT PARK PICNIC

High 6 will graduate next week. Crew hates to lose these nice children.

Low 6 pupils enjoyed their visit to Grant Park and the Cyclorama, the famous painting has new lighting effects and the story of the Battle of Atlanta was well told by a young man. The class enjoyed a picnic afterwards.

Low 5. Mrs. Woolfolk just got back from a visit to the fairs. She brought some balloons from New York to the class, and some maple candy.

High 4. Friday our class went on a picnic. We all had a very nice time. Some of the class carried lunch. We went to Grant Park in a car. We all enjoyed the picnic very much. It was a pleasant trip.

Low 4. We have four new Marionettes, one is a dog, one is Happy the Dwarf, and two from Africa.

High 3. Friday we went to town to see the birds at Regenstein's. Mrs. Hart bought some bird books.

Low 3 enjoyed a picture show reading lesson this week. The story was the Shoemaker and the Elves. The entire class, with two exceptions, made perfect scores on the week's spelling.

High 2. We are reading in a new book called, "Friendly Village." We have a flower pot with some seeds planted in it.

Low 2 put some curtains in the tea room. They look very nice.

Low 1. We enjoyed reading the story of "Little Red Riding Hood" very much.

Kindergarten. Mrs. Stokes gave us a lovely rag doll, and we are having a show with it.

SARA SMITH.

Betty Wilborn, of High 1, has a perfect teeth certificate.

Low and High 4 are looking forward to having Walter Hamby and Thomas Atwood tell them about their trip to the World's Fair.

Low and High 5 enjoyed giving their movie on Daniel Boone to the P.-T. A. mothers on May 16.

On Friday, May 26, Mrs. Davidson's class had an ice cream party in honor of James Robinson who is being promoted to Junior High school.

The sixth grade boys that went to New York are back at school and we are very glad to have them. They told us many interesting things they did and saw.

DORIS NIMMONS.

SYLVAN HILLS BAND TO GIVE RADIO CONCERT

Sylvan Hills school patrol boys who went to New York came back to school Monday full of enthusiasm about their trip. Their classmates enjoyed the souvenirs and interesting reports about the "World of Tomorrow" and about New York City. The highlight of the trip was different for each boy. For one, it was the game between the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Browns, for another it was the television broadcast, for another the boat trip around Manhattan and the Georgia exhibit. We are glad that these boys went and all of us profited by it.

Mr. Stoughton and the Sylvan Hills band will present a program over one of the local radio stations soon. Although the elementary concert is over we still like to sing. Miss Hollingsworth invited Mr. Harn to come out and lead us in singing old songs and to teach us new songs. Mr. Harn could not come, but sent his assistant, Miss Wright. We enjoyed it very much. The songs that Miss Wright taught us were as follows: Popeye, Betty Boop, the Villain and many others. At the same assembly, Miss Hollingsworth presented the athletic buttons to the 21 boys and girls who had won them.

The Garden Club had its annual flower show at the school Thursday. We enjoyed seeing the different kinds of flowers and appreciated the artistic arrangements. Mrs. Tinley's class won the prize for having the most mothers come to the flower exhibit. Miss Cole's class had a garden party. Everybody in the school was invited to bring some rich dirt for the garden. Mr. Hazel gave the garden a birthday cake with five candles on it.

High 6 pupils enjoyed their trip to the Cyclorama and the Capitol so much that they said they would like to have another excursion for promotion exercises. In this way, every child will have the same opportunity and nobody's feelings will be hurt because he or she is not on the program. The school has chartered a bus and we decided to go to the following places: The Wren's Nest, the Huff house, which was built before the War Between the States and is still occupied by Misses Sara and Cornelia Huff, who lived during the time of the war; north side residential section, picnic lunch in Garden Hills Park, the Cathedral of Christ the King, the Temple, Rhodes Memorial Hall and High Museum of Art.

Miss Slocumb came out to our school Wednesday and taught us how to paint a picture with words. We enjoyed it very much.

H. P. POWELL.

Fulton County School News

Center Hill School.

Miss Kathleen Mitchell delivered the certificates to the seventh grade pupils of the Center Hill school at their closing exercises on Thursday afternoon. The theme of their program was "Building a Character," and the leading parts in the play were taken by Anita Kirkpatrick as the spirit of the future, and Betty Jane Sanford, a child of 1939. The welcome address was delivered by Billy Englett and the farewell was by Thelma Buford. A resume of the year's work was given by Blanche Davis, Dorothy McCart played a piano solo, and Betty Sumlin gave a reading. Two songs were sung by the class.

The patrol boys who went on the trip to New York were Aaron Roberts, Harold Malcolm and Paul Ellison Jr. The entire school enjoyed hearing them tell of their experiences after they came back.

At the health and field day exercises held last Tuesday, Robert Bell and Charlotte Jones were crowned king and queen, and their attendants were Betty Jean Turner, Juanita Burdette, Willie Strickland, James Campbell and Bobby Thompson. Three pupils who have made all A's this year were the crown and train-bearers: Hilda White, Jacqueline Clarke and Leonard Ham.

Fifty perfect attendance certificates were presented at the closing exercises and three of these were earned by Billy Englett, Juanita Barfield and Harold Roberts.

On Thursday morning, Mrs. Barnett's third grade presented a health play and dances in the auditorium. Miss Hutcheson's class prepared the program for Mother's Day. Rev. and Mrs. Harold Smith were visitors at the school recently and the pupils enjoyed hearing Mr. Smith talk at assembly.

Annetta Sue Brown won the medal presented for the best U. D. C. essay written by any sixth grade pupil in the Fulton county schools.

The seventh-graders enjoyed a picnic to Grant park last Wednesday.

The art, dance and nature classes taught by teachers furnished by the WPA will be continued during the summer.

Mrs. Barnett, librarian, will open the library at Center Hill every Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock during the vacation. More children than ever before are planning to earn vacation reading club certificates.

Richardson High School.

Neva Beers was valedictorian of the Richardson graduating class and the exercises were held on Thursday night. Superintendent Jere A. Wells and Knox Walker were speakers and presented the honors and diplomas. Mrs. N. W. Cathcart was accompanist for the class song. A reception and dance were held after the program at the College Park Woman's Club.

The school annual, which was dedicated to Miss Sara Swanson, was distributed on Tuesday.

Liberty-Quinn School.

Lillian Housch and Jeannette Butterworth, seventh-graders at Liberty-Guinn school, have perfect attendance records for the year. Certificates were presented to about ten others in the school. The seventh graders were sorry that Lamar Pass had to miss a half day because of a broken arm. This is the only time he has missed since he has been in that school.

Mrs. Cunnard and Mrs. Ivey, teachers, and Mrs. H. M. Moulder Sr. and Mrs. J. B. Crawford, grade mothers, entertained the first and second graders at a picnic last week.

Miss Kathleen Mitchell installed the officers of the P.-T. A. at their last meeting. They are Mrs. F. H. Pass, Mrs. J. B. Crawford, Mrs. W. G. Hardeman and Mrs. E. H. Foster. The following were hostesses at a social hour afterwards: Mrs. E. E. Stone, Mrs. Dovie Harmon and Mrs. H. M. Moulder Jr.

KINGSBERY FETE FEATURES FLORA

School Children Do Homage While Garden Rulers Hold Court.

How thrilled our Garden King and Queen were when the whole school formed on the yard and stood at attention while they marched to the garden. The little children, dressed as flowers, dropped rose petals, and here and there a child, dressed as a white rabbit, hopped from behind the flowers to greet the king and queen. Every detail was worked out to give the proper atmosphere.

Children of High 4, Miss Nell Williamson's class, are proud of their picture of Mr. Coleman that Billy Reeves, a member of their class, took when he came to visit our garden.

Billy Garner of Low 5 returned from his trip with the patrol boys, and from his wide grin, we know that he had had a wonderful time. He played a joke on himself, but didn't mean to do it. Ask him to tell you how a shower bath works.

Mrs. Milholland has started the new boys' and girls' patrol for next year. All the members are doing their best to make excellent officers. They look so happy over being able to be selected for patrol duty.

MARYBELL GARNER.

FORMWALT BOYS WIN PENNANT AT BAT BALL

Boys and girls of High 6-2 are very happy because one of the A. C. E. visitors from Florida sent Bobby Henson a cocoanut.

Low 6 boys are very proud of having won the bat ball pennant. They had a wonderful time at Grant field.

Mrs. Bradley, sponsor of High 5-2, took the class on a picnic and then to the Cyclorama at Grant park.

Some children of High 5-1 are glad to get back to school well of the mumps. They are proud of the children who won athletic buttons. Albert Edwards, Buddy Knight and Betty Morris won silver buttons; Edward Veal, Eugene Digby, Harold Stephens, Tharon House, Jack Gignillibat and Sue Holloway won bronze buttons.

Low 5 pupils are proud that they won the paper sale.

Pupils of High 4 are practicing a Japanese play about "The Legend of the Chrysanthemum."

GRACE BRADFORD,
JOHN D. ADERHOLD.

HIGHLAND PUPILS COLLECT TIN FOIL

This Work To Aid Red Cross Will Continue Through Vacation Period.

As the date for the closing of school for the summer approaches many of our children are making plans to attend the vacation Bible schools that their churches will conduct, and are planning to do and to learn many, many things during the vacation period.

The kindergarten children had a toy sale Thursday and Friday. They made many toys.

The children in Mrs. Hodges' room are overjoyed to see that five of the seven hills of fancy small gourds which they planted this spring are growing and doing well. Next fall the gourds will be ready for making funny things, like the crooked-neck goose they made this year for one of their stories.

Miss Corley's class made boxes and envelopes.

Miss Wilcox's class had an ice cream party Friday. Mrs. Wilcox gave it because of the excellent work the children have done all year.

The children of High 4 are forming groups to collect tinfoil for Junior Red Cross during the summer months. They are planning to put boxes in the beauty parlors of the neighborhood to collect waste material from permanent waves. The Red Cross uses the money derived from the sale of tinfoil and lead foil to buy glasses for children who cannot afford them.

Miss Green's fourth grade is writing a health play which we hope to give before the end of school. This is a class play with every child contributing. They are using our own health books for reference work in order to have accurate knowledge of health.

Miss Lawrence's High and Low 5, 12 children from Miss Lawrence's class brought trowels to school to help Mrs. Richardson dig up Johnson grass in the school garden.

High 5-1 pupils cut their blooming flowers every morning and send them to the sick people they know about.

Superintendent's Message

My Dear Boys and Girls:

Our school term is nearly over, and this is my last school letter for the year. I wish to express my regret that I have not been able to visit every classroom personally; to know each student, and to have the opportunity to be with you. I have been with you in spirit, and am with you in your endeavors.

Today I wish to write a final word, for this year at least, about the democratic way of life. The highest example of the democratic way is found in the life of Jesus of Nazareth, and possibly we might really discover what the democratic way of life is by studying Him. The democratic way of life has as one of its fine characteristics the recognition of the sacredness of personality in others. Jesus showed this by recognizing the rich and the poor alike, the little children and the old men and women. The democratic way of life thinks first of others, and of the good that should come to all. Jesus is our greatest example of this way. The democratic way of life recognizes authority around us; Jesus said "render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's." The democratic way of life recognizes the overlordship of God. Jesus said: "Render unto God the things that are God's."

In our study of democracy the great men and women of the past should be prominent in our thinking, and at the top of the list was the Man, Jesus, who recognized all ages, and all races, all creeds, and all colors and all conditions of life. This is really the democratic way of life.

Always Your Friend,
WILLIS A SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

Activities Preceding End of Term Hold Sway at Opportunity School

More than one hundred and twenty Opportunity school badges made by the training, sewing and commercial art departments are being worn the last week of school by senior students in all departments. These ribbon badges are made of the three school colors—white, red, and black—and the lettering is in gold.

Mr. Tarleton Collier, columnist of the Atlanta Georgian, will be the principal speaker on the closing program of the school, which will be held on Friday evening, June 2, at 8 o'clock, at the Baptist Tabernacle. Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of the schools, will preside and Ed S. Cook, president of the Board of Education, will present the diplomas to the graduates.

A social feature of the school during the last week included a dinner on Friday evening at the Colonial Terrace hotel, Peachtree road, which was given by Major and Mrs. P. S. Woodward to the faculty of the school. Saturday afternoon Mrs. T. A. Kitchens, teacher of retail selling, entertained the faculty with a bridge tea at her home on Rogers avenue. Picnics and social features were enjoyed by several groups of graduate students during the past week. These social affairs were given by various groups of the school in honor of the graduates in the departments.

ILA ROBERTS.

PICNICS INTEREST PEEPLES CLASSES

Outings to Various Points Feature Close of Term.

Picnic time has come. High 5 pupils with Mrs. Fariss, their teacher, enjoyed a wiener roast at Mount Gilead campground. Virginia Bradley's mother took charge of all arrangements. The campground was chosen because the class became so interested in its history while on their unit of churches. They wished to visit this place, which is over a hundred years old.

Low 6 is planning a picnic to Adams' park.

Mrs. Mays' class, High and Low 3, is planning to combine an excursion to a dairy with a picnic lunch following the visit.

Low 1 is making preparations to go to Groover's lake to see the boats.

The Garden Club is busy finishing up as much work as possible before vacation. The children are also making plans for the care of the flowers during vacation. Our tall hollyhocks against the fence and the pink oxalis around the lily pool are especially beautiful at this time.

Lens and Shutter---Camera News

By JACQUES H. UPSHAW.

Amateur photographers have their eyes peeled for really good hints, as evidenced by the picture reproduced here, by Gus Boaz, of Calhoun, who was inspired to send it by Mr. Skvirsky's remarks last Sunday on local photographic subjects. Mr. Boaz's picture is a good example of one type of picture in which we of the south can excel. This portrait carries the message, I believe, of a man of the earth, "wise from lapsed winters," who has known many days of hot sun, and of cold winds, and has the courage for many more. Gus Boaz will make an exhibition print of the picture for the Atlanta National Amateur Salon this fall.

Some of you ladies who are irked with remarks about "hen parties" and female gossip festivals might ask your husbands and boy friends to give an illustration of what happens in an all-man meeting of amateur photographers. You may well ask, but you won't get the truth, so I'll try to give you an idea of what may — and usually does—happen.

What Happens.

Take, for instance, the case of seven or eight of the more rabid of the photographers being called together by Pat Murphey to discuss picture ideas. The evening may start more or less normally, with only a minimum of chaos, dominated perhaps by Bill Bradley's delicately modulated voice as he answers some less experienced photographer's questions on technique. Somebody or other — say Lawson Fields—will have a pocket full of pictures just made, which go the rounds and are complimented or commented on, as the case may be.

Ideas Fill Room.

Someone will unwittingly ask a provocative question—one which he hopes will give him an opening to elaborate on his own theories. But any such hope is vain, for being all egotists, everyone tries to answer at once, and the result is what you might expect. After a few minutes things simmer down, as when butter is added to the soup, and the calm voice of someone like Leonid Skvirsky will rise above the babble to contribute the first real idea of the evening. An incurable artist like George Wells is perhaps near, and, already on fire with some idea, launches forth with another worthwhile suggestion.

Well, that's a pretty good score, what with two ideas and the evening only half gone. But it is only the beginning, for now the tracks are cleared, the mail is in the bag, and there is a full head of steam. Sid Smith and Pat Murphey, their brains seething with great schemes, manage to get across a part of their enthusiasm to the rest; Leonard Rosinger and Ralph Uhry, quiet and secure in the dignity of their many prizes, venture a word now and then, always to the point. Roy Tippen concentrates his attention on winnowing the grain from the chaff, while I, tucked in a corner somewhere, try to hear and remember everything.

"Idea" Drunk

By midnight these formerly innocent men, now drunk with a kind of streamlined Olympian nectar, wander homeward with ideas that, could speculators only know them, would cause an instant and tremendous rise in all photographic stock.

And that, dear ladies, is what a photographic stag party is like when there is really something on foot.

A good idea is that which Leonard Rosinger is putting into execution. He clips from magazines, newspapers, and other periodicals pictures which he particularly likes, and pastes them in a scrap book. In his leisure he goes through the book, analyzes the pictures, and thus gets invaluable ideas on placing, lighting, rhythm, and other artistic elements.

Valuable Hint

That is a hint worth a great deal, and one sanctioned by the use of all great artists. All of them did—and still do—collect sketches for future guidance in the matter of pose, lighting, and design. Usually they are their own sketches; and indeed, there is no reason why a photographer shouldn't supplement his collection of pictures with sketches of his own. For no matter how crude they are, they will be able to recall to mind an idea for a photograph, which can be crystalized later.

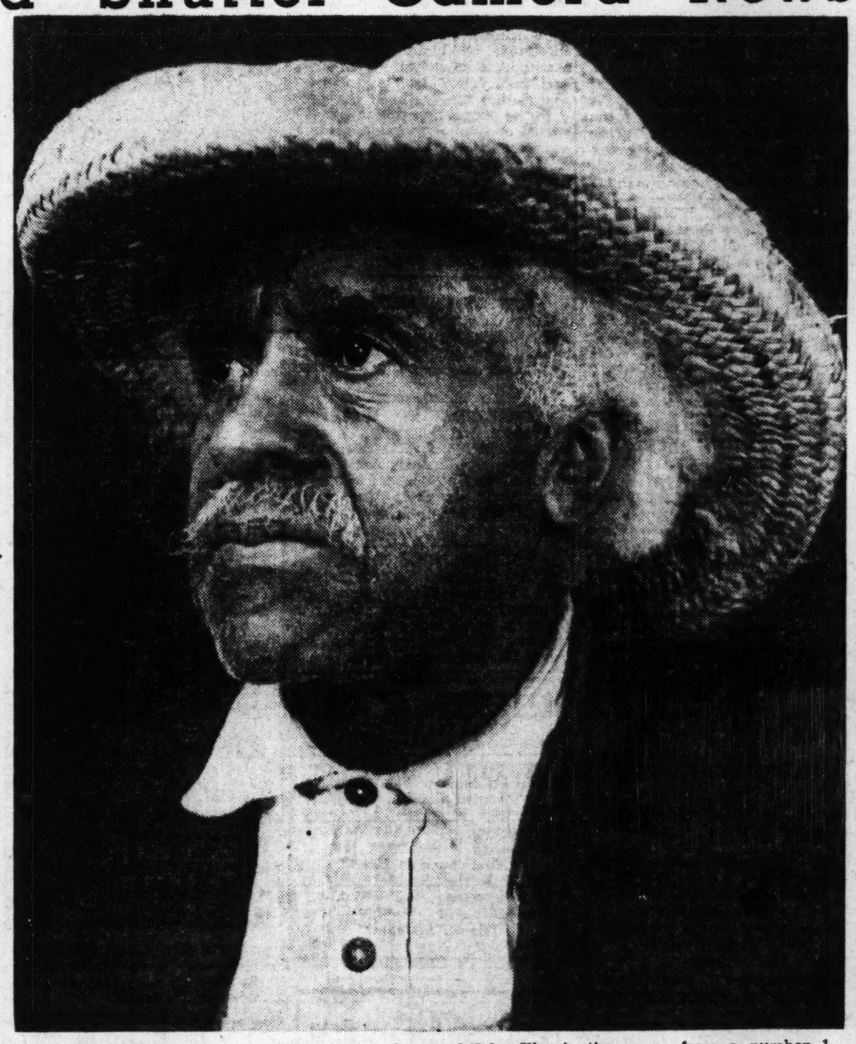

Pity the poor columnist. Last week I inadvertently reported Sid Smith having won a prize that was really awarded to Leonard Rosinger, thereby interchanging the names of two outstanding club members and regular prize winners. Leonard reacted in a most gentlemanly manner, and the first I knew of the mistake was when I received a card, delivered by George Wells (Rosinger's second), inviting me to a duel at sunrise.

Perturbed by Duel

Naturally a little perturbed over this event, my consternation was considerably augmented when a few minutes later there arrived from Sid Smith a similar invitation— to a duel at precisely the same time! Here was indeed a situation calling for strategy. But my opponents were nothing if not considerate, and offered me the choice of weapons. I chose snow balls, free style.

Henry Cassel, collector of antique exposure meters, has recently taken up stereo-photography, which he says has plenty of thrills in store for whoever has not tried it. Sandwiched in between his work on stereo-photography and the consuming interest of studying old apparatus, he directs plans for the Atlanta Camera club's annual outing, to be held at Moore's Lake, on the evening of June 14.

And so ends this salmagundi, which may be improved by the addition of a generous quantity of salt.

This portrait was made by Gus Boaz, of Calhoun, Ga. He used a Rolleicord camera, SS Pan film, and an exposure of 1/25 sec. at f/5.6. Illumination came from a number 1 and a number 2 photoflood, at a distance of 5 feet from the subject.

CENTRAL NIGHT'S SCHOOL YEAR ENDS

Commencement Exercises With Award of Prizes On Tuesday Night.

On Tuesday night, May 23, at the city auditorium, Central Night School held its 27th commencement exercise, graduating 107 boys and girls. The Georgia Evening School scholarship went to Miss Ruth Rauschenberg, with Forrest Hall being named alternate. The scholarship to Woodrow Wilson College of Law went to Morris "Buddy" Croft, with John E. Stell being named alternate. Besides these awards cups were presented to the winners and runners-up in the tennis tournament and honorable mention given a number of students who had perfect attend- for the entire year.

The senior class was sorry to learn of the untimely illness of Ruth Rauschenberg, who was operated on for appendicitis at a private hospital Tuesday morning. Miss Rauschenberg was to have received her diploma on the platform, also her scholarship, but we're all wishing Ruth a speedy recovery and trust that she will enjoy her studies at the evening college next year.

The class officers of each class are requested to meet at the school Sunday morning, June 4, at 9:30 for an outing; girls please bring lunch and date, also date's auto; if he hasn't one, come on anyhow and let's have some fun.

Your correspondent wishes to take this opportunity to thank each and every one for their kind cooperation during the school year and to wish you a pleasant vacation.

MARY J. GOGGANS.

SMILLIE CLASSES CAN VEGETABLES

Seek to Teach All Pupils Processes of Canning.

How surprised and happy the High Fourth grade were when they had won the prize for selling the most tickets for the play, "The District School." They are going to have a nice picnic with the prize money.

Scrapbooks on summer sports are being made by the Low Sixth grade.

Miss Broach's children wrote a letter to two of their former pupils, Joan and Lula Trenary, who have moved to Winchester, Ill.

The Low First grade planted some Johnny Jumpups and moss in their rock garden.

We enjoyed hearing the O'Keefe Junior High school band last week when they came to play for us.

On Thursday we had the cooperation of the parents and children at a paper sale to make the final payment on our bass drum.

The pansies planted by the Fifth grade are growing fine and are almost ready to bloom.

All of the classes are striving to bring jars for the canning of fruits and vegetables. Mrs. Wright, our cafeteria manager, is making a dish of candy for each 100 per cent class.

Buddy Stone was very enthusiastic about his visit to New York. He enjoyed mostly the General Motors building and the amusement area at the World's Fair.

Craig Langford, another patrol boy who went, was impressed by Radio City and the television demonstration he saw there.

JONES SCHOOL STAGES PRE-VACATION FETES

Some of our Jerome Jones village boys and girls are looking forward to having a good time at Camp Rutledge this week end.

The chorus had a nice party in the auditorium on Tuesday.

Our citizens are working hard to finish up our work in good order. We have enjoyed our year together.

The kindergarten is planning a picnic next week.

The first grade will have a party the last week of school. They went to Delore's home to see her chickens and ducks.

High 2 pupils are studying beautiful pictures and the great artists who painted them. They will have a picnic before school closes.

Low 2 and Low 3 are planning a party for the last day of school.

High 3 and Low 4 are planning a party and also a picnic before the last day of school.

Low 5 and Low 6 had their class picnic last Tuesday. They had a picnic lunch with lemonade and hunkies.

High 5 went to Camp Rutledge for the week end and had a wonderful time. Next week Mrs. Richardson, one of their mothers, is giving their class a wiener roast.

George Armstrong and J. W. Barge of High 6 went with the Safety Patrolmen to the World's Fair. They reported a grand time.

RICH'S

'Gone With Wind' Filming Is Described

Atlanta Woman Watches as Living Characters Enact Scenes of Book at California Studios.

.. The following article about the filming of "Gone With the Wind" was written by Mrs. Emily Robinson Head, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Robinson, of Atlanta. Mrs. Head recently visited the West Coast with her parents and several other Atlantans for the national bankers' convention.

Los Angeles: May 16, 1939.

Editor, The Constitution:

When I facetiously promised you a "story," little did I know of the breaks were were going to get in regard to visiting the studios. You know, it is not really an easy job to "crash the gates" but, thanks to our friends in the Bank of America, and their many courtesies, we not only crashed but were welcomed with open arms.

Nor is it an easy job to begin my "story" because it is all so involved and spread out. Of course, I'm no reporter and, by the way, many apologies to that very charming lady, Susan Myrick, from Macon, and the Kurtzes, who are your real reporters on G. W. T. W., and if I am "rushing in where angels fear to tread," I hope they will understand.

First of all, I must give credit where credit is due. They are all so efficient and are doing such a splendid job supervising and checking what is and what is not supposed to be a "good old southern custom."

They were all very cordial to us and tried to make us feel so important, especially myself, because I carried a notebook. As a matter of fact, however, I felt very unimportant that day when they finally ushered us into the real Holy of Holies in Selznick Studios where "G. W. T. W." is being shot.

Little Bonnie in Scene.

They were taking the scene where little Bonnie wakes up in the night and cries for her mother and her pony. We saw the pony, too, by the way—a darling little Shetland with a long mane. It was all very real. There was a big Victorian bed on the stage and little Camy King lying there, tiny and so pale, while Rhett—and believe me, Clark Gable is wonderful as Rhett and the father—bent over the child saying a few words (which I will not repeat because we have all read the book and know the scene so well).

Little Bonnie had just been put to work only the day before but is a wonderful little actress. However, it did require a good bit of patience to get her fully into the mood. It was a tremendous stage and full of cameras, people, debris, furniture, and things, all in great confusion except for that one scene which was being shot. We sat over to one side not daring to breathe scarcely. Old Pork and some of the other characters were there, too, in their costumes waiting to be called.

Finally, the bell rang—that is the crucial moment. The cameras started clicking and making history. We watched. I'll never forget it. The next thing I knew we were being introduced to Mr. Gable. I suppose most girls have looked forward to or imagined just what they would say at the momentous occasion of meeting Clark Gable. Well, I was so completely carried away with the unique situation and so flattered that they treated me like a "reporter" that I forgot to remove my horn-rimmed glasses!

"Rhett" Practices.

Rhett said to me, "I've been practicing up saying 'hahd hahted.' How am I doin'? I couldn't help but laugh and I said, "Swell," just like that. I think I told him this, too, because he laughed as if he were really amused and asked me, "What have you got in that vicious little red book?" I told him I would really be ashamed if he knew because it contained a great deal of miscellaneous notes, telephone numbers, and what-not. I told him that I had it pah-tic-u-lah-ly to write something nice about him and the others who were being so kind to us, and that I wasn't really a reporter at all but had promised to write about my visit to the studios in my own words, through my own eyes. He was extremely nice, and when the cameraman finally said, "We would like a picture of Mrs. Head and Mr. Gable alone," I felt as if we were really old friends.

Then we said goodbye to Rhett and to Miss Myrick. She and I giggled together for a minute and I said, "I hope they will not say 'you-all' to one person." "Only over my dead body" was her quick comeback.

Then Mr. and Mrs. Kurtz, who are the technical advisers, took us out to see "Atlanta" and "Five Points," which they have reproduced on the sets. You cannot imagine it. There was the good old red soil of Georgia actually blowing around—in fact, "getting in your hair." We stood and watched. I was transplanted. There was Pittypat's house, just as real as anything you would want to see. It reminded me of a part of old Cone street in the block where my grandfather lived. Across the street was Dr. Mead's house and the old Central Presbyterian church, and the Jonathan Norcross store reproduced on the site of the First National Bank. The things in the show windows were very typical of those days: Shoes, the kind they wore then; old-fashioned loaves of bread; billboards on the wall with quaint wording and lettering.

"Burning of Atlanta."

Mrs. Kurtz told me they had just finished making scenes of the burning of Atlanta. On the "sidewalks" you could see manufactured blood" which actually looked real and gave me the creeps, signifying death in battle. A little farther out on the sets two real doctors were working day and night "bandaging" dummies to be scattered over the battlefield. It was all so real, and Dr. Stone—one of the young fellow's name—said his fingers were as sore as boils from "bandaging."

"I've been practicing up on saying 'hahd hahted,'" Clark Gable, who plays the role of Rhett Butler in the film version of "Gone With the Wind," tells Mrs. Emily Robinson Head, of Atlanta. She is chatting with him on a Hollywood set during her recent visit to the west coast. Mrs. Head said she found the star "extremely nice."

Then—the biggest thrill of all (except, of course, talking with the actors) was seeing "Tara" on a hill, an exact replica of a real Colonial house in the 60's. Mrs. Kurtz told us and showed us that it was just a "front" really, as were the stores and other buildings, because all indoor scenes were made in the studio proper. Everybody was so nice to us and gave us a great deal of time. We were then taken to the private offices of Mr. Shapiro and later driven back to our hotel.

All of this someone else could have described, of course, but they would not have had my particular reaction, which was that the 'movies' or reel life is sometimes more real than that life outside the studios. They all live it, breathe it, think it. It is not just a racket, and they seem like one big, happy family. They work so hard and are so big-hearted. Apparently they do not have time to gasp about the stock market, politics or wars. It seems to me they are a very happy people.

Tiny Celluloid Rolls.

Then another thing. We passed so many buildings which are given over to the developing and making of these pictures. When you look at these wonderful, magnificent structures you would expect to see something tremendous—like engines and huge machinery—come forth from them; instead, out come these tiny rolls of celluloid which are launched for the entertainment and pleasure of the whole world.

Today we, the Robinsons, Helen and Ryburn Clay had lunch with Jane Withers' father. He doesn't mind being known as "Jane's father" because he is so proud of his little daughter. She is a honey—so natural, and such a normal child. We went to the studio where her new picture, "The Chicken Wagon Family," is being made. It was a rural scene. She was playing with Leo Carrillo. When we came in she rushed over to greet her daddy: threw her arms around him and kissed him. We were introduced (only I didn't wait; I just grabbed her and told her I was so glad to see her). We all had pictures made with her, too, and finally she asked to have one taken with her daddy alone. I thought this was very sweet. We chatted, and I asked her what she liked to do when she was not working. She said she liked making scrapbooks; that she liked boys a little but didn't go to dances yet, and that she would really like to have a picture of my young son in his G. M. A. uniform. I'm glad to send it to her.

Jane Withers' House.

Then we went to her house. It's a small ranch. Jane loves animals. She has them all—birds, dogs, a goat, parrots. There's a guest house with recreation room for the grownups, and a bar, and Mr. Withers is a wonderful host. Upstairs is Jane's playroom, where she has at least a thousand dolls. They told us she loves dolls and is very domestic, and that nearly every week end she has a little visitor—not necessarily a child from the movie contingent.

We then went down to the house where they all live. Jane has a secretary to handle her fan mail and a teacher, who is her constant companion. By the way, Jane is barely 13 and is in the ninth grade. She studies at the studio all the time she is not working.

My personal reaction to Jane is this: That she is healthy and normal, and one of the most friendly girls I have ever seen, with personality plus. They were all most cordial and hospitable, and interested in giving us pleasure.

Visits Warner Brothers.

May 18.

This morning, as I was finish? ing up what I have just written, the telephone rang, and our very kind friend, Mr. Price, from the Bank of America, called to say he had arranged a special visit for us to Warner Brothers studios, the largest in the world. We were to lunch there and afterwards see some more takes of G. W. T. W. I had exactly 10 minutes to bathe, dress, and as he put it "look glamorous." I think I made it in 15 minutes and joined the Clays downstairs at the florist's shop, where Ryburn insisted upon buying orchids for both Helen and me. I think he should buy them for Helen even if it is "gilding the lily," but I felt that perhaps they would be "Gone With the Wind," too, by the time I did all the things I had to do that day.

Then we got in Mr. Price's car and away we went. He is without a doubt one of the most entertaining people himself I have ever seen, and everyone in all the studios seems to know him and get a huge kick out of him. He is the perfect contact man at the Bank of America, and when visitors—and "nuisances," like ourselves—come to town he shows them the sights, does Hollywood any way you want it done, and arranges everything.

We had a wonderful time and were all in marvelous humors. First, we went to Warner Brothers, were taken through three private offices, and eventually introduced to a Mr. Eddy (not Nelson, but a relative). He was very businesslike but also very charming and took us immediately to the famous "green room," where only the stars and directors lunch. We saw a good many people in their makeup but didn't meet any of them that day because we were a little late. The food in the studio dining rooms is very good and extremely well prepared. It is served by uniformed white waitresses, and the menus are of a substantial nature because, believe me, these people work hard. Next to digging ditches, I feel that acting uses up your vital energy and requires more stoking of the engine than any other job.

Mystery Film.

From there we visited several sets. Everyone was busy and intent upon what he was doing. We saw them making a mystery picture where someone's chauffeur had just been murdered. This scene was laid in the kitchen. Then we saw Humphrey Bogart and Lya Lys, a beautiful Russian actress, who just completed a role in "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." I didn't find out the name of the mystery film they were doing, but it was on the order of "Dracula" and they apologized for their ghoul-like makeup. We then saw Joel McCrea making "Career Man". Had our pictures taken with him. After that we walked and walked everywhere, seeing what they used for street scenes, south sea island scenes, the Latin quarter of Paris, and an ocean liner. It is so amusing to walk past a few brownstone "fronts" into a delightful couryard or patio, and then come down the gangplank of an ocean liner, for instance. The streets were not all paved and we had to walk across some cobblestones. This was in the "Latin quarter" and I had on the wrong shoes—very wrong!

Finally he took us back to Selznick's, which has really the most beautiful exterior of any of the studios—a lovely colonial home very much on the order of Jim Dickey's, on Pace's Ferry road. This is where "Gone With the Wind" is being made. What a coincidence, for even the exterior looks southern!

Today they were really doing their stuff and this—which I am just about to tell you—is so far the high spot of the trip!

Scarlett's Bedroom.

The stage showed Scarlett's bedroom and adjoining Rhett's library. Little Bonnie had just been born and Rhett was doing the "anxious father"—pacing the floor with old Mammy (played by Hattie McDaniels, who is herself very well known), right behind him. She was saying "Cahm yo'sef, Mars Rhett," and apologizing for the baby not being a boy. The furniture and lighting were beautiful. A fire was burning on the hearth in this charming room of period furniture.

We then saw Scarlett's bedroom, but they were not shooting a scene there today. You see, they do not follow the story sequence at all. For instance, two days before we saw Bonnie, a child of three or four, in her bed asleep; today she was being born.

Scarlett's room was exquisite—the furniture Louis XV, aubussant upholstery, of the baroque period. A gorgeous bed, dressing table, chairs and a handsome bassinet with a doll in it. Of course, they will get a real live baby for some of the scenes. There were flowers in vases, and the dominating color scheme was rose and pink.

Miss Leigh Off Set.

We didn't meet Miss Leigh. She was not working this day. In fact, they told us that she was at home ill with a cold, but we saw her photographs, even a gorgeous life-size portrait hanging in Rhett's bedroom where they were working when we came on the set. She is all that Hollywood says she is—gorgeous and typical of the character she portrays. I should love to meet her, and Mr. Price, who can fix anything, says we probably will.

Mr. Price says that Helen Clay reminds him of Miss Leigh: that they are just about the same size and have similar mannerisms, though their features are not the same.

An amusing thing happened. When we first came in where they were working, the setup was so terribly different from the day of our first visit that we hardly recognized it. There was just as much confusion and machinery in evidence, although these elaborate scenes existed all the while. A sort of improvised stairway ran up one side of the stage and they told Helen and me to climb up where we could see better, but someone said "It'll ruin your black dresses." It was very crude with no "backs" to the steps. Helen went up ahead of me very gracefully indeed, and carefully lifted the skirt of her smart frock, revealing a beautiful taffeta petticoat, pleated and ruffled and printed with rosebuds. "I'm all prepared," she laughed. However, I wasn't. I had to be a little more careful, and guess what I sat on?

Mr. Price had just handed me the pictures they made of the Atlanta crowd the first day there, and there were several very poor ones of me with Rhett Butler. (By the way, these were made in what they afterwards told me was the set for Belle Watling's house (the hussy!) Imagine! However, I'm getting away from my story, so I carefully laid the envelope down on the narrow steps and tactfully "sat upon it"—Rhett Butler and all. About this time Clark Gable looked up, saw us, and recognized me, and he waved in the most friendly manner. It was all so exciting, as you can well imagine, and another full and enjoyable day was had by all.

At Culver City.

May 22.

Well, I thought our numerous visits to the studios were over but today at 12 Mr. Price called again and announced that an interview with Miss Leigh was possible. I'm so sorry to say I had to forego this pleasure because I had already promised to lunch and spend the afternoon elsewhere. My mother, who had not been able to accompany us on some of the other trips, decided to go with Mr. Price to Culver City. They lunched at Warner Bros., as I had done several days before, then went over to Selznick's and met Miss Leigh.

Mother had a delightful visit with her. They sat together for a long while and chatted. Tonight I eagerly hung on every word mother told me and finally I said to her, "But didn't she tell you anything about herself?" "No, she really didn't talk about herself at all, but she said she hoped she could live up to the expectations and traditions."

When mother said that she was really unbelievably beautiful and exquisite, small, dainty, plump enough to look healthy, and fair, with the loveliest long, wavy brown hair she had ever seen, and she truly had the eyes of Scarlett. She was dressed in a most attractive costume of the 60's, and mother saw her actually making the scenes we saw them preparing, when they brought in the wounded from the battlefield. You will recall, of course, that I saw them bandaging dummies the other day, and now there were many real people scattered amidst the dummies, and they were being moved in the ambulances.

Southern Accent.

After this rather dusty and very hectic outdoor scene, mother and Miss Leigh walked back up the hill together and got into a car. Mother says Miss Leigh is extremely gracious and charming, and has actually almost acquired a real southern accent. She is here alone and lives with Miss Myrick, who acts as her coach and secretary. Mother was simply thrilled to death and could scarcely believe that anything could be so realistic as what she saw this afternoon.

How I wish I could have been there again, but today I just didn't know in time. If they really come to Atlanta when the picture is released, we want to entertain them all and return the hospitality they have shown us.

It seems that all Hollywood—in fact, all Los Angeles, is really very "Gone-With-the-Wind"-conscious. I was in a prominent night club the other night, and they even had a funny and naughty little song ending something like this:

"But Mr. Selznick calls it Scarlett while in Paris eet ees love!"

Anyway, everyone knows all about Scarlett out here, and it's lots of fun for me being from Atlanta.

ELKS DOT ROADS WITH SAFETY SIGNS

Georgians Join in National Campaign.

Highway signs warning all Elks to drive safely spot Georgia roads today as the result of a campaign inaugurated by the Georgia Elks Association, Charles G. Bruce, of Atlanta, president of the association, announced.

The signs are a part of the national safety campaign sponsored by the Elks. Bruce said that bureaus of information to furnish road maps, guides to points of interest, and travel information generally are to be set up by the various Georgia Elks lodges.

Ann Sheridan, Fibber McGee and Many Others Visit 'Screen Guild.'

Alec Templeton, young English pianist who has been blind since birth, will be heard on the Sunday Evening Hour during its broadcast to be heard over WGST at 8 o'clock tonight.

Announcement of the 1939 Prix de Rome music award winner will be made exclusively over the Columbia network when Howard Barlow directs the Columbia Broadcasting Symphony in a concert dominated by American prize compositions to be heard over WGST at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

An hilarious romantic mixup is inevitable when Ann Sheridan, Fibber McGee and Molly, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Nelson Eddy, Roland Young and Oscar Bradley's orchestra headline the Screen Guild revue to be heard over WGST at 6:30 o'clock tonight.

Deems Taylor will be in friendly company when he joins "The Circle" during its broadcast to be heard over WSB at 9 o'clock tonight for two of his friends in the field of music, Lawrence Tibbett and Robert Emmet Dolan, invited him to the program.

George Brent, star of motion pictures, will be heard in a one-act play with Ameche during the "Don Ameche Hour" program broadcast to be heard over WSB at 7 o'clock tonight.

Helen Hayes stars in the second and concluding chapter of the Silver Theater season finale., "Crossroads for Two," during the broadcast to be heard over WGST at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

"Girls' Dormitory," a radio play based on the motion picture success of the same name, will be the Hollywood Playhouse production to be heard over WSB at 8 o'clock tonight, with Anne Shirley costarring with Charles Boyer.

"The Ghost Bride," by Arch Oboler, is the "Knickerbocker Playhouse" half-hour drama to be heard over WGST at 9 o'clock tonight. Elliott Lewis will star in the production. Oboler, prominent radio writer, will receive the Knickerbocker Award.

Larry Clinton, composer, arranger and baton waver extraordinary, will lead his orchestra atop the Bandwagon for the broadcast to be heard over WSB at 6:30 o'clock tonight.

The Planets---Your Daily Guide

By BERNICE DENTON PIERSON.

Bernice Denton Pierson, eminent astrologer, has prepared this forecast in brief for a handy reference convenience to Constitution readers. This guide will aid you, for it indicates the most auspicious time to begin any new endeavor, whether it be business, social or domestic.

MAY 28, SUNDAY: Today is filled with various influences, which will bring you mixed feelings—at times you will be on the heights, then the pendulum can swing you just as far in reverse. The better part of the day will be before 11:10 a. m., when affairs can be attended to with pleasantness. Affairs around the home, and those of a social nature are favored. Between 11:10 a. m. and 1:46 p. m. give yourself time to think twice before you act or enter into new deals, for others may have an ulterior motive in approaching you. The afternoon hours favor fraternal and humanitarian pursuits.

MAY 29, MONDAY: Before 8:41 new affairs entered into will be subject to change, with a lack of ability to continue them as they were started. Between 8:41 a. m. and 4:25 p. m. does not favor dainty affairs and ideas that call for fine finesse, but it is an auspicious period for doing things that call for great strength, either physical or mental. The remainder of the day favors social activities.

MAY 30, TUESDAY: Are you planning on advertising your wares, whether it is strictly advertising or trying to sell yourself? If so, plan to do it today. If you are wanting to accomplish something that others think is too eccentric for practical use, now is your day.

MAY 31, WEDNESDAY: Decisions made today may be a deciding influence on your future. Erraticism, high tension, are in order, as you will profit more by taking the "path of the least resistance." That is, do not make a change or enter into some new agreement unless it comes about naturally.

JUNE 1, THURSDAY: Before 3:58 p. m. use conservative methods in all things. This is an inauspicious time for dealings with those who hold high positions and for seeking favors. From 3:58 p. m. throughout the remainder of the day, exercise care in contacts with others, and be very careful to see that you know exactly to what you sign your name. It will be more favorable to postpone making contracts.

JUNE 2, FRIDAY: Dealings with the opposite sex and affairs around machinery should be approached with much caution through 4:28 p. m. Your feelings and emotions will be "touchy," and though you are likely to have a great desire to get something done, you are apt to do the wrong thing. Be cautious in travel.

JUNE 3, SATURDAY: The morning hours and until 1:58 p. m. are only favorable for progressive ideas and affairs of an unusual nature. This is not an auspicious day for risky endeavors. The afternoon and evening are a good period for entertainments.

HOW TO USE THESE INDICATIONS TO BEST ADVANTAGE.

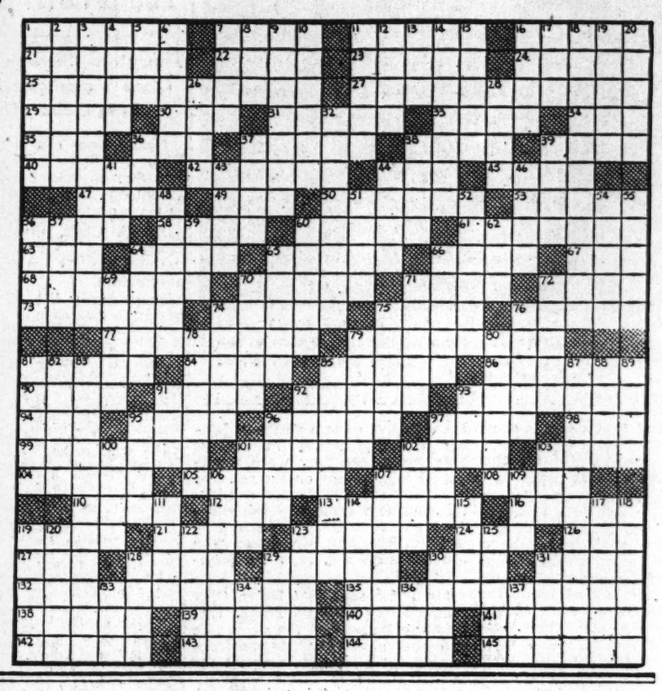

Should you receive an important telephone call, giving you the first news you have of a certain thing, look and see if the influences at that particular time are friendly or unfriendly. The outcome of that call will be colored by the influence prevailing then.

If you wish an astrological chart covering your sign of the Zodiac, Bernice Denton Pierson will be glad to send it to you. State your birth month and date year unnecessary). Write your name and address plainly. Accompany this with 10 cents in stamps or currency to cover clerical expenses, together with self-addressed, stamped envelope. Address: Bernice Denton Pierson, care Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Chart will be sent promptly.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle

Water Your Garden Now For August Drouth

By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

There is a material which can be used at the present time in the garden, which will result in holding moisture in your garden or on your lawn, not only for the present but also for the future. Almost every year we have a bad drouth during the mid-summer — oftentimes in the month of August, and the proper preparation of the soil at the present time, will be good insurance against the loss of plants or the stunting of plants at that time.

As a matter of fact there are many ways that gardens and lawns may be watered, and if you will allow us to define watering as an act of giving plants moisture, regardless of the source of this moisture, we will describe these several methods of watering. The first method that comes to mind is that of watering with a garden hose, either by the use of a water sprinkler or nozzle, or by the use of a hose without a nozzle, following more or less the irrigation method. It might be interesting here, to note the new type of watering with a long canvas tube which allows the water to trickle out slowly right on the surface of the soil.

Second, and the method used by all farmers, is shallow cultivation. We generally think of this work as being a method of cultivation rather than of watering, or as a method of destroying grass, but primarily its purpose is that of producing a dust mulch on the surface of the soil, which will stop the sun from drawing moisture into the sky. Moisture travels through the ground through capillary attraction and this dust mulch cuts this method off completely.

The third method is the one that we want to describe today, and a method that may be used in almost every garden and lawn operation at the home, namely, that of supplying humus to the soil. As a mulch for shrubs or perennial borders, or as a mulch on roses, these various kinds of mulching materials may be used to a depth of two to three inches. However, in the case of lawns, it is better to apply not more than one-quarter of an inch, at each application.

Mulch Sources.

Probably the most widely used source of mulch material is that of saving leaves and other garden refuse, allowing them to rot in piles for about one year before using them in the garden. There are certain chemicals that may be used for hastening this process. Another method, recommended by the State Department of Agriculture, is the use of 200 pounds of acid phosphate to each ton of garden refuse. The chemicals will hasten the rotting process up to about 60 to 90 days' time. The method recommended by the State Department of Agriculture will carry on the rotting process in about six months. Nature, unaided, will carry on this process in about one year.

The second source of humus material that is widely used, is stable manure. This is best when taken from a stable where hay or straw is used as a bedding material, rather than from one that has used shavings. Hay or straw will rot in a few months' time, while shavings require several years of rotting. This source is very rich in fertilizer and will improve not only the mechanical condition, but also the chemical condition of the soil.

However, the most widely used material which is on the market at the present time, is peat humus or peat moss. One of the most satisfactory types of humus material is the one known as Florida peat humus. Today we would like to describe this to you.

1. Moisture: Florida humus is the best "water container" in its field (water holding capacity: 581.12%). Your lawn when properly treated with Florida humus, will stay fresh and green during hot, dry weather when other lawns in the neighborhood are parched and brown.

2. Plant Food: Florida humus, by laboratory test, is an ideal medium for bacterial action, which is nature's way of transforming raw chemicals into available plant food. Expensive fertilizers are worthless without humus to make them available to your flowers and grasses. Furthermore, unlike most other soil conditions, Florida humus is rich in organic nitrogen which is released, little by little at every wetting, and stored through dry periods. Thus, Florida humus acts as a slow, progressive plant food for many seasons. It will not replace fertilizers, but it will reduce considerably the amount required.

3. Proper Soil Structure: Florida humus improves the structure of all soils, promoting vigorous root development. It prevents the packing of heavy soils and the baking of "clayey" soils, permitting air and moisture to reach the roots. It gives the needed "friable" texture to loose, dry, sandy soils.

General: Florida humus should always be incorporated into the soil (except in the case of existing lawns, where it is used as a top dressing and is carried down into the soil by rains or watering). There is no danger of using too much Florida humus, since it is itself an ideal medium for plant growth. It cannot burn your plants nor sour your soil. For general use, however, an inch of Florida humus broadcast and dug into the soil is plenty. A little more may be required for very sandy or very clayey soils. Water immediately after application.

For Lawns: A lawn is a heavy feeder, requiring a productive soil, rich in humus. For new lawns: apply 1-2 to 1 inch Florida humus, broadcast and mix thoroughly with the soil to a depth of 4 to 5 inches before seeding. For existing lawns: to maintain the humus content essential to strong, healthy growth, top-dress each spring or fall with 1-4 to 1-2 inches of pure Florida humus or a mixture or Florida humus and loam in equal quantities.

For Flower Beds: Apply Florida humus about an inch deep, working thoroughly into the soil. Water after application.

Rock Gardens: In the extremely shallow soil of rock gardens, plants will thrive only if the soil has excellent structural properties and unusual water holding capacity. Otherwise, plants will die of thirst or become weak and straggly because of poor root development. For best results, plant in a mixture containing Florida humus and soil in equal quantities. Keep the humus content high by adding Florida humus — a half inch, spread broadcast and thoroughly mixed with the soil—every two or three years.

Seed Beds: Work 1 inch of Florida humus into the soil. Add a 1-inch layer of pure Florida humus, screened through mosquito netting. Press small seed gently into humus with smooth board. Cover medium or large seed lightly with finely screened Florida humus. . . . Its freedom from weed and grass seed, its moisture-holding capacity, and the fine screening which it allows, make Florida humus an ideal medium for propagating even the smallest seed.

RECORDED RHYTHMS

By DUNCAN MacDOUGALD JR.

If you've somehow never gotten around to listening to classical music, you really ought to give it a fair chance. And gate, that's no jive. Too many folks have false preconceptions about serious music, and unfortunately regard it as a hyper-high falutin' form of esthetics too high-brow and too intellectual for their enjoyment.

But that's the wrong attitude. Music is something every man can enjoy —even Longfellow calls it "the universal language of mankind," and after all, it's a part of everyone's cultural heritage to be on hearing terms with at least a few bars of the classics. So forget about its being "classical," forget the esoteric commentaries of the critics with all their phoney-sounding "andantes" and "allegros"—just sit back, listen and enjoy its sheer and obvious bearties.

Take Tschaikowsky—the great and gloomy Russian—for example. Of course you know the hit "Our Love" was lifted directly from his overture, "Romeo and Juliet." There's a moving reading of this lovely music by Koussevitsky and the Boston Symphony that's a grand introduction to the "classics." If you like "Our Love" as a dance transcription, you'll get a real thrill out of the poignant beauty and tender pathos of the melody as the melancholy Tschiakowsky composed it. This "love music" is first heard as a haunting English horn solo; later the orchestra develops the themes to eloquent heights of impassioned emotions.

Tschiakowsky is enjoying quite a "revival" nowadays, so it's a good idea to be up on the greatest of Russian composers. His lovely "None But the Lonely Heart" has also been "swung," and there's a quite charming modernization, "The Droschky Drag," of his Andante Cantabile by the New Friends of Rhythm—7 cats from the NBC symphony who really get off a solid mess on the strings.

But for the most impressive Tschiakowsky, you've got to hear one of his symphonies. His masterpiece is the Sixth—the "Pathetique," and there's a glowing new recording by Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia symphony. Here is Tschaikowsky at his most moving best, pouring forth an agonising lament of almost pathological melancholia and intolerable sadness. Here are passages of sublime loveliness, poignant, soul-searching and thrillingly moving. Incidentally, the song, "No Star Is Lost" is an emasculate derivative (apparently) of one of the exquisite melodies in the first movement. Few symphonies are so sheerly lovely as the Pathetique, and it's music anyone can enjoy.

And his Fourth Symphony—as played by Willem Mengelberg and the Amsterdam Concertgebouw orchestra—likewise contains many passages of great appeal—graceful and lovely melodies, an utterly fascinating 3rd movement of "Capricious Arabesques" from daintily plucked strings and a gorgeous finale, thrilling in its magnificent display of all the forces of the orchestra.

Then there's Debussy, who gave us around 1890 the melody for "My Reverie," a composition he considered not only unimportant but also quite bad. It's pretty banal now, but if you hear Walter Gieseking's new piano solo on Columbia you'll find it refreshing, and beautiful in a new and different way.

Debussy was the impressionist of music. If you, like Rodin's sculpture, Monet's paintings, and the verse of Mallarme and Verlaine, you'll of course be interested in Debussy. He was the tone poet of mists, and floating clouds, of dancing waters and starry skies, conveying through diaphanous impressions the sublest moods of nature.

Two of Debussy's most wondorous creations are "The Afternoon of a Faun," almost as widely known as "My Reverie," and "Clair de Lune" (Moonlight), available on Victor by the sensitive Mr. Stokowski, and the Philadelphia Symphony. I suggest you hear these shimmering, almost magical visions in sound; they're fascinatingly beautiful to any ears, and form an ideal introduction to the wonderful works of Debussy.

Walter Gieseking's recent album of Debussy's "Preludes" has been enthusiastically acclaimed by the classicists. But you don't have to be a classicist to enjoy Giesekings delicate interpretations of Debussy's intangible impressions of languorous perfumes in the evening air, picturesque sails adrift on a placid sea and other suggestive tone pictures of the myriad moods of nature.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, and Pepsin-ize Acid Stomach Too

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach-relief, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Test: prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today! (Adv.)

MAY 28, 1934.

Dionne quintuplets, five phenomenal daughters of Oliva and Elzire Dionne, born near Callander, Ontario. Against all precedent in medical history, the quintuplets, Yvonne, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie, continue to thrive as they pass their fifth birthday anniversary. These children, weighing only 11½ pounds six days after their premature birth, were made wards of the King by the government of Ontario and thus rescued them from the hazards and handicaps of freak exploitation. The attending physician was Dr. Allan Dafoe, who continues to be their medical director, as well as one of their four guardians. The quints' fortune is estimated at $600,000.

Constantinople, famous in history as the caiptal of the Roman empire in the East for 11 centuries, fell to the Turks and became the capital of the Ottoman dominion. In regard to its influence over the course of human affairs, Constantinople's only rivals are Athens, Rome and Jerusalem. The city was founded by Constantine the Great in A. D. 328 and named New Rome to indicate its political dignity.

Voltaire, one of the world's great literary figures, died in Paris at the age of 84. In craftsmanship, at once versatile and accomplished, he has no superior and scarcely a rival. He decided at the age of 17 to devote his life to literature, becoming a playwright, a poet, a novelist and a pamphleteer. His literary aptitude and sense of style are unsurpassed. His greatest fault is an inveterate superficiality.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 lives lost and about $12,000,00 worth of property destroyed within an hour in the Johnstown (Pa.) flood. After heavy rains, a dam across the south fork of Stony creek, 12 miles above the city, built in 1852 to provide a storage reservoir, gave way, releasing 700 acres of water 60 to 70 feet deep. The torrent, 20 feet or more high, swept down the valley at 20 miles an hour.

Kentucky, first state west of the Allegheny mountains, admitted to the Union. To the Indians it was known as the "Dark and Bloody Ground" because of incessant war between the Iroquois and the Cherokees for its possession. First white man to sight the territory was LaSalle, who stopped at the falls where Louisville now stands in 1669, Harrodsburg (1774) was the first English settlement.

JUNE 2, 1866.

Armed force of 800 men, organized by the Fenian Brotherhood, Irish-American revolutionary secret society, on raid into Canada. Led by John O'Neill, the detachment had crossed the Niagara river and captured Fort Erie, opposite Buffalo. Many of his men deserted and the Fenians were routed by Canadian volunteers. The remnant surrendered to the American warship "Michigan" June 3.

JUNE 3, 1686.

Sir Edmund Andros became governor, with Boston as his capital, of the "Dominion of New England," into which Massachusetts, Maine, Plymouth, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New Hampshire were consolidated. His interference with colonial rights later caused the colonists to depose and arrest him, and the inter-colonial union was dissolved. Andros later was governor of Virginia.

Sordid, But Gripping.

THE AGE OF THE FISH. By Odon Von Horvath. (Translated by R. Wills Thomas.) The Dial Press, New York. 223 pp. $2.

This tale of a young school teacher harried by official regulations in a totalitarian state depicts in most realistic manner the cold, machine-like daily life of schoolboys and their master in the period immediately following the World War when, the author feels, "The souls of men . . . will become as rigid as the face of a fish."

Odon Von Horvath, who was killed by a falling tree while strolling along the Champs-Elysees in June last year, has captured in his own inimitable lucid style the ruthlessness, lovelessness, relentlessness of the age which matured under ideal fostered by totalitarian physcology, and has woven a beautiful novel which reaches a climax when one of the students kills a classmate for no other motive than to watch some one die.

The story unravels through the medium of the schoolteacher's insensitive spirit of honor rebelling against the false ideology of most of his pupils. The author follows the harassed teacher, who is powerless even to criticize, from the school to the military training camp. Here a pupil falls in love with a girl thief whom he allows to pilfer from his classmates. He keeps a diary of their clandestine affair and threatens to kill any one who reads it.

The schoolteacher happens to learn of the girls' nightly visits to the camp while her lover is on guard duty, picks the lock to read the diary, and is unable to close it. That day the boys' roommate is murdered, and to shield his mistress whom he thinks is the murderer, the boy accepts responsibility, steadfastly confessing guilt despite his mother's pleadings of his innocence at the trial. The boy calmly tells the court, "My mother's lying. The girl's worth more than you are."

With the aid of a few pupils and an old friend the teacher discovers the passionless culprit, who took advantage of circumstances pointing the crime to others, to "learn how things really are"—even to the point of murder.

LOW HEAVEN. By William J. Walters. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York. 275 pp. $2.50.

When Malcolm Carter turned again toward the Philippines to marry Allcia, it was with misgivings. Once there again, his heart faltered; the idea lost its appeal.

And when he saw half-breed Fely, cabaret cigaret girl, something else happened to him.

But when all hell broke loose and he found himself in the midst of an island hell, fighting desperately for safety and security, his life began to take ordered shape, and of this is made the story of "Low Heaven," a story which will linger long in your memory.

ASKING BIDS.

In response to requests for further explanation of partner's responses to the simple first-round asking bid which seems to be gaining a new foothold in popularity among more advanced contract players, the following examples are given today.

SET THE SUIT.

At the outset, bear in mind, asking bids should not be attempted with partners who do not thoroughly understand their meaning, and even then, only after the partnership has definitely established its trump suit.

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH.	EAST.
1 Spade	Pass	3 Spades*	Pass
4 Diam'ds	Pass	(?)

*North's double raise definitely establishes spades as the eventual trump suit. Four diamonds, any bid in a new suit, made at the four level or higher is now an asking bid. North is forced to respond as South seeks second-round control in the asked suit—diamonds. North's proper response with the following hands:

BID THE ACE.

(1) S—Q J 7 2 D—(8)
H—A K 3 C—10 9 6 5 3

Four hearts. Holding the King or singleton in the asked suit, the Ace of Hearts.

JUMP IN TRUMPS.

(2) S—A Q 10 7 5 D—(K) 5 3
H—8 C—Q J 10 9

Five spades. Holding the Diamond King, the ace of trumps. Jump in the trump suit.

RAISE ASKED SUIT.

(3) S—Q J 7 6 2 D—(A) 6 4 3
H—8 C—K Q J

Five Diamonds. With the ace or void in the asked suit only raise the asked suit.

FOUR NOTRUMP.

(4) S—A J 8 5 D—(5)
H—A 6 4 C—Q J 10 7 3

Four notrump. Singleton in the asked suit, two outside aces.

(5) S—K 10 7 4 D—(A) 6 4 3
H—J 10 C—A K Q

Four notrump. Ace of the asked suit, one outside ace.

FIVE NOTRUMP.

(6) S—Q 10 7 4 3 D—(A) 7 4 3
H—A 6 3 C—A

Five notrump. Ace of the asked suit, two outside aces.

(7) S—A Q 10 6 D—(K) 3
H—A 9 6 5 C—A 7 6

Five notrump. King or singleton in the asked suit, three outside aces.

THE SIGN OFF.

(8) S—K Q 8 6 5 D—(K) Q J
H—8 C—K Q 6 3

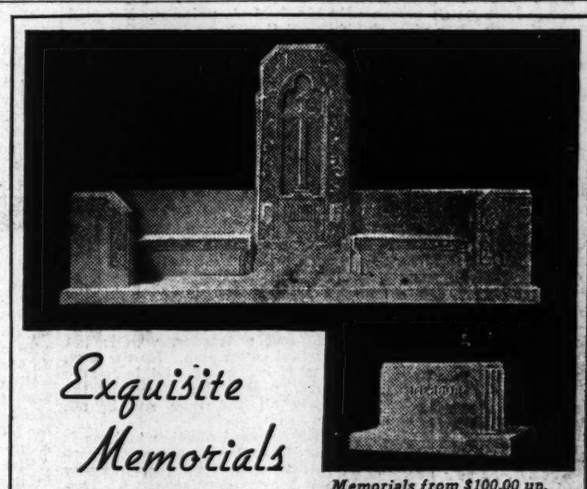

Four spades. Holding a "fit" for the asked suit, no outside aces, sign off.

(9) S—Q 10 6 5 D—9 8
H—A K 7 C—A 6 5 4

Four spades. Sign off lacking the "fit," even when holding outside aces.

HERE COMES THE BRIDE!

By Yolande Gwin.

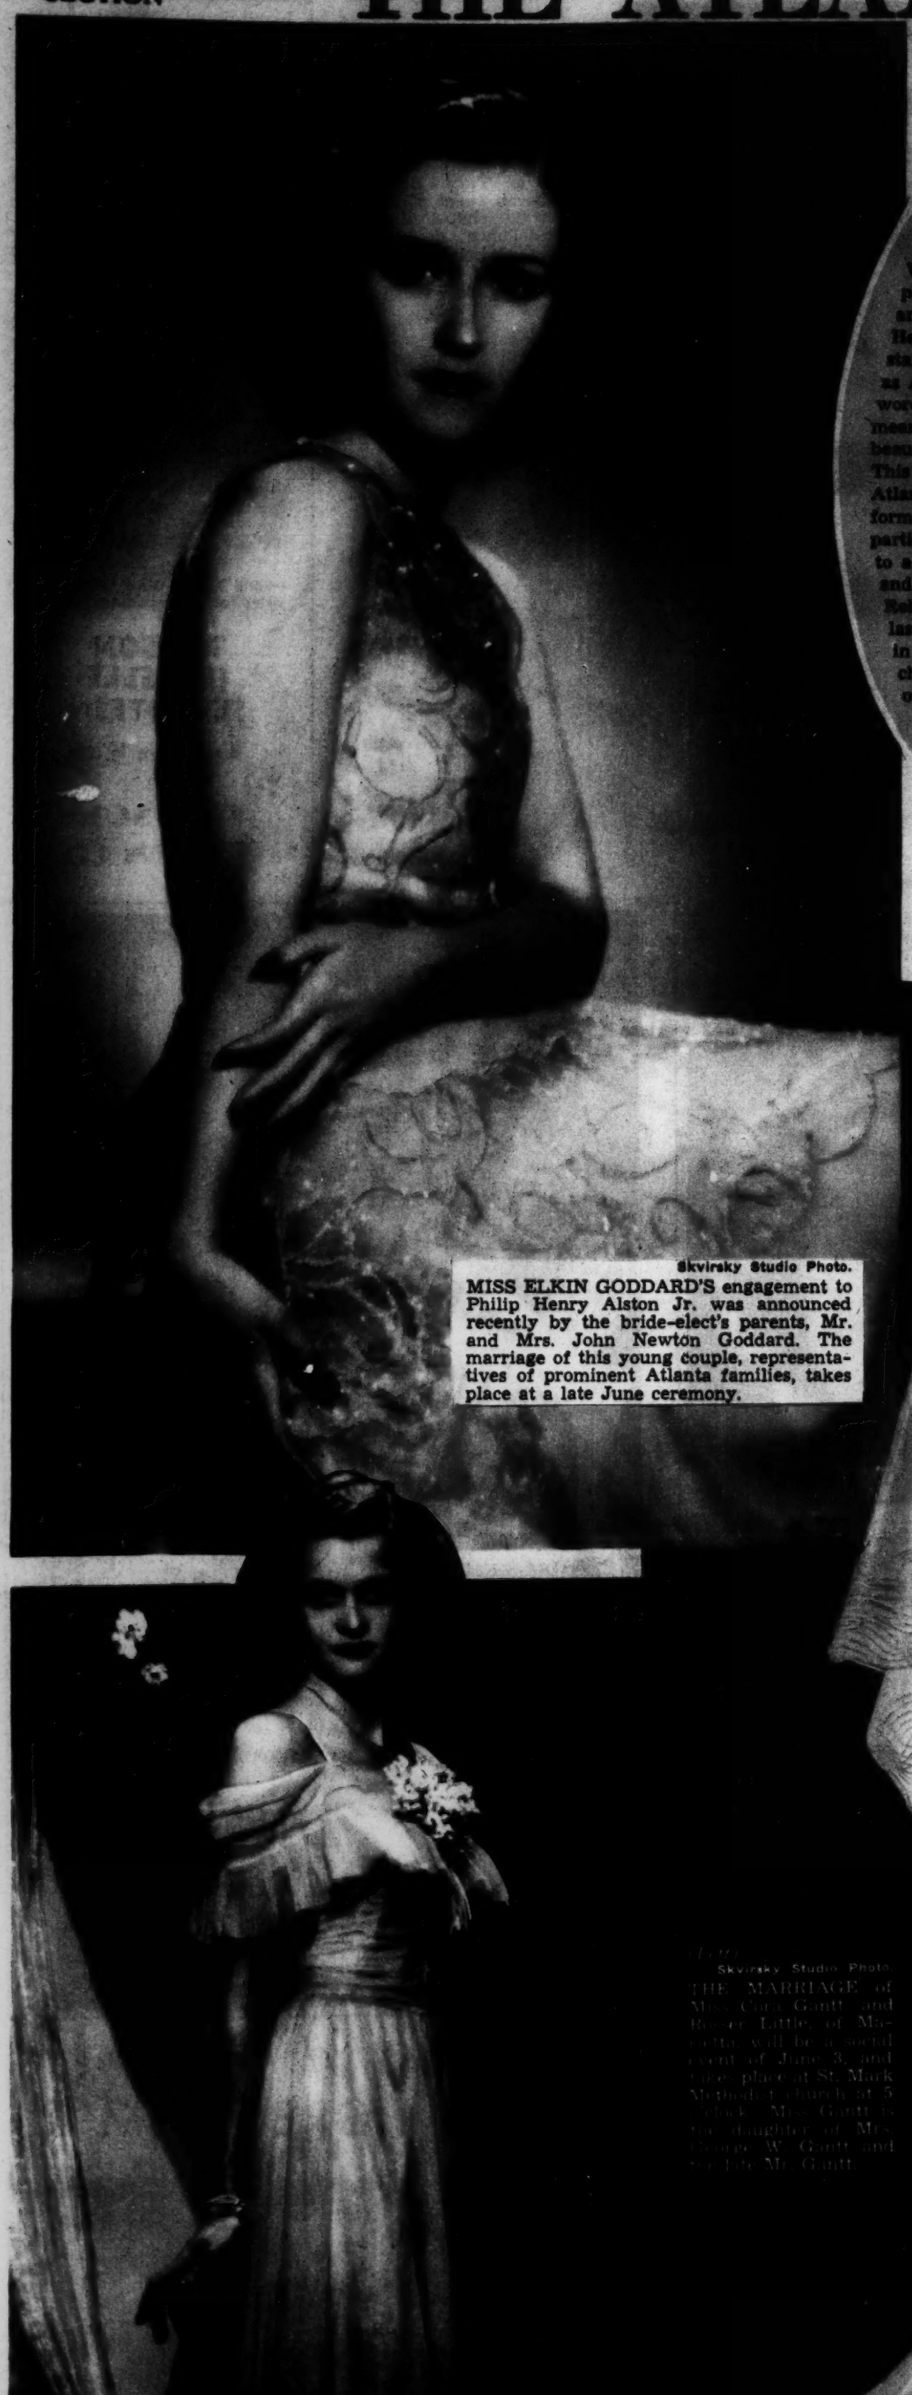

Here she comes to take the leading part in "The Wedding," the most talked of and most romantic play of June, which opens on Thursday with performances every day for thirty days.

Heralded by critics throughout the ages, this season's star will appear as beauty in its rarest hour. Each June as Atlanta girls have appeared on the wedding stage, old words in new phrases have been applied to give a new meaning and glowing accounts of her performance and beauty.

This year, as in other years, "The Wedding" will offer to Atlantans a different leading lady (and man) for each performance. Each girl will give the performance her own particular glamor, her own individuality and her own talent, to add her part to a role which all women long to play, and in which many have succeeded in becoming stars.

Rehearsals for "The Wedding" have lent romance to the last weeks of May, with parties galore given for those in the cast. The groom, who takes the leading male character in the play, is, like the bride, making only one appearance. New leading men have been signed for each of the following June performances. Important roles will be filled by mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters, while many will appear several times during the month in the roles of ushers, groomsmen, bridesmaids, flower girls and ministers. Minor roles will be taken by many Atlantans who have already been signed up for the entire June showing of "The Wedding."

Glimpsed during the past weeks, the star has appeared in many of the gorgeous gowns she will take on her bridal tour, for in the language of the theater, the show must go on! Her clothes are the last word in smartness and glamor; or they are sweetly romantic with frills and lace, or they are simply distracting in the mode of grandmother's day.

Rumor has it, the bride has been practicing her walk to the tune of "Lohengrin." There'll be no misstep or faltering foot as she goes to meet "HIM."

She knows her cue for her grand entry on the stage of life, which will be set with a 1939 background. She'll sweep into view with father. She'll not look to the right or left. She'll be demure and she'll drift in with that fragile, cherished look that will stir "HIM" to eloquence on the word "protect."

She will meet "HIM" at the altar. And later critics will write about her beauty and about her soft southern voice, and especially the line when she says "I do."

And after the performance, the groom, like his predecessors, when interviewed by the press, will say "I married an angel!"

RICH'S

DAINTINESS AND FEMININITY, KEYNOTE TO ATTRACTIVENESS OF THIS YEAR'S BRIDE

Toilet Accessories Become Necessities In Trousseau of Well-Groomed Bride.

By LILLIAN MAE.

Dainty! That's the appearance we expect when the bride starts her march to the altar. She may not be beautiful, but that will be forgotten if she has given thought and attention to daintiness.

In going through the shops during the past week or so, I've noted so many items the bride in her excitement of gathering her trousseau may have overlooked—those accessory items which are really necessities for the bride who must look her very best on that all-important day when she exchanges "Miss" for "Mrs."—and through the days that follow. For she can't afford to slack just because she has become "Mrs."

If her hair has been neglected—or even if it hasn't—now is the time to start to work on it to make it just the healthiest and shiniest on which orange blossoms ever rested. If it is oily and stringy, I know a tonic which will quickly give results; or if it is brittle and dry, there is one which will give proper lubrication. There is another for general reconditioning of hair. It is lovely to use between shampoos to "pep up" scalp and hair and relieve a condition of dandruff and scaly scalp. Used properly, these tonics do not interfere with a finger wave, but make it much prettier by giving the needed life to hair.

Perhaps there are a few "silver threads among the gold." I can suggest a very pleasant-to-use shampoo which cleanses, acts as an oil treatment, and tints those straggling hairs to their natural shade. It's not a dye! Heaven forbid that a bride should start her married life with dyed locks! It's a color-conditioning shampoo that brings out shimering highlights and leaves hair soft, silky and altogether befitting the halo which will rest upon it on the wedding day.

There've been days of shopping and trousseau fitting and nights of parties and late hours, during the few strenuous weeks preceding the wedding. An exhilerating, relaxing perfumed bath in a tub teeming with light, effervescent bubbles will do much to relax taut nerves and tired muscles. I have in mind one of the most delicate lilac fragrance.

A "must" to daintiness, of course, is a deodorant. There are many different kinds—delightful kinds—but I've chosen one which really serves three purposes. It is a combination cologne, dusting powder and deodorant, in a bottle which adds to the appearance of the bathroom shelf. Very delicately fragrant, it does not interfere with any other perfume, and leaves a light film much like bath powder except that it will not rub off. It's cooling and absolutely deodorant. Used as a cologne body rub after a bath, it has a very refreshing effect.

An item—a most necessary item—is a sunburn cream. Can you imagine anything worse looking than white satin and orange blossoms worn against parched, red and peeling skin? Or anything more disagreeable than a wedding trip spent nursing blistered shoulders? This is certainly a case where "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." It will be easy on these first few days and weeks of swimming and golf or tennis, to acquire a burn that will last for weeks and weeks. So by all means, there should be a good suntan cream for use before the wedding as well as afterward.

I have in mind a thick lotion cream which is not sticky or greasy, but with which the complexion may be kept lily-white, or tanned to any degree desired, without blistering or burning. It may be used as a powder base when swimming or enjoying summer sports, with the full knowledge that powder will cling and there will be no burning.

And to keep lovely complexion lovely during summer, I would advise the use of a pasteurized cream for cleansing, nourishing and softening, at least once a day, followed by a lotion which is grand for toning and bracing.

Who—whether bride or not—can go through the sizzling days and nights of summer without a cooling cologne, that quick reviver for wilted spirits, nerves and body? There are so many uses for eau de cologne. Dashed over the body after a bath, it emits just that elusive "what-is-it?" fragrance that is tantalizing. When there must be a quick change and there isn't time for a relaxing bath, nothing so picks one up as to sponge the body with cologne. When nights are extremely warm and sleep just won't come, face, throat and wrists sponged with cologne will add a cooling touch that will soothe and lull. I've found one obtainable in three delightful summer odors, and I understand that immediately, a double-sized bottle—a quantity which will last for months—will be available for the usual price of a small bottle.

The bride should have something very special in the way of perfume. I've searched through bottles and flacons and finally come upon one which is just too, too pretty to look at. And the contents are just as grand as the bottle. The name is French, and it takes only one little whiff of the heady, tantalizing odor to know that the perfume is, also. And it's entirely new so far as this country is concerned. Just right for a bride eh?

Lastly, there is that without which no trip is complete—wedding or otherwise—the traveling kit. I've selected one which is just the last word in completeness. It has all the appearance of an overnight bag—is of Morocco leather, with gold-plated lock and key, and a space for the bride's monogram.

The top opens up in three sections. The center is a large mirror and each side folds back into a tray containing a full manicure set. The main section of the kit contains cleansing cream, tissue cream, skin freshener, dewey make-up foundation, and face powder. Then on a little platform in the front, there's mascara, eye shadow and cream rouge—each in a gold-plated case—and an eyebrow pencil. But wait! Raise the platform and there you find cleansing tissue and cotton pads, for removing make-up and applying lotions.

And in the kit there's room for a nighty, tooth-brush and other small items so that there's no need for opening other luggage while traveling. And with the key tucked safely away the lovely bride, who was "Miss" just a few moments before, starts blithely on her honeymoon with "Mr. Only-Man-in-the-World," chuckling because she realizes her well-meaning practical-joker friends have tried without avail to substitute for her jars and bottles, articles which would never give to a bride a dainty appearance.

Fortified and equipped with these luxurious-accessory-necessities, the bride looks her most radiant best. There are no worry-lines in her face for the things forgotten, and not the semblance of neglect or untidiness about her entire make-up. Naturally, the groom has not realized there's any other woman present in the church—nor will there ever be another for him. His "wife" has acquired all the niceties of good grooming that will keep her very delectable and loveable in his eyes.

Whether you are the bride-to-be or her friend, I'll be glad to have you phone me for the names and any further information you desire on these articles mentioned. I'll tell you where they may be purchased and help you in any other way possible in the selection of cosmetics and toiletries. If you do not live in Atlanta, write me for information, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

DICK TRACY

YES, GENTLEMEN, I'M CONVINCED THE TWO "PRINCES" ARE IMPOSTORS — COMMON HOUSE THIEVES AND SWINDLERS - PASSING THEMSELVES OFF AS THE REAL ROYALTY.

PRINCES

THIS SHIRT THE COAST GUARD PICKED UP PROVES IT! THE MESSAGE, ACCORDING TO THE INTERPRETER, SAYS THE REAL PRINCES ARE BEING HELD ABOARD A BOAT SOMEWHERE OFF SHORE.

THE HOAX MUST NOT BE REVEALED UNTIL THE REAL PRINCES HAVE BEEN RESCUED, OTHERWISE THEY MAY BE KILLED.

YES! EVEN THE BOVANIAN GOVERNMENT MUST NOT KNOW THE REAL FACTS.

COMMANDER, OUR NEXT STEP IS TO COOPERATE WITH YOUR COAST GUARD CREWS TO LOCATE THAT PRISON BOAT.

RIGHT.

MEANWHILE, THE PRISON BOAT HAS ALREADY RUN INTO TROUBLE.

QUICK! LIE DOWN IN THAT TANK AND PUT THESE RUBBER HOSES IN YOUR MOUTHS.

WE'RE COMING ABOARD. WE WANT TO LOOK YOU OVER.

YOU CAN'T BOARD US - WE'RE OUTSIDE THE TWELVE-MILE LIMIT.

CG 210

YEAH! WELL, WE'RE SEARCHING YOUR BOAT. YOU LOOK SUSPICIOUS - BEEN SETTING OUT HERE FOR OVER A WEEK.

LISTEN, IF WE WERE SMUGGLERS WE'D HAVE A FAST OUTFIT. WHY, THIS TUB COULDN'T OUTRUN THE OLD ROBERT E. LEE.

OKAY. LIE STILL AND BREATHE THROUGH THOSE HOSES OR YOU'LL DROWN. HERE COMES THE BILGE WATER.

I'LL PUT IN THIS CRANK CASE OIL.. SO THE WATER WON'T BE TRANSPARENT.

GET OFF YOUR MASK - HERE THEY ARE!

HM, IT'S A SCREWY LOOKING OUTFIT IF YOU ASK ME. WHAT DO YOU CALL THAT?

YOUR HIGHNESS, YOUR VALET IS HERE.

OH, YES, HERE IS OUR LAUNDRY.

AS THE PRINCES' VALET MAKES HIS WAY TOWARD HIS CAR, WITH THE BAGS OF "LAUNDRY"

YE GODS! THESE BABIES MUST WEIGH A HUNDRED POUNDS APIECE. THIS IS SOME HAUL.

OH BOY, I JUST MADE IT.

"WE HAVE TO SHUT DOWN, MEN . . . COME BACK IN ABOUT 50 YEARS . . ."

"I SAT THROUGH A TRIPLE FEATURE LAST NIGHT."

"AREN'T YOU EVER BOTHERED BY SOUVENIR HUNTERS, DUKE?"

"SHALL WE JUST REGISTER OR DO WE GET BRANDED?"

"PSHAW! . . . I COULD HAVE WON THIS CONTEST WITH ONE LEG TIED BEHIND ME . . ."

Little Orphan Annie

WHEN DONA DOLORES WAS SIX, A TALL STRANGER SOUGHT SHELTER FROM HER PARENTS--THAT NIGHT BANDITS CAME TO SACK THE HACIENDA---MANY DIED THAT NIGHT, BUT THE STRANGER SAVED HER PARENTS AND DROVE OFF THE BANDITS---NEXT MORNING HE DEPARTED NAMELESS, ALONE BUT FOR HIS DONKEY-

HE SAVED YOUR FOLKS FROM BEIN' SHOT AGAINST A WALL, AND HE RAN THOSE BANDITS OUT O' GAS, YET HE WOULDN'T TAKE ANY REWARD OR EVEN TELL HIS NAME?

NO, MY LITTLE ONE- HE SAID HE WISHED BUT ONE THING-

HE SAID A KISS FROM THE LITTLE SIX-YEAR-OLD DONA DOLORES WOULD BE HIS REWARD--- AH, WHEREVER HE IS HE HAS FORGOTTEN-

HE SURE MUST HAVE BEEN A REAL GUY-- AND AWFUL BRAVE-

YES, ANNIE - BRAVE- I WAS ONLY SIX THEN- THE YEARS BRING CHANGES--- BUT I WOULD KNOW HIM AMONG A MILLION---ALWAYS-

HEY- THEY'RE BRINGIN' THAT OLD PROSPECTOR UP FOR AXEL TO LOOK OVER-

SO- THIS IS THE ONE WHO WANDERS NEAR OUR HACIENDA, EH? SPEAK- WHO ARE YOU?

HE ONLY BABBLES- PERHAPS HE IS DAFT-

POSSIBLY THE SO STRONG SUN TOUCHES THE BRAIN-

OH, WELL- WHAT MATTER- HE IS HARMLESS, BUT WE TAKE NO CHANCES- REMOVE HIM TO SOME REMOTE CANYON AND DISPOSE OF HIM-

AS YOU ORDER, MASTER-

COME ALONG, YOU-

WAIT! YOU MUST NOT HAVE HIM SHOT!

EH? HO-O-O? SO DONA DOLORES NOW GIVES THE ORDERS, EH?

OR IS IT THAT IN THIS ONE YOU RECOGNIZE A FRIEND? NO- BUT PERHAPS THE HEART IS SOFT AFTER ALL-- I DO NOT LIKE TO SEE SUCH WEAKNESS-

NO! NO! FRIEND? THAT MANGY ONE? BAH! SOFT HEART? ME? HA! HA!

BUT WHY DO YOU NOT OBSERVE? SEE? IN HIS PALSIED HAND- THE LITTLE SACK WHICH HE CLUTCHES--

EH? HM-M-- YES- YOU INDEED HAVE THE SHARP EYE-- HO! HAND ME THAT SACK--

DRAGONS OF DEATH! CAN IT BE? IT IS! HE HAS DISCOVERED PLATINUM! BUT WHERE?

5-28-39

HO! SINCE HE SEEMS TO HAVE MADE SUCH A CONQUEST OF YOU, YOU NURSE HIM BACK TO SANITY--- AND DO NOT FAIL--- I MUST LEARN THE SECRET HE HOLDS--

TAKE HIM TO MY QUARTERS AND SEE TO IT WE ARE LEFT IN PEACE-
